CRAZED STEEL WORKER KILLS SEVEN PERSONS

Youngstown (O.) Slayer and Two Others Wounded in Encounter With Police.

By the Associated Press.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Sept. 3.—Tony de Capua, 42 years old, a steel worker, apparently crazed by brooding over lack of work, today shot and killed his wife, wounded his son's wife and killed six children of the two families.

Police answering a call from neighbors found De Capua standing outside his home. De Capua at once opened fire on them. In the ensuing exchange of shots, De Capua, Patrolman Leo Tyrell and an unidentified pedestrian were wounded.

The police report that the shooting followed a violent quarrel between De Capua and his wife. Their children were drawn into the quarrel. Suddenly De Capua produced a revolver and began firing. The bodies of his victims were found scattered throughout the house, indicating that he pursued most of them about the place. The body of one girl was found on a stairway leading outdoors. She had just failed in an attempt to escape.

The dead are: Mrs. Mary de Capua, Tony's wife, 24 years old; Anna, 6; Elizabeth, 11, and Catherine, 2 months, his daughters; Marie, 3 years old; Junior, 14 months, and May, 4 months, his grandchildren.

At the hospital De Capua said he had been out of work for several weeks, had quarreled with his wife over money matters, and finally had decided that he would "get rid of them all."

He said he had intended to kill himself, but his pistol jammed. Throughout his statement De Capua reiterated the hope that he would die. The babies he killed as they slept.

EVANGELIST SAYS GIRL CONFESSED

Bride of Fire Chief Denies She Killed Father or That She Told Anyone She Did It.

By the Associated Press.

REIDSVILLE, N. C., Sept. 3.—Arrested as a result of information furnished police by an evangelist, Mrs. Gatlin, 20 years old, and a bride of two months, is in jail here, charged with the murder of her father, J. Smith Petty.

Petty, at one time an overseer in a local cotton mill, has been missing more than a year. Today a body was found buried in the basement of his former home. It was declared by Sheriff G. F. Smith to be that of Petty.

Two weeks ago, the Rev. Thomas F. Pardue informed the authorities that a young woman had come to him after one of his revival meetings and confessed slaying her father and disposing of his body. The evangelist could give no clew, however, as to the whereabouts of the body.

Found Under Coal Pile.

For days a hunt was carried on and yesterday Sheriff Smith and a force of deputies began digging in the cellar of the house occupied until last March by the Petty family. Until noon today they found nothing, then discovered the body under a coal pile.

Medical examination disclosed that death had been caused by a blow on the back of the head, which crushed the skull, Coroner Wharton said. He immediately summoned a jury and after a brief hearing Mrs. Gatlin was ordered held on a charge of first-degree murder.

Denies She Confessed.

In jail, the young bride, whose husband, Eugene S. Gatlin, is chief of the Reidsville Fire Department, appeared unworried by the charge against her.

"I did not kill my father," she said, "neither did I ever tell anyone I did so."

She said she always believed that her father had left home as he often had done before, and was still alive.

ILLINOIS MINERS AND OWNERS TO CONFER AGAIN WEDNESDAY

Session Called in Chicago as Coal Field Shut-Down Enters Sixth Month.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 3.—Illinois coal miners and operators will convene in a joint conference at 11 o'clock next Wednesday morning in Chicago.

Notification calling the executive board of District No. 12, United Mine Workers of America, and members of the scale committee to the conference was sent out this afternoon from the office of President Harry Fishwick, chief of Illinois miners. President Fishwick is in Chicago. The coal mine shutdown in Illinois has entered its sixth month.

Rice Miller of Hillsboro, president of the Illinois Operators' Association, said that he had been in conference with President Fishwick in Chicago within the last two days and the joint conference was agreed on.

NAVY HOLDS SHIP FOR RACER

Scout Cruiser Prepares to Carry Lieut. Williams to Schneider Contests.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—The Navy Department has issued formal orders to the scout cruiser Trenton, at Hampton Roads, Va., to hold in readiness to take Lieut. Alford J. Williams and his racing seaplane to Venice for the Schneider Cup Race.

Pending the outcome of the official speed tests of Lieut. Williams' plane, the plan of the Navy Department is to "proceed as though the cruiser will be sent." The final decision will be made after the Williams plane demonstrates it has a chance to eclipse the present seaplane speed record of 258 miles an hour. Four days remain for Lieut. Williams to make the official speed flights and get his plane on board the cruiser. Navigability and other tests required under the rules for the Schneider race occur two days before the event itself, Sept. 25.

WORLD FLYERS START 710-MILE TRIP TO INDIA

Brock and Schlee Take Off After Spending Night in Persian Town, Reached by Hop From Bagdad.

KARACHI, British India, Sept. 4 (Sunday).—The monoplane, Pride of Detroit, took off from Bender Abbas, Persia, for Karachi, at 7:30 o'clock this (Sunday) morning (8:00 p. m. Saturday, St. Louis time). The distance is 710 miles.

The American 'round-the-world plane, with William S. Brock and Edward F. Schlee aboard, arrived at Bender Abbas yesterday afternoon from Bagdad, a distance of 885 miles. They were tired and thirsty after the hop, which required 10 hours, but announced their intention of hopping off at dawn after a night's rest.

Just a week after they took the air at Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, the American round-the-world flyers found themselves last night at Bender Abbas, Persia, Bunder Abbas or Bandar Abbas, as it is variously called, is a little seaport on the Persian Gulf, at the most northerly point of the Strait of Ormuz. It was near there that the two British airmen, Lieut. C. R. Carr and M. S. Gillman of the Royal Air Service, fell last May in an attempted nonstop flight from England to India.

Bender Abbas, by the route covered by Brock and Schlee, is approximately 6000 miles from Harbor Grace. The aviators, who felt the chill of the cold winds and fog off Newfoundland, from now on will have to give their best attention to combating fierce heat, sand storms and monsoons. Bender Abbas is described as a dirty town, hot and unhealthful.

Many valuable hours were lost in Turkey, in the absence of permission to fly over Turkish soil, and even when permission was granted, the airmen, by being obliged to make a long detour, were delayed much further.

One fortunate circumstance is that their plane, Pride of Detroit, is reported to be in fine condition. Thus far it has needed little attention and no adjustments. It has still to prove its worth, however, for the airmen have many miles to fly before reaching Tokio, where it is possible they will install a new motor. They have about 16,000 miles of airways yet to traverse.

Col. Easterwood Wants World Flyers in His Contest.

By the Associated Press.

DALLAS, Tex., Sept. 3.—Col. W. E. Easterwood, who has offered a $25,000 prize for a Dallas-Hongkong four-stop flight, today asked William S. Brock and Edward F. Schlee, American round-the-world flyers, to enter the contest from the opposite direction. He sent a cablegram to the airmen on the Pride of Detroit at Calcutta, India, asking them to fly from Hongkong to Dallas.

Col. Easterwood said Schlee and Brock had asked for and received application blanks to enter the Dallas-Hongkong attempt before they left Detroit, and that he believed they would accept his offer today.

CHICAGO MOVIE LOCKOUT ENDED BY COMPROMISE

Theaters, Closed for Week, to Reopen Today — Employes and Exhibitors Reach Agreement.

MAYOR THOMPSON ACTS AS MEDIATOR

Calls Operators to Office and Informs Them Public Demands Entertainment Sunday and Labor Day.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 3.—Chicago movies will begin to move again tomorrow after approximately 400 motion picture shows and vaudeville houses had been closed since last Monday because one theater wanted to employ two operators and the union insisted that it employ four.

Agreement to end the strike and lockout was reached late today in the offices of Mayor Thompson, where representatives of exhibitors, machine operators and stage hands met, after the Mayor had announced he represented the public which wanted movies over Sunday and Labor Day.

The terms of settlement were not divulged. Mayor Thompson, however, said that "the final settlement was a compromise."

15,000 Were Idle for Week.

The strike and lockout was estimated to have thrown 15,000 theater employes out of work for most of a week, to have tied up theatrical investments of upward of $75,000,000; closed 400 theaters; resulted in lost receipts of more than $1,000,000, and forced about 1,000,000 movie fans to seek some other form of diversion for a week.

The trouble started when the Belmont theater decided to dispense with two of its four machine operators. The union insisted that the theater's contract called for employing four men.

The Operators' Union called machine operators of all Orpheum Circuit Theaters, with which the Belmont is affiliated, out on strike Monday, and the exhibitors retaliated with a lockout, closing upward of 400 movie and vaudeville houses.

During the week the contract of of the stage hands expired and they joined forces with the operators. The dispute with operators and stage hands was reported settled today, but the musicians' union contract expires Monday, although negotiations for a new contract are said already to be under way.

Theaters Reopen Today.

A few theaters operated tonight, but most of them were included among the handful that did not close. The exhibitors' organization announced that all the theaters belonging to the association would reopen tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock when matinee performances begin. It was explained that films could not be distributed before that time and as a result the large downtown houses tonight remained dark.

It also was revealed that the exhibitors will reopen without knowing the terms of the agreement that has been reached. Officers of the exhibitors' organization said they would inform the exhibitors of the terms at a meeting next Tuesday.

It is reported unofficially that the stage hands will receive an increase in wages of between 7 and 8 per cent, representing three-fourths of what they asked for. The union withdrew its request that apprentices receive an increase.

The operators, it was reported, get a fulfillment of existing contracts. The two operators at the Belmont Theater over whom the whole row started, are to receive full pay until next January when the operators' agreement expires and their status will be renewed again.

LESS WORK IF ATOM IS SPLIT

London Professor Says It Will Mean Universal Leisure.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 3.—In half a century or so hardly anyone will have any work to do, says Dr. Percy Buck, professor of music in the University of London.

"In 50 years from now every human being will have a vast amount of leisure on his hands," explained Dr. Buck, to the university teachers attending the summer vacation lecture course. "If once the atom is split—and that is bound to happen in a certain number of years —there will be no need for coal, gas, electric light, steam or anything else like that. Think of it! We will be able to run a train from London to Edinburgh for half a penny, and to light the whole of London or New York for less than a penny."

FOUR GIRLS DROWN IN RIVER WHEN THEIR BOAT CAPSIZES

Members of Camp Near Caldwell, N. J., Were on Stream Swollen by Rains.

By the Associated Press.

CALDWELL, N. J., Sept. 3.—Four girls, from 15 to 20 years old, were drowned in the Passaic River at Pine Brook, near here, late today, when their boat capsized in the stream, swollen by recent rains. Four other boats were in the party, but turned back when the current became menacing.

The victims, who were spending their vacations at Bethany Community Camp at Roseland, were: Kathryne Azzarra, 20, Newark; Anna Lynch, 16, Newark; Jane Harak, 15, Irvington; Cornelia J. Haitsma, Newark.

Antoinette Roseferider, 16, of Newark, who was rowing the boat, managed to struggel ashore. She had disregarded warnings of friends to turn back.

It was said some of the other girls could swim, but the swirling water, submerged trees and a low bridge under which they were swept gave them no chance.

DOG RACING CAPTURES LONDON, 100,000 AT SOME CONTESTS

Huge Increase in Night Life Habitues Forces Eating Places to Add to Meal Schedule.

By the Associated Press

LONDON, Sept. 3.—Greyhound racing has captured the fancy of all London. At White City an evening's contest often is witnessed by from 80,000 to 100,000 persons.

The increase in night life activities has forced managers of eating places to rearrange their schedule of meals. Theater goers are served around 6:30 p. m. before going to the play. Leisurely dancers appear from 8:30 p. m. or later. After the dancers come the "dog" dinners, served after the races and before the after-theater crowds begin to appear.

CARRIED FAMILY IN PLANE

Pilot Moving From Nebraska to Tennessee Also Took Helper.

By the Associated Press.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 3.—"Flying Family" arrived here today, piloted by the husband and father, Earl Barnes, a commercial aviator.

Barnes, who flew the airplane from which Col. Charles Lindbergh made his first parachute jump in 1922, was engaged to deliver a plane from Wichita, Kan., to Nashville.

The job carried with it one as pilot for the Nashville Air Transport Corporation, and so Barnes shipped his household goods by rail and loaded his wife, his 6-year-old son, Earl Jr., his 4-year-old daughter, Helen and Ole Eckberg, a mechanic on the passenger-carrying craft. The trip was made from Holdredge, Neb., his home in five days. Traveling by easy stages, Barnes made his last hop from Carmi, Ill., 165 miles to Nashville, this morning.

RODEO RIDER KILLED WITH DAGGER IN AUTO

Unidentified Slayer of "Slim" Harris in Oregon Escapes in Darkness.

By the Associated Press.

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore., Sept. 3.—"Slim" Harris, noted Pendleton roundup rider and the feature performer of many rodeos, was slain last night in Lakeview, Ore., by an unidentified assailant, who plunged a dagger through Harris' heart, it was learned here today.

The assailant leaped to the running board of Harris' automobile, and after the attack fled into the darkness. Officers said they expected the arrest of a suspect soon.

The killing occurred as Harris with his wife was driving from the rodeo grounds where he had been attending to his horses. So sudden was the attack that Mrs. Harris did not know her husband had been stabbed. The only description she could give of the assailant was that he was a slim man of medium build.

The car swerved to one side and crashed into a fence.

LAME BOY INVENTOR DIES WHEN HIS DEVICE BLOWS UP

Parents of Paralyzed 14-Year-Old Had Encouraged Experiments He Performed.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—For four years Joseph Makuk, 14 years old, had been bedridden in his home in Perth Amboy, N. J., the muscles of his legs paralyzed by rheumatism.

At first he lay still and listened wistfully to shouts of boys at play in the street below. But not for long. His active mind and boyish enthusiasm would brook no restraint. Books interested him little; practical things much.

He asked his father to get him a few electric batteries. Soon he learned all about them. Then he asked for various chemicals. Experimenting with elecricity and chemicals he passed the long days. He dreamed of becoming some day a great inventor. He worked with the patience of a scientist.

His parents understood little of what the boy was doing, but they encouraged him in his experimental work. The work culminated a few days ago in his construction of a small chemical-electrical device which still remains a mystery to his parents. Externally it was a small metal box.

Alone in his room yesterday he connected the box by wires with three small flashlight batteries. His parents heard an explosion. Hurrying upstairs, they found him dead. His invention had exploded. A flying piece of metal had penetrated his heart.

ROME FLYERS GO TO MAINE TO TAKE OFF FOR EUROPE

Old Glory's Pilots, Tired of Waiting for Favorable Wind at New York, Fly to Old Orchard.

HEAD WINDS HALT BRITISH AIRMAN

Capt. Courtney Forced to Land in Spain — Royal Windsor at Scarboro, Me., Detained by Weather.

By the Associated Press.

OLD ORCHARD, Me., Sept. 3.—Sliding out of the gathering dusk into the glare of a fire engine searchlight and two hastily constructed bonfires, the monoplane, Old Glory, settled gracefully tonight on Old Orchard Beach, a three-mile runway built by nature from which J. D. Hill and Lloyd Bertaud hope to hop off tomorrow afternoon on their long-delayed flight to Rome.

Five hundred persons were gathered on the sands when the roar of the motor heralded the giant plane's approach. Barely discernble, the plane circled over the beach three times before dropping to the beach.

Capt. Harry M. Jones, commercial flyer, near whose hangars the Old Glory landed, greeted Hill and Bertaud as they stepped from their plane, followed by their companions on their flight from Roosevelt Field, Ray Moorehouse, radio operator; Phil Payne, New York newspaperman, and Capt. Eric Denishan, motor expert and former member of the Royal Flying Corps.

Pleased by Plane's Performance.

Hill and Bertaud, who will make the flight to Rome, were enthusiastic over their plane's performance on the trip up from New York and over the huge natural runway here.

The flight from New York was without incident, they said, and the landing here was easy, despite the darkness and unfamiliar ground.

The pilots went immediately to their hotel for dinner. The Old Glory was far too big for any hangar on the beach, but workmen, hastily summoned by Capt. Jones, constructed a temporary runway over the loose sand far above high-tide mark. The plane was rolled up the beach and made fast to boards for the night.

Oil and Gasoline Sent.

Half the gasoline supply of the plane was drained off before the take-off at Roosevelt Field this afternoon and was being rushed to Old Orchard tonight, together with 70 gallons of oil which was discarded to help enable the plane to rise from the New York field, where rain, mud and cross-winds have held it landbound for weeks.

Only a stiff cross-wind, which in this case would be from the east, can prevent the Old Glory's hop-off tomorrow. The beach itself, with the tide low, forms a runway, giving the plane three generous miles in which to lift itself and its heavy load of fuel, while the run can be made from either end, or quartering across the sands, depending on the direction of the wind.

The exact time planned for the Old Glory's departure could not be ascertained tonight, as the pilots themselves could set no more definite hour than "some time during the afternoon."

Old Glory Tires of Waiting for a Wind at New York.

By the Associated Press.

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., Sept. 3.—The monoplane Old Glory took off this afternoon at 5:47 o'clock, Eastern daylight time (3:47 p. m. St. Louis time) for Old Orchard Me., where co-pilots J. D. Hill and Lloyd Bertaud hope to start their proposed nonstop flight to Rome as soon as weather conditions permit.

Announcement that the plans for Old Glory's flight had been altered, to permit the [illegible] hop to Old Orchard—instead of a non-stop jump to Rome—was made shortly after 5 p. m. by Philip Payne, who is directing the flight for William Randolph Hearst, backer.

In explaining the reason for the hop to Old Orchard Payne said he had been informed by Harry Jones, operator of an airport there, that conditions at the Maine beach were perfect for a take-off for Rome. The Old Glory, which will have a total load of about 12,500 pounds when she leaves for Europe, would be provided with a two or three-mile runway, Jones said. The Roosevelt field runway is seven-

TWO SHIPS REPORT CLEWS IN HUNT FOR FLYING PRINCESS

One Vessel Saw Plane About 900 Miles Off Irish Coast — Another Saw White Light at Sea.

WIDE SEARCH BEGINS ON LAND AND OCEAN

Little Credence Given to Theory That St. Raphael Landed on Unpopulated Section of Shore.

By the Associated Press.

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept. 3.—Extensive search on land and sea was under way today for the England-to-Canada monoplane, the St. Raphael, with Princess Lowenstein-Wertheim, Capt. Leslie Hamilton and Col. Frederick F. Minchin aboard.

The Dutch steamer Blijdendijk reported that at 6 a. m., Thursday, Greenwich mean time (midnight Wednesday, St. Louis time), its lookout had sighted a white light, probably from a plane, about 400 miles east southeast of New York.

The Standard Oil steamer Josiah Macy reported sighting a plane, at 9:44 p. m., Greenwich mean time (3:44 p. m., St. Louis time, Wednesday), 900 or 1000 miles off the Irish coast.

Rumor of Labrador Landing.

Rumors received at St. John's, N. F., that the St. Raphael had been sighted off Labrador led the Government to order all wireless stations, lighthouses, customs and other officials to institute a general search and to report immediately if anything is discovered to substantiate the reports.

Minister of Fisheries Windsor, who is familiar with the lonely Labrador coast, said he feared that unless the plane descended immediately on reaching the coast, the situation of the flyers would be hopeless. He pointed out that the wilderness of the interior is inhabited only by solitary trappers and a few wandering bands of Indians. Colonial Secretary Bennett is directing the Government investigation of the reports.

The St. Raphael hopped off at Upavon, England, 20 miles southeast of Bristol, Wednesday morning (7:32 a. m. Bristol time, 12:32 a. m. St. Louis time) for Ottawa, Canada, 2920 miles away.

It is approximately 2270 miles between Upavon and Newfoundland and 650 miles more to Ottawa.

Probably Forced Down at Sea.

While some belief was expressed that the plane might have been forced down in some isolated spot in Newfoundland or Eastern Canada, aviation authorities at Ottawa and in London said they thought the plane had been forced down at sea.

Tracing every possibility, ships at sea and along the eastern Canadian coast, airplanes and landsmen were enlisted in a hunt that extended from Ottawa to the sea and from the coast across the ocean to England.

John A. Wilson, director of civilian aviation for the Canadian Air Board, said the search would be slow because of the vast region to be covered. He also said employment of aircraft in the search must be restricted because of the limited number of landing fields in the great stretches of territory in Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Eastern Quebec.

Forest Rangers Join Search.

All forest rangers on the north shore of the St. Lawrence River were ordered today to inaugurate a day and night search for the St. Raphael. The order followed rumors that the plane had been sighted off the Labrador coast.

The Beothic, a Canadian Government patrol ship, now returning from the Canadian Arctic archipelago, was ordered to watch during the remainder of its voyage to Sydney, N. S., for signs of the plane.

The naval communications station at Boston broadcast to all vessels off Boston and along the northeastern Atlantic Coast a request to keep a lookout for the monoplane.

Captain John H. Boulman of the White Star liner Arabic before sailing from New York for Europe early this morning said special lookouts would supplement the regular watch in an effort to sight the flyers or their plane.

U. S. Willing to Co-operate.

Acting Secretar. Warner of the Navy at Washington said lack of information on the St. Raphael made it practically impossible for the American Government to search for the flyers, but he indicated that if either British or Canadian authorities should ask for assistance the navy would be ready to help.

No definite word of the plane has been received since it was sighted Wednesday off the Irish coast, just before it headed out across the Atlantic in the face of rain, fog and head winds.

The estimated flying period allowed the St. Raphael on the basis of its fuel supply expired at 9:32 o'clock Thursday night, Eastern Standard time (8:32 p. m. St. Louis time), 44 hours after the take-off. Capt. Hamilton had said he would make the trip in 37 hours.

Second Ship Over Route Fails to Report Plane.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—No mention of any plane winging westward was made by the steamer Gripsholm, traveling the course over which the St. Raphael was flying, in a radio weather report to the local weather bureau.

The Gripsholm was about 200 miles west of the Standard Oil ship, Josiah Macy, when that ship reported sighting a plane at 9:44 (Greenwich mean time) Wednesday night about 1000 miles off the Irish coast. The Gripsholm now is in the vicinity of Sable Island.

Congress Could Stop Hazardous Flights, MacCracken Believes.

By the Associated Press.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 3.—Congress by the simple step of authorizing the Secretary of Commerce to license pilots and planes can provide a means of regulating trans-Atlantic traffic as well as interstate and intrastate flying of all kinds, in the opinion of William P. MacCracken Jr. of Chicago, secretary of the Aeronautical Bureau of the Department of Commerce.

Referring to the action of the American Bar Association in advocating the enlargement of the powers of the Secretary, MacCracken said the present authority of the department was restricted to commercial aviation. The licensing system, he believes, will be sufficient to check attempted flights of extra hazardous nature and also to protect passengers of airplanes now being taken up by pilots of private craft in many sections of the country.

Sea Captain Thinks Flyers May Have Landed in Labrador.

By the Associated Press.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Sept. 3.—The English trans-Atlantic plane, St. Raphael, may have landed safely on the Labrador coast, Capt. Abraham Kean, commodore of the Newfoundland sealing fleet, said today after studying a report that the plane had been sighted by the British tanker, Josiah Macy, 900 miles off the Irish coast Wednesday night.

Capt. Kean, who has been sealing and fishing off Labrador 50 years, said that if the plane continued on its course as far as Labrador it would first have sighted some vessels of the Newfoundland cod fishing fleet now operating there in fine weather. The flyers would see settlers' cottages dotted along the coast singly or in groups.

The pilot would have been able to identify his position, the Captain said, and if short of fuel would have landed for an additional supply. If this occurred at a point remote from a wireless station, a week might elapse before news reached such a station and ultimately the outside world.

If the weather was foggy, Capt. Kean said, the situation of the flyers would be desperate. If they penetrated into the interior of Labrador and were forced to descend they would find the unpeopled wilderness in which Leonidas Hubbard, an American explorer, perished of starvaton 25 years ago.

Rome Flyers Go to Maine, Plan to Hop Off Today

eighths of a mile long and a west wind would be necessary to help the plane take the air with its maximum load.

Payne accompanied Hill and Bertaud as a passenger on the hop to Old Orchard. Two other passengers were carried also—Capt. Eric Densham, expert from the Bristol Jupiter factory, which supplied the plane's motor, and Ray Morehouse, radio engineer.

A gathering of 5000 persons at the field, ignorant of the sudden change in plans, cheered wildly as the great Fokker monoplane shook itself free from the rain-softened field, where it had been landlocked for weeks. The crowds believed that the Old Glory's flight to Rome had begun.

The plane carried 450 gallons of gasoline, the other 588 gallons, which completed its full supply, having been drawn off earlier this afternoon. Payne told reporters that a supply of the special gasoline needed for the 450 horsepower motor would be rushed to Old Orchard by motor truck tonight.

Hill and Bertaud said they expected to land at Old Orchard about 8 p. m.

ROYAL WINDSOR AT SCARBORO, ME.

By the Associated Press.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 3.—The monoplane Royal Windsor in which C. A. "Duke" Schiller and Phil Wood hopped to make a non-stop flight from Windsor, Ont., to Windsor, England, was safely stored tonight in Portland airport after making the 250-mile flight in two hours and a quarter from St. Gregoire, Quebec.

The aviators said they had planned to land here, when they took off this afternoon at 2:35 p. m. (12:35 p. m. St. Louis time), having received favorable reports of weather conditions here and would continue their flight tomorrow, or at the earliest opportunity.

They located by its markings the airport now under construction at Scarboro, three miles from this city and, descending from the high altitude at which they had been flying most of the way, landed safely and easily. Conditions were not what they had expected, however. They soon found their wheels sinking into the soft ground of the rain-soaked field, and an attempted flight showed they would be unable to take to the air again with their 3500-pound cargo, which includes 400 gallons of gasoline. Before the plane came to a stop she cruised through wet mud, which was splashed even to the top of her wings.

Then they learned for the first time about the runway furnished by several miles of hard beach at Old Orchard, and decided to make that place their point of departure tomorrow. After covering the engine and placing two watchmen to guard the plane, they went to Portland to spend the night.

Tomorrow they will unload most of their cargo, fly to Old Orchard, reload and start from there when weather permits.

WHALE FORCED TO LAND IN SPAIN

By the Associated Press.

CORUNNA, Spain, Sept. 3.—The flying boat Whale, piloted by Capt. F. T. Courtney, which set out from Plymouth, England, at 6:26 a. m. today (11:26 p. m. yesterday St. Louis time), landed this afternoon in a dangerous place on the Galician coast near Corunna. Help was sent to the aviators and they were brought here.

The airmen exchanged greetings with the authorities, were acclaimed by thousands of persons and were served with food.

The Mayor of Courrna offered the aid of the municipality, if necessary, and Spanish naval and army officers volunteered all help to the flyers. The air visitors were very tired and went to sleep soon after their arrival.

The machine was not damaged in its descent and all its occupants were in good spirits. They found the winds so strong that they were not able to make headway across the Atlantic and considered it advisable to reach land. They plan to resume their flight Monday.

The first stop planned for the Whale was at Horta in the Azores Islands, 1200 miles from England.

Dublin-Philadelphia Jump in Prospect for Today.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 3. — Capt. R. H. Macintosh, who plans to start from Dublin to Philadelphia in the Fokker plane Princess Xenia today has applied for entry as a contender for the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin's $25,000 prize, offered for the first non-stop flight from a European capital to this city.

The aviation committee of the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce, which will have charge of the flight arrangements, has ruled that the non-stop hop to Philadelphia "may start from any point in Europe."

Pilots of Sir John Carling Hope to Get Away Today.

By the Associated Press.

CARIBOU, Me., Sept. 3.—Capt. Terry Tully and Lieut. James Medcalf announced tonight that they would hop off for Harbor Grace, N. F., preparatory to flying to London, England, tomorrow morning, if weather permitted.

A heavy rainstorm tonight dimmed their hopes of making the final leg of their hop to the ocean's edge.

Steady streams of curious country folk visited Caribou today, and made the six-mile trip to the township of Washburn, where the plane landed. The Sir John Carling, roped off in the center of a rain-soaked field, was guarded by a State police officer and six members of the local Boy Scout troop. Five other scouts stood guard throughout the night.

The pilots of the plane visited the field this morning, and after telephoning Harbor Grace definitely decided to postpone any flight until the Newfoundland weather authorities advised a start.

Thanks for courtesies extended by the Caribou authorities were received here today from the Carling interests in London, Ont.

PILOT KILLED WHEN EXPRESS PLANE FALLS

Missing Boston-New York Machine Crashed Near East Willington, Conn.

By the Associated Press.

STAFFORD, Conn., Sept. 3.—E. G. Cline, veteran flyer in the air mail and express service on the Boston-New York route, lost his life early today when his plane crashed in the Moose Meadows section of East Willington. The plane was entirely demolished but searchers who found the body late in the afternoon salvaged the six bags of mail matter and the express parcels which were being carried.

The plane came down on the farm of John Hitsky whose family heard the roar of a motor overhead at quarter of 1 o'clock this morning and then noticed that the noise suddenly stopped. Some of the family went out doors but there was no sound of a plane and all went back to bed.

One of Hitsky's sons was in Hartford today when he heard that an express plane was missing. He returned to the farm and found the plane and the dead pilot. The searchers had to cut their way to the plane through the underbrush.

The plane was in a heavy growth of trees and underbrush on the side of a rocky hill. It had broken off short a tree a foot in diameter in crashing. The fusellage had turned over and pilot Cline was crushed under it. The motor was thrown off to one side about 50 feet.

Cline left Boston last night to inaugurate the first carriage of express for the American Express Co. from Boston to New York and his route called for a stop at Brainerd Field, Hartford.

MURDER IN MISSOURI LINKED WITH TRIO ROUTED IN WICHITA

Robbers, Who Fought Kansas Police, Killed Man at Southwest City, Mo., Report Says.

By the Associated Press.

WICHITA, Kan., Sept. 3.—Circumstantial evidence linking the bandit trio here this week with the slaying of W. H. Hatfield of Southwest City, Mo., was being investigated here today by Sedgwick County officers.

Hatfield, according to information received here, was slain Aug. 9. His son, G. E. Hatfield, has written Deputy Sheriff Dan Dwyer that evidence at Southwest City points to the bandit trio as the slayers. Dwyer is investigating.

A small sedan, wrecked here by the bandits after they engaged in a pistol fight with two policemen early Monday morning has been claimed by Kenneth Prader of Seneca, Mo. The car was stolen at Seneca a few days after the Hatfield slaying. Seneca is near Southwest City.

Dwyer is not expected to question the sole survivor of the trio, Charles Stalcup, until additional facts are learned here. Stalcup already is charged with first-degree murder for the slaying of J. E. Marshall, one of the two policemen who accosted the trio as they sped through the city shortly after an ice plant robbery at Newton, near here. Stalcup told officers the gang committed the robbery.

The two other members of the trio are dead. One, Herman Barker, committed suicide after the battle and the other, Porter Meeks, was shot and killed three days later when he resisted arrest.

Among the subjects listed for consideration are the agricultural situation, Mississippi flood control, tax reduction, Federal water power policy, and the merchant marine.

The meeting will be the first of its kind to be held in the Middle West. Preparations are under way for a study of the flood situation in the Mississippi Valley. A special committee has been designated to consider the subject and to prepare recommendations looking to the adoption of a definite policy of flood control.

COLUMBUS, KY., MOVES AS RESULT OF FLOOD

Transfer of Houses to Bluffs, Beyond Mississippi's Reach, Begun.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, Ky., Sept. 3.—After a century and a half the village of Columbus began moving out of reach of the turbulent Mississippi. The frame house of Charles Mays, on Kentucky street was the first to be moved to the new site on the bluffs half a mile from the river. Plans have been perfected for moving 39 other houses. Some will be razed, the usable material salvaged and the dwellings reconstructed. The removal of the towns is part of the rehabilitation program of the American Red Cross, which contributed $50,000 toward the work here. Another $50,000 will be necessary to complete the removal.

Last April the head waters of the flood swept aside the private levee and put the town from 10 to 15 feet under water. Ten houses were washed away. Subsequent floods inundated the town and when the final flood had passed, the current had changed and caused the banks to cave in, wrecking an old hotel and several houses. With little prospect of replacing the broken levee the decision to move was made.

The Red Cross purchased 80 acres of land as the first section of the new site of Columbus. This property, according to F. M. Rust, Red Cross relief director will be deeded to the city. As residents leave the old Columbus and their homes are moved or torn down, they deed their lots to the city with the stipulation that they are not to be used for residential purposes again. In lieu of the property surrendered, the city deeds them a lot in the new town.

Streets have been constructed on the bluff where ancestors of the present inhabitants had hoped to see the capitol of the United tSates. A large spring supplies water pending the completion of an eight-inch well. Sewers and water pipe lines have been planned for the new town and in time a modern town will replace the old village.

hamber of Commerce Proceeding With Independent Program—Expert Is Making Survey.

The Municipal Airport Plan and Scope Committee appointed yesterday by Mayor Miller will meet for the first time Wednesday in the Mayor's office at the city hall to prepare the task of selecting an airport site and outlining a plan to raise funds for its purchase.

Mayor Miller, who had stated earlier in the week upon his return from a vacation, that he would not recommend the purchase of an airport because he could not see how the city could derive any revenue from the flying field for a considerable time to come, made the following statement yesterday in announcing the personnel of his committee:

"After consultation with those familiar with and interested in the establishment of airport facilities in St. Louis and with a desire to prepare plans and provide for the establishment of such facilities, I have asked the following men to serve as a Municipal Airport Plan and Scope Committee."

The members of the committee are: Maj. Albert Bond Lambert, sponsor of aviation enterprises in St. Louis since 1910 and holder of the title to Lambert-St. Louis field; Major C. Ray Wassall, commandant of the 35th Division Air Corps; Randall Foster, war-time flyer and former president of the Flying Club of St. Louis; Charles E. Richardson, a real estate man; Carl F. G. Meyer, former president of the Chamber of Commerce and civilian aide to the Secretary of War; Albert Von Hoffmann, head of the Von Hoffmann Aircraft Co.; A. S. Werremeyer, Adolphus Busch III, Comptroller Nolte, President Neun of the Board of Aldermen, President Kinsey of the Board of Public Service, Director of Public Welfare Sallsbury, Director of Streets and Sewers Brooks and Park Commissioner Pape.

Meanwhile the Chamber of Commerce is proceeding with its airport program which includes a survey by an expert who has been retained to mark out the best landing field sites within easy reach of the downtown district. The Chamber of Commerce publication, "Greater St. Louis," has devoted much of its current issue to aviation. The articles include a history of aviation in St. Louis, a review of the city's present aviation facilities and an article by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh on the future of the city in aviation. The latter follows closely the line of the speech he made on his visit to St. Louis three weeks ago.

At the next meeting of the Junior Chamber of Commerce at Hotel Statler at 8:30 p. m. Thursday Harold M. Bixby, president of the Senior Chamber will discuss "The Future of Aviation in St. Louis."

Among the recent signs of general interest in flying here are the installation of a huge direction sign for flyers on the roof of the Boatmen's Bank Building and the announcement that a similar sign will be placed on the Coronado Hotel building as soon as a site for the municipal airdrome has finally been selected.

ROXY BRIDE FROM SPAIN GRANTED ADMISSION TO U. S.

Agreement by State and Labor Departments Recalls Order Debarring Woman.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—Senorita Flora Sariego, "proxy bride" of Maximo Muniz of Martin's Ferry, O., will be allowed to enter the United States and join her husband in time for the Labor day holiday period, as a result of two Government departments reaching an agreement.

Harry E. Hull, Commissioner-General of Immigration, announced today that he has issued instructions for the admission of the "proxy bride" and they have been sent direct to authorities at Ellis Island.

Senorita Sariego went through a "proxy marriage" in the province of Oveido, Spain, with Muniz, the father of the bridegroom, acting as proxy. She took this course in order that she might join her husband in the United States without delays incident to the quota law. Under the Spanish laws the "proxy marriage" is legal.

Upon reaching Ellis Island she was notified that the immigration law does not recognize the "proxy" wedding and she would have to return to Spain.

Muniz, the husband, appealed to the Department of Labor for assistance in having his wife admitted, Hull stated, and the Department of State was asked to exercise its prerogative and change the Spanish quota list to admit her as a quota immigrant.

The Department of State agreed to the request and Hull telephoned Ellis Island to allow her to enter.

Faces Idleness First Time in 50 Years

GEORGE D. WOBBE.

George D. Wobbe, Secretary, Will be Out of Job With Suspension of Business by King-Brinsmade Mercantile Co.

When the business of the King-Brinsmade Mercantile Co. is wound up within several weeks, it will leave George D. Wobbe, secretary of the firm, without a job for the first time in 50 years.

The firm, established here more than 50 years ago, ceased buying and selling several days ago and Wednesday closed the doors of the store which it had occupied at 1701 Washington avenue. Quarters of the new company now are in Room 312 of the Marquette Hotel, where Wobbe and several assistants are the only remaining employes. They are collecting what money the firm has outstanding and paying the few remaining bills, after which the business will have ben liquidated.

Started at $2 a Week.

"I guess it will feel funny not to have some work to go to after we wind up," Wobbe said yesterday to a Post-Dispatch reporter. "Most folks believe a man needs a little rest at some time or other as he goes along, but I imagine a man who has gotten into the habit of working, like I have, will miss the store and the surroundings to which he has become accustomed."

Wobbe started in with the firm for $2 a week as a messenger boy, March 5, 1877, when he was 14 years old. When there were no bundles to be delivered or called for, he dusted stock and kept it straight. Because of his diligence, he soon was promoted to entry clerk, followed by being placed in charge of the credit department of the company, and being made secretary.

Has Held but Three Jobs.

Generally, Wobbe always has been a man who didn't change much. He lived in the same house at 1510 Hebert street for 50 years, and has had only three jobs, the first as errand boy for a lumber firm, after he had left grammar school. He worked there nine months and, when the firm went out of business got a job in a men's hat shop, leaving there within several months to go to work for the millinery firm, with which he continued.

In the 50 years Wobbe worked for the millinery concern he lost only several days because of illness and, while he was working his way up, worked many days during market buying seasons from 7 a. m. until midnight.

May Lose on Stock.

Wobbe holds about $10,000 worth of the firm's stock, most of which he bought out of his earnings. He does not expect to realize full valuation on this.

"I'll take a little time off after I am finished here and then maybe I'll look around for a job," Wobbe continued. "I know I won't be able to stay away from doing some kind of work long, because even when I would take a few days' vacation some summers, I was always anxious to get back and get busy again."

Wobbe has been married 35 years. With his wife and son, Leroy, he lives at 4512A Fair avenue. A daughter, Mrs. F. H. Doenges, lives in the downstairs flat.

TWO YOUTHS HOLD UP OWNER OF AUTO FIRM AND TAKE $200

Robbers Jump On Running Board of Ben Bauer's Car and Threaten Him.

As Ben Bauer, proprietor of the Auto Sales Co., of 3582 Shenandoah avenue, slowed down before turning the corner at Arkansas and Shenandoah avenues last evening, two young men jumped on the running board of his car and pointed pistols at him.

"Keep quiet and drive where we tell you," one of the young men said.

Bauer drove into a nearby alley under orders. The youths searched him and found $200 in a pocketbook, the day's receipts of Bauer's business. The pair jumped from the car with the money and escaped on foot.

Bauer was on his way to his home at 5048 Alaska avenue.

Group of Co-Operative Busineess Concerns to Sponsor Motorized Procession Through City's Streets.

Five hundred or more display floats and automobiles, many of the latter decorated, are expected to participate tomorrow in the first Labor day parade in St. Louis in five years, and the first one ever to be motorized here.

Impressive processions used to be held here by labor, with marching men and women and horse-drawn floats, but the workers grew tired of this and many got the habit of going on private picnics on the holiday. A group of labor co-operative business concerns sponsored the renewal of the parade, and much of the detail work was left to Joseph A. Kenney, who will be grand marshal. Kenney is manager of the Union Label Products Co., secretary of the Retail Clerks' Union and delegate to Central Trades and Labor Union.

For thousands of St. Louisans a two-day holiday began today, while for others a two-and-a-half-day period of relaxation started yesterday noon Several hundred members of the electricians', plasterers' and lathers' unions, who have just begun observing a five-day work week, are enjoying a three-day rest.

Tomorrow's parade will start at Grand boulevard and Cook avenue upon the firing of a bomb at 10 a. m. Units will form on Cook avenue and on Page boulevard. The route will be south in Grand to Washington boulevard, east to Broadway and south to Triangle Park, 4100 South Broadway, where a day and evening picnic will be held by the paraders and their friends.

Even the two brass bands will move on motor trucks. Following the grand marshal's car will be floats or machines of the Telegraphers' National Bank, the Union Labor Insurance Agency, Inc.; the Commonwealth Cigar Co., another "co-op," and of the Meat Cutters' Union No. 88, with its women's auxiliary.

The second division will comprise bakers', bookbinders', bank clerks', brick & wood pavers' and teamsters' unions. In the third division will be cleaners' & dyers' (two), maintenance of way employes', stove mounters' (three), switchmen's (three), bill posters', building laborers' and tobacco workers' unions. Making up the fourth division will be Carpenters' Auxiliary No. 23, floats of products of union-label factories, a coach to be awarded at the picnic to the women gaining the most votes at 1 cent each in a popularity contest, and another car to be displayed there.

Grand Marshal Kenney estimates that 2000 persons will ride in the parade. At the picnic there will be speeches by William M. Brandt, Socialist politician and publisher of St. Louis Labor, and by Martin A. Dillmon of the teamsters' union; races for children and other athletic events; dancing and a display of clothing, coffee, soap and other goods bearing union labels.

A loudspeaker will broadcast from a Chicago labor station during the afternoon and in the evening will furnish a speech delivered in New York by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

ST. ELMO, ILL., HAS AIRPORT

Scott Field Dirigible Takes Part In Celebration There.

Special exercises, in which airplanes and the non-rigid dirigible TC-52 of Scott Field figured, were held yesterday at St. Elmo, Ill., celebrating the opening of the town's air port, a converted meadow. The TC-52 circled the field and hovered over the town the better part of an hour. It left Scott Field at 11 a. m. and returned to its hangar at 6 p. m. Lieut. Edward White commanded the crew of seven.

Planes from Chanute Field, at Rantoul, Ill., and from Wright Field, at Dayton, also flew over the town, which has a population of about 1500.

BOPP CONDUCTS LATEST INQUEST AS LAW REQUIRES

St. Louis County Coroner Refrains From Taking Woman's Body to His Undertaking Shop.

Coroner Louis H. Bopp of St. Louis County, whose alleged irregularities in office are to be investigated by the grand jury next month, yesterday held an inquest in the manner provided by law.

In the case of a woman who died in Meramec Township, he permitted the Meramec Township Constable, Charles St. Onge, to summon the jury of six, and all six jurors were residents of Meramec Township. Moreover, Coroner Bopp refrained from taking the body to his own Kirkwood mortuary, and charging for doing so. The inquest was held at another county undertaker's.

Rival undertakers have accused Bopp of holding all inquests at his Kirkwood shop, regardless of where death occurred, of having all Kirkwood residents on the jury, and of personally summoning the jurors. The law specifies that the jurors are to be summoned by the township constable and must be residents of the township where the death occured.

Coroner Bopp's purpose in concentrating his official business at Kirkwood, so his competitors allege, was to make it easier for him to obtain funeral contracts for his undertaking company. In cases where Bopp transported bodies to his Kirkwood place and then failed to get funeral contracts, he levied "hauling charges."

Yesterday's inquest, in which Bopp deviated from the practices which provoked criticism and a grand jury investigation, was in the case of Mrs. John Bates, wife of a photographer at Centaur Station, Meramec Township. She died Friday from the effects of a photographic compound which she swallowed Tuesday while despondent.

Witness of Accident Taking Boy to Hospital in Car, Hits Bus and Machine; Both Drivers Arrested.

Blume Yokovitz, 9 years old, of 2021 Wash street, and her brother, Milton, 4, were run down and seriously injured by an automobile driven by a Negro yesterday afternoon in front of 2000 Wash street. Frank Northrup, the Negro, stopped his car and took the girl to the hospital.

George Fowlkes of 7713 Arthur avenue, witnessed the accident and offered to take the boy to the hospital in his machine. En route he ignored the signal of a traffic policeman and struck first a motorbus and then a touring car on Washington avenue. The injured boy suffered no additional injuries, but Fowlkes' face and arms were cut and Philip Backs, 19 years old, a laborer, who was riding on the runningboard, suffered a fractured collarbone and bruises in the second collision.

The girl, at City Hospital, was found to be suffering from a broken right leg, a possible fractured skull and numerous bruises and lacerations. Her brother has a possible fractured skull, lacerations of the scalp and numerous bruises. The condition of both is critical.

Northrup was arrested for felonious wounding and reckless driving and Fowlkes was arrested for ignoring the signal of a traffic officer.

Two men jostled Henry La Chaine of Wichita, Kas., as, ticket in hand, he passed through the gates at Union Station to board a west-bound train about 8 o'clock last night.

When he took his seat aboard the train he found his pocketbook, containing $200, was missing.

employes, patients and others. Employes were allowed to purchase for their departments as they thought best. The price appears to have been a secondary matter, three and four making a trip to the city at the same time to make the same purchase."

Wilson Baker's Choice.

Wilson, who is a Democrat, actively supported Baker for the governorship, and was put in as steward of the hospital early in the Baker administration. When the Board of Managers deadlocked on Baker's instructions that Wilson be appointed as steward at Nevada, and that George Gilpin, the Governor's brother-in-law, be appointed steward of the Hospital for the Insane at St. Joseph, Baker reorganized the Board, and the new Board made the appointments.

Thompson's report charged that the laws relative to employment of help, competitive purchasing of supplies, keeping of records, and method of purchasing, "all have been violated." Some of the monthly reports to the Board by Wilson failed to show debts to various persons, Thompson said. He charged that "The steward withheld information at the June, 1927, meeting of the board that would have helped to reveal the true condition.

Invoices covering many thousands of dollars of purchases were found in a storeroom at the hospital, it is stated, and could not be checked from records kept in the hospital office.

$2160 Shortage Made Good.

The report referred to one discrepancy of $2160 which was made good by W. C. Robertson of Jefferson City, a bookkeeper, after it was discovered. Robertson was taken to Nevada by Wilson as an assistant. Robertson was appointed later steward of the State hospital at Fulton, but was removed last June, after friction with Dr. E. T. McGaugh, the superintendent. Robertson's appointment as steward at Fulton was made after the $2160 shortage had been discovered and made good. Robertson said someone else took the money but that he repaid it because he was in charge of the fund.

Thompson's report says this $2160 shortage was found in the county patients' account, and was repaid by Robertson in two installments last March and April, which were credited in the steward's sales account, with a notation that they were credited there "on account of error."

"Could Not Have Been Errors."

"However, investigation shows that a shortage was known several weeks before these entries were made in the steward's salesbook," Thompson said. "On further investigation, we find that the transactions could not have been errors, as in each instance the cash would have been long over the amounts credited in the cash books."

Another item listed was the purchase by Wilson Nov. 10, 1925, of $447 in furniture from the J. R. Davis Furniture Co. of Nevada, to be delivered to a farm leased by Wilson for the hospital. The invoices, paid in March, 1926, included a desk and chair costing $75. The desk and chair, Thompson said, were not delivered to the farm, but remained in the store until December, 1926.

"Then, by order of Wilson," Thompson stated, "the desk and chair were delivered to Mr. Phelps, the newly elected Prosecuting Attorney, and placed in his office at the Vernon County Courthouse. Not until Aug. 6, 1927, toward the close of this audit, did Phelps appear at the institution and make known that he possessed the desk and chair, and tender payment for them."

"The reason given by Wilson why the desk and chair were not delivered to the farm," Thompson continued, "was that they were not suitable for the farm and he let Mr. Phelps have them. This transaction is altogether irregular."

Says Wilson Gave Him Furniture.

Thompson said it was learned during the audit that H. E. Ford, a poultry raiser, had in his possession in his Nevada residence, some wicker furniture that was paid for by the State. Thompson said this furniture had been returned to the hospital with the explanation by Ford that Wilson had given him the furniture.

While credits for supplies on hand reduced the deficit to $62,000 Thompson said that of the $115,989 in unpaid bills, there were no funds available to pay $107,805 of them. Some of these claims date back to early in 1926. The audit covered the period from Jan. 1, 1926 to June 30, 1927, and Wilson was removed last June 27.

Discussing the $22,345 in merchandise purchased by Wilson from B. E. Davis, Nevada grocer, Thompson said the items purported to have been paid by Davis and later were billed by him against the Hospital, but the merchandise was not handled directly or in any way by Davis. No proof could be obtained that the merchandise was delivered to the state, it was said.

The explanation obtained, Thompson said, was that Wilson would telephone Davis to pay certain persons for merchandise for the hospital, or Wilson would bring the items to Davis in person. Davis later would bill the institution for the amounts, he said.

Fails to Find Record.

"No record of any of the various purchases could be produced by Davis," Thompson said, "nor could he recall except in one instance the name of a single person to whom he paid any part of the money, though some of the transactions occurred as late as May, 1927. All payments were made in cash, in most instances on order by telephone from Wilson, who would send persons to Davis to collect for merchandise that, so far as Davis knew, might never have existed.

"Davis could recall only handing to Wilson at various times cash which, Wilson said, was to pay for merchandise, including items for which Davis later billed the institution."

Denounces Cattle Deal.

Thompson said the commission on other goods sold the State by Davis ranged from 3 to 20 per cent a month, and the commissions were declared exorbitant and excessive. Thompson severely criticised a series of cattle deals made by Wilson. A transaction in which H. E. Ford, an employe of the hospital, claims $1937 for 31 head of cattle, was declared "irregular, with the appearance of having been made for mutual profit at the expense of the State."

"The 31 head of cattle cost Ford an average of $56.60 each. After they grazed several weeks on pasture furnished by the hospital, Wilson entered into an agreement to buy the cattle at $62.50 each," the report stated.

In another cattle deal, the report states, Wilson, May 3, 1927, bought and received 107 cattle for the hospital from Noah Lee and Claud Tough, for $6707.40.

"Further investigation reveals," the report stated, "that T. W. Harper (member of the legislature from Vernon County) accompanied Wilson and several employes to receive these cattle, and while they were being driven about 20 miles to the pasture, Harper agreed with Wilson to buy these cattle at the same price, $6707.40, and during this imaginary period of ownership, Harper placed a chattel mortgage on the cattle, paid Wilson $6707.40, immediately sold them back to Wilson for $6707.40, invoice for which was not on file, but held by First National Bank, in order that Wilson might be able to pay him an unreported former indebtedness."

The audit was made by John Batholomaeus, T. H. Ebersole and L. L. McCawley of Thompson's staff of auditors.

10,000 DIAL PHONES IN BUSINESS DISTRICT

Oldest Exchange in St. Louis Abandoned When New Connection Is Made.

The oldest telephone exchange office in St. Louis was abandoned last midnight, as the dial telephone made its first appearance in the downtown business district.

As the clock struck midnight, 10,000 "Main-Chestnut" telephones which had been connected with the 30-year-old manual switchboards and equipment at Tenth and Olive phone Building at Tenth and Olive streets were transferred to the automatic dial system in the ew Bell Telephone Building at 1010 Pine street.

The actual transferring was the work of a few minutes, but had been preceded by months of labor and expenditure of $2,840,000.

Abandonment of the old office will not mean that the 150 operators will be dropped from service, said Percy Redmund, general manager of the telephone company. Some of them will be moved to the new dial office; the remainder will go to manual offices where increased forces are necessary.

Including the 10,000 instruments introduced downtown, there are now 42,000 St. Louis telephones connected with the dial system. During the fall and winter 12,000 additional instruments from "Garfield" and "Central" will be changed to "Chestnut" and placed on the machine, raising the total of dial telephones to 22,000 in the business district, and in the whole city to 54,000—approximately a fourth of the 212,400 instruments in Greater St. Louis.

FRIENDS OF REED URGE HIM TO OPEN ACTIVE CAMPAIGN

Bennett C. Clark, Son of Late Speaker, Writes That Missouri Should Have No Second Choice.

By CURTIS A. BETTS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 3.—The view of many Democratic politicians that the strategy of a successful campaign for Senator Reed for the nomination for the presidency must be careful waiting through a convention deadlock between Gov. Smith of New York and whomever may contest with him is not shared by some of the Senator's strongest supporters and closest friends. If their advice is followed, Reed will become a bona fide fighting candidate for the nomination.

The general opinion in Missouri has been that in the early balloting Smith will show the greatest strength, and possibly will have a majority of the delegates. Unless the rule requiring a two-thirds vote for nomination should be abrogated, they have believed, a deadlock would result. They have hoped that the result would be that eventually the convention would become tired and turn to a compromise candidate. Reed has appeared to them as the logical compromise man.

A vigorous fight by Reed in the early stages, many have believed, would make him unacceptable to the Smith following, and might prevent the Tammany and other Smith delegates from going to him in the windup, even if Tammany should be unable to bring about Smith's nomination.

Clark Favors a Fight.

Bennett C. Clark of St. Louis, son of the late Speaker Champ Clark, who, in the 1912 Democratic convention in Baltimore, succeeded in getting a majority of the delegates, but was unable to muster the necessary two-thirds, favors a convention fight for Reed. He is a very close friend of Reed, and it would not be surprising if the views he expresses prove to be the Senator's own views, although Reed so far has maintained a careful silence on the Presidency.

Clark, who is in Waterloo, Ia., recovering from an operation for an affection of the tonsils, has written an outline of his ideas to a friend in Kansas City. His letter resulted from the publication of a recent interview with his law partner, Samuel W. Fordyce, chairman of the Democratic State Committee. Fordyce was quoted as having said that Smith would be the second choice of Missouri.

"Missouri Democrats, in common with Democrats of other states, have deep admiration for the character and ability of Gov. Smith, but Missouri will have no second choice for the Democratic nomination for President," Clark said in his letter.

For a Solid Reed Group.

"I believe the Democrats of Missouri will demand and insist that a delegation represent them at the National convention which will be for Senator James A. Reed first, last and all the time, with no second choice; one which will never vote for the nomination of any other man than Senator Reed, except possibly to make a nomination unanimous after some other candidate has obtained a majority.

"I believe that Senator Reed can be nominated and elected President of the United States. As his friend, I believe he should be a bona fide candidate, going into the contest with the idea of being nominated, or he should not be a candidate at all. Missouri should be for him in good faith, hook, line and sinker, with the idea of nominating him and of never lowering the flag, or it should not indorse him at all.

"Senator Reed's fame would not be enhanced in the slightest degree by a favorite son indorsement, and neither the prestige nor the harmony of Missouri Democracy will be improved by giving him a half-hearted favorite son indorsement, with the idea of having mental reservations as to a second choice and eventually going to some other candidate.

"Deserves Full Backing."

"If Senator Reed is to be a candidate, which I think he should be, he is entitled to have the whole-hearted indorsement of Missouri Democracy without equivocation or mental reservation. He is entitled to have a delegation made up of men and women who are hook, line and sinker for him and who are not looking for a bandwagon. He is entitled to have the same sort of a delegation as my father had at the Baltimore convention in 1912, which was perfectly willing to die in the ditch after it knew another nomination was inevitible.

"Senator Reed can be not only a bona fide candidate, but he is unquestionably at the present moment one of the leading figures in Democratic speculation in regard to the nomination. Either he should be a bona fide candidate for the presidency, supported in ardent good faith by Missouri Democracy, or he should not be a candidate at all, but should go at the head of the Missouri delegation to the National convention and take there the great place that his abilities and pre-eminent position entitle him to.

"I know Mr. Fordyce so well that I am certain he had no thought of creating the impression that Missouri would abandon Senator Reed's candidacy and go to Gov. Smith's support, but the phraseology of the dispatch would leave that impression and it seems an excellent occasion for the definition of the views of Senator Reed's friends and supporters."

Clark's views are said to coincide with those of Ed Glenn of Louisiana, Mo., head of the last Reed-for-Senator campaign, which was won over what appeared at the beginning of the contest to be overwhelming odds. Glenn now is directing the Reed-for-President movement.

UPPER RIVER BARGE SERVICE FORCED BY I. C. C. DECISION

Attitude That Such Transportation No Longer Was Feasible Resulted in New Line, Says W. W. Morse.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 3.—Decision by the Interstate Commerce Commission that there was no longer any prospect of a freight service on the Upper Mississippi was the challenge which resulted in the opening of that service, W. W. Morse, operating manager, declared today.

The towboat S. S. Thorpe, with 50,000 bushels of Northern grain for export and several barge loads of merchandise is due in St. Louis tomorrow or Monday, completing the inaugural round-trip of the first such service in 30 years.

Many earlier efforts to revive traffic on the Upper River have failed. Prospects were bright for a while in 1915, when Minneapolis sank $300,000 in dock improvement, but dimmed steadily until in May, 1925, Morse related, the Interstate Commerce Commission, in deciding the Indiana rate case declared they no longer existed.

St. Louis Rates Raised.

St. Louis, Chicago and Illinois freight rates to St. Paul and Minneapolis were based on river competition. The Indiana Public Service Commission petitioned that they were discriminately against Indiana, where rates to the Twin Cities were higher. The Interstate body, deciding in favor of Indiana, put the St. Louis and Illinois rates on what is called, in traffic parlance, a "dry land basis."

Indiana rates were lowered and the St. Louis and Chicago rates raised. Further, Chicago was given an increased rate advantage over St. Louis. Chicago rates which had been 91.5 cents a hundred were increased by the decision to 98, while the St. Louis rate to the Twin Cities, which had been 96 cents a hundred, rose to $1.25. The barge line now offers a $1 rate from St. Louis to the Twin Cities, 15½ cents above the corresponding rail-and-water rate from Chicago.

"As a result of this decision," Morse continued, "Chicago was securing much business that should have come to the Twin Cities. During that year there was 1,500,000 square feet of vacant wholesale space in the two Northwestern cities.

"It was then that leaders in Minneapolis and St. Paul realized the necessity of reviving traffic on the Mississippi River, and the barge service recently inaugurated is the result of efforts instituted nearly four years ago.

Railroads Benefit.

"Now jobbers in this section can obtain sugar and coffee at a $2 per-ton cheaper rate than formerly was available, and shippers can export grain to the seaboard via New Orleans at the same cost as they formerly could ship it down the Great Lakes and via Montreal.

"The barge line merely represents the efforts of the people of the Mississippi Valley to make available for themselves, by use of inland waterways, the same advantages that came to the people of the Atlantic and Pacific coast by construction of the Panama Canal. Course of traffic in coffee, burlap and sugar illustrates the manner in which development of barge lines benefits railroads paralleling the rivers. Formerly imports of these commodities have come into the Middle West largely through Atlantic and Pacific ports. Because of development of the barge line, they now are being moved into the Mississippi Valley through New Orleans.

"This does not mean that all of this freight received at New Orleans is handled by the barge line. Not more than 40 per cent is moved by barge, while the remaining 60 per cent, being desired sooner than barges could make delivery, is moved by railroads.

"This business, therefore, represents a direct gain for the railroads, and affords tonnage that otherwise would not be obtained. It is only one of the ways in which the barges rather than injuring, act as a real benefit to rail carriers of the Missippippi Valley.

WILL SUGGEST WAYS OF SPEEDING TRAFFIC

Streets Committee to Present Plans for Widening Manchester and Arsenal.

Included in a group of improvements to facilitate traffic movement, which the Streets Committee of the City Plan Commission will suggest to the commission next Tuesday, is one for widening Manchester avenue to 100 feet, from Vandeventer avenue to the city limits. This would make a broad boulevard across the city from the downtown district to Maplewood, since condemnation for widening Market street, is pending and widening of Vandeventer avenue is under way.

A definite recommendation of the Manchester project has not been made, nor has the cost been estimated. Present width varies from 60 to 80 feet, and a serious hazard exists, due to the fact that the car tracks are on the extreme left side of the street between Kingshighway and Kraft avenue. The widening would remedy this, and provide for eight traffic lanes. How much space would be taken on either side to effect it has not been planned.

Another suggestion of the committee is for widening Arsenal street from 60 to 80 feet, between Kingshighway and Watson road, and from 60 to 70 or 75 feet between Watson road and Jamieson avenue, at a cost of $31,000, or possibly less. Construction of the Arsenal street viaduct over the Frisco Railway yards next year will increase traffic there, as will the projected River des Peres parkway.

A third suggestion of the committee is for a $22,942 cutoff at the southwest corner of Hodiamont and Wells avenue, to eliminate a jog.

NVOYS DISCUSS LEAGUE SOLVING LATIN PROBLEMS

ntry of Body Into South America Suggested in Speech of Chilean, Coun- il President.

OSSIBLE VIEW OF U. S. NTERESTS DELEGATES

is Country Prefers to See Western Hemisphere Set- tle Its Own Difficulties, It Is Thought.

the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Sept. 3.—The out- nding topic of discussion in neva tonight was the statement Enrique Villegas of Chile, presi- t of the League Council, at to- y's meeting that he saw no rea- the League of Nations could t interest itself in political prob- ms outside of Europe.

This is interpreted here as an al- sion to the possibility that the ague Council may take up any ture political problems affecting atin-American states. Hereto- re it has been understood in eague circles that the Latin- merican members preferred to ttle among themselves and by emselves any political disputes ising on the American continent y the process of arbitration which e Latin-American states have de- loped so strongly.

If the views of President Ville- s meet with the approval of atin-Americans generally, it is ought possible that the League Nations may take on new poli- al force and prestige, perhaps en endeavoring to settle the cna-Arica dispute.

French Envoy Shows Interest.

M. Paul-Boncour, official spokes- n of the French delegation — ho incidentally remarked that if e disarmament debate does not me up in the Assembly, he him- f will provoke it—manifested ight absorbing interest in the sible activities of the League in atin-American matters.

"The Latin-American states have y to bring any questions before Council," he said, "and the uncil will be only too glad to erest itself in their amicable set- ment."

The possible submission of a ture Latin-American problems to e League Council has created in- est from another angle —that is, e effect of such development of e League on American public inion, in view of the opinion pre- ling in many quarters in Europe t the United States infinitely efers to see political controvers- involving American nations tled by the American continent lf.

Delegates Discuss Presidency.

The presidency of the Assembly ears to be sifting down to Count Mensdorf of Austria, and Mi- chiro Adachi, Japanese Ambas- r to France, with the odds fa- ng the Austrian. Most of the rnoon was spent in conversa- s among the various delegates, ing reference to the general k of the Assembly, which be- Monday.

Following the recent interna- al economic conference, in ch the American delegates took inent part, the League Coun- adopted a policy today calcu- d to link the American people er with the League and its de- pment by appointing Jeremiah th of Boston, former League missioner for the financial re- ilitation of Hungary, as a mem- of the League's Permanent Fi- cial Committee. Smith has ac- ted the appointment, and will the first American to serve on committee, which plays an im- tant role in European financial onstruction.

"League Must Be Reality."

The League of Nations must me a reality, a personality in eyes of the more distant na- belonging to it," declared Sir en Chamberlain, British For- Minister, at this morning's sesir Austen was summing up the ions expressed by Mineichiro chi, Japanese Ambassador to ance; Francisco Jose Urrutia, mbian Minister to Switzerland, President Villegas.

he Council discussion arose over presentation by Minister Adachi report of the League's mission the health conference held in tevideo in June. He called at- ion to the fact that this was first League congress to be in Latin-America. Thereupon Urrutia expressed the wish the Council itself might meet ay in the Southern half of the tern Hemisphere. Adachi add- this the hope that some Far rn capital might similarly be red.

WAYNE B. WHEELER TAKEN TO HOSPITAL SERIOUSLY ILL

Dry League Leader Suffers Attack From Old Ailment at Summer Home.

By the Associated Press

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., Sept. 3. —Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the Anti-Saloon League of America, was a paitent at the Battle Creek Sanitarium today, reported to be seriously ill from a kidney ailment. Although a statement from hospital attaches declared that Wheeler's condition "cannot be regarded as immediately dangerous," it was generally believed that the Anti-Saloon League counsel was gravely ill. He was removed from his summer home at Little Point Sable near here Thursday and taken to a Shelby hospital.

Friday night his condition was such that physicians ordered his removal to the sanitarium here. Wheeler's illness, although not regarded as serious in the past, dates back several years. He had been undergoing periodic examination and treatment at the Battle Creek Sanitarium.

Several weeks ago Mrs. Wheeler was fatally burned when an oil stove exploded at their little Point Sable summer home, and her father, suffering from heart disease, collapsed and died from shock. Wheeler had returned to his summer home only recently after attending the funeral of his wife at her home in Ohio.

Wheeler's physician tonight termed the dry leader's condition serious but not grave, and said indications were that a crisis would be reached by Sunday night.

The patient has almost complete blockage of the kidneys," Dr. Alfred E. Verity, specialist, said.

"Late today, for the first time, there was some relief. We hope to relieve him more tomorrow. There will be no operation unless the plan fails."

Man Missing for Week.

Peter Scheer, 52 years old, a laborer, of 4340 Vista avenue, has been missing since last Sunday. He left home early in the morning intending to spend the day fishing near East St. Louis.

Reptile House Crowded For First View of Snakes

500 Visitors to New Attraction at Zoo Impressed by Beauty of Interior as Well as by Unusual Exhibits.

People and snakes had their first afternoon of staring at each other yesterday at the Zoo in a $185,000 building designed for the comfort and safety of both.

First there were speeches, while 500 or more persons stood in the sun outside the handsome new Reptile House. Inside in the cool, the snakes, notoriously of that calculating temperament which does not mind waiting, manifested no impatience. Outside there was lots of it particularly in the two or three rows of small boys who had wriggled through the front.

But the speeches didn't last long. Apparently the functionaries also were anxious to see snakes. President Kinsey of the Board of Public Service and Park Commissioner Pape, who both are officials of the Zoo, explained the educational purposes of the Reptile House. Pape remarked that the high art which sticks out all over the place was for the edification of not the snakes, but the people. He handed the keys to Mayor Miller, who unlocked the door, and in a moment the corridors were swarming with people.

Seek Most Dangerous Points.

At first they scurried in every direction. Gradually they concentrated in front of the two pythons, the cobras, and the deadly green mambas. Confidence in the provisions for their safety showed in strenuous efforts to get as close as possible to the deadliest. The only apparent danger was that of having an eye poked out by the myriad pointing fingers.

Nobody, coming in, took time to glance around at the architecture. They went straight for the snakes. But after their curiosity was satisfied, they admired the gleaming white walls, the charming ensemble of pools, rocks and ferns in the center enclosure, and the backgrounds of the four principal cages, which were painted by Frank Nuderscher.

Women, departing, were heard to remark that this was the first time they had ever seen snakes without that creepy feeling. Some of them said it must be because of the attractiveness of the surroundings. That, Pape had explained, was the purpose of making the surroundings attractive.

Guides to Answer Queries.

A [illegible] were less susceptible to art than to the fear of snakes. A small boy, riding on his father's shoulder, held on fearsomely while his eyes grew wider and wider, and another wailed, "Wanna go home!"

Psychologists say that sort of fear is not inborn but instilled, and Superintendent Vierheller of the Zoo says one thing he hopes to accomplish is its elimination. To that end he has engaged two university graduates to answer all questions, and show just which snakes are dangerous and which are not. This for those who fail to understand explicit and lucid labels on each cage.

Scarcely anyone, it seemed, failed to visit the adjoining small mammal exhibit, a corridor of queer or handsome little beasts from many countries. A chief attraction was a pair of furry little Malayan sun bears, imported for comic relief, which wrestled and chewed ears like a pair of kittens.

COOLIDGES GIVE FAREWELL LAWN FETE TO FRIENDS

Neighbors of Black Hills Country Almost En Masse Attend Party at Summer White House.

By the Associated Press

RAPID CITY, S. D., Sept. 3.—President and Mrs. Coolidge today said goodby to their Black Hill's friends and neighbors at a lawn party at the Game Lodge.

Several hundred guests called at the summer White House this afternoon in response to a general invitation given the citizens of Hermosa, the little community between the Lodge and Rapid City, where the President attended church this summer, and in response to more specific invitations extended to the few nearby residents.

Shortly after luncheon, the line of automobiles and some horse-drawn wagons began arriving with guests. The band of the cavalry troop at Fort Meade, S. D., played. Later Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge came from the Lodge to shake hands with the folk assembled on the front lawn and to eat ice cream and cake with them.

Mr. Coolidge drives through Hermosa, a village of about 100 inhabitants, on his way to his offices in Rapid City and has attended services at the Hermosa Congregational Church, only Protestant church of the town. The entire hamlet, including members of the church governing body was invited to the Lodge and it seemed as if all had come.

Also in the party were Senator and Mrs. Norbeck, who have a cabin near the summer White House; Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Godeon, who operated the lodge prior to its occupancy by the President; Charles Robertson, superintendent of the State Park; who resides across the road from the Coolidges, and Steve Hurley, picturesque owner of Camp Galena, near the lodge.

Preparing to break camp here Friday, the President spent the day at the lodge, giving some attention to the address he has prepared for delivery at Brookings, S. D., Saturday morning, his only stop on the way back to Washington. Tonight, Senator Bingham (Republican), Connecticut, who has been in China, comes to the lodge as a week-end guest.

MAN WOUNDED BY BULLET FIRED BY WOMAN AT NEGRO

Watchman Discharges Own Revolver at Fugitive After Falling; Condition Is Serious.

Carl Ramstein, 63-year-old watchman of the levee district unwittingly traversed the line of fire of an armed Negro woman and a Negro man she was chasing yesterday afternoon and was shot through the neck and seriously wounded by a bullet fired by the woman.

Ramstein fell at Pine and First streets, while Minnie Jackson, the pursuing Negro woman continued to fire bullets when running, at "Jodie" Williams, Negro fireman of a riverboat who earlier, she said, struck her in her home at 125 Elm street.

Patrolmen Lane and Spillane heard the shots and joined the chase and captured Williams. Ramstein, who was armed, drew his pistol after being wounded and emptied it at the Negro. Ramstein was taken to City Hospital where he is in a serious condition.

The woman said that Williams called unexpectedly at her home and an argument resulted. After Williams struck her, she said, she got her revolver and chased him in Locust street. He turned south into First and had already sped past Pine when Ramstein got in the way of a bullet intended for him. The Negro man and woman are held at the Central District station.

AMERICAN BUSINESS OUTLOOK VERY FAIR, SAYS HOOVER

Secretary of Commerce Bases Forecast on Trends of Trade for Two-Thirds of 1927.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—Secretary of Commerce Hoover says the outlook in the next few months is very fair for American business. He bases the assertion on trends of trade during the first two-thirds of 1927 depicted in departmental reports.

The first seven months of 1927 disclosed generally a higher state of business activity than was expected after the peak year of 1926. Loadings of railroad freight were but very slightly under the record loading volumes of the previous year. Pig iron production also was but slightly less.

Increases were noted in volume of construction and contracts let, exports of commodities on a quantity basis, including automobiles and textiles; retail sales, stocks of goods and number of people employed in service lines.

Hoover said money rates are now low and the effect of that condition is to maintain enterprise. Time deposits are distinctly stronger than this time last year. The agricultural outlook cannot be as yet determined. The price levels have improved, in the case of corn, one of the most important crops.

THREE DEAD IN WRECK OF ST. LOUIS TRAIN

Southern Railway Passenger From Louisville Hits Coal Cars ate Princeton, Ind.

By the Associated Press.

PRINCETON, Ind., Sept. 3.—Catapulting from an open switch into a Big Four train of loaded coal cars, part of Southern Railway passenger train No. 2, westbound from Louisville to St. Louis, piled up early today. Three persons lost their lives, another was injured seriously and more than a dozen suffered bruises and lacerations.

The accident occurred at 1:15 o'clock this morning, 150 yards from where a switch to the Francisco coal mine No. 2 joins the main line of the Southern.

Firemen on both trains were killed and Thomas Nelson, 62 years old, of New Albany, veteran engineer on the passenger, lost his life. The fireman on the Big Four coal train was W. E. Anderson of Petersburg, Ind., and the Southern fireman was Leonard Wilson, 44, of Princeton.

Those who died were crushed in the breakup of the engines and scalded. George Fluher, 40, of Petersburg, engineer on the coal train, was injured seriously.

Among those injured, in addition to Fluher were:

Henry Young, Louisville, Ky., Southern train baggagemaster; Mrs. W. C. Miller, Alexandria, Va.; Fred M. Sibert, Mount Carmel, Ill.; W. B. Owen, Sommerset, Ky.; Mrs. G. M. Bassford, Edwardsville, Ill.; Alfred C. Tarlino, Lincoln, Neb., Edmund Thensted, New Orleans, La.

The locomotives were demolished being heaped across the track. The tender of the Southern train leaped atop the debris and was shunted over the coal train tender. A metal mail coach straddled the wreckage and toppled over on its back. The next coach, a wooden baggage car, was splintered between the steel mail car and a passenger-baggage coach which ploughed into the twisted mass, stopping with one end in mid-air.

NEW HOWARD RADIO SETS OPERATE WITH AC TUBES

A new line of Howard receivers, with AC tubes and a built-in power pack enabling use of the 210 power tube in the last stage, is announced. No batteries whatsoever are required for operating these Howards, for which exceptional tone quality and volume are claimed.

The new Howard sets are totally shielded, have the popular drum type dial, and are massively constructed. They come in table and console models of distinctive artistic design.

The sets employ the R C A circuit and are built under R C A group patent license.

STEWART-WARNER RADIO DEALERS HOLD CONVENTION

Ninety-five Stewart - Warner radio dealers held a convention Monday at the Coronado Hotel. Dan Hyland, St. Louis manager for Stewart-Warner, presided, and the dealers present represented most of the larger places in the Eastern Missouri-Southern Illinois territory.

The new Stewart-Warner 6-tube receivers, a new cone type speaker and new tubes were exhibited. The receivers use a new circuit for which great claims are made. The tubes have unusual amplification and long life. A feature was presentation to each dealer of a baseball autographed by Frankie Frisch and inscribed: "The blue ribbon of success. Team work in baseball is matched units in radio."

Among those who spoke at the convention were: Odin Jester, assistant sales manager, radio division, for Stewart-Warner; Harrington H. Stone, chief radio engineer; William Stensgard, display expert for Stewart-Warner, and Robert E. Lee, secretary-manager of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association.

The contesting schools are classified in two groups—St. Louis Elementary, sixth to eighth grades, inclusive; St. Louis High Schools, and St. Louis County high schools.

The schools are the contestants and not the individual pupils, that is, the awards will be made to the schools from which the winning students are entered and not to the individual student essayists.

HOG AND LAMB PRICES ADVANCE DURING WEEK

Hogs	61,817	61,655	67,834

Totals	111,539	116,683	137,105

Hogs and lambs made a good advance at the St. Louis National Stockyards last week, although the close in cattle was lower. Horses and mules ruled firm. Combined receipts were moderate at approximately 111,539 head. This number included right at 38,680 cattle and calves, included in which was a generous showing of steers, including many of good finish. Aside from a few strictly choice beeves, which were about steady, the trend in steers was lower. The bulk of natives closed 25c to 50c down and Westerns were discounted 25c. The bulk of fat beeves passed the scales at $11.75 to $13.25 per cwt., and sales were also recorded at $13.30, $13.35, $13.50, $13.75 and $14.25. The latter price, paid for a drove of 2-year-old Herefords, represented a new high for this year in cattle above the yearling stage. Plainer native steers brought around $9, $10 and under, while Western steers, embracing around 200 cars of Kansas and Oklahoma grassers, earned a popular range of $9 to $10, with the top $10.10. The low point of the week in all cattle was on the close, when the larger killers were operating under limited orders due to the closing of their killing plants Monday for the Labor day holiday. This market, however, will be open in all departments Labor day. Light yearling steers and heifers late were 25c to 50c under a week ago. Straight heifers equaled the year's top of $13. All classes of cows and bologna bulls were 25c higher in one stage of the trade, but closed barely steady with a week ago. The bulk of beef cows late was $5.75 to $7, while cutters brought $5 to $5.25 and canners $4 to $4.50. Bologna bulls earned $5 to $5.75 for a light kind and $5.75 to $6.25 for the better grades. Top bolognas at the best time reached $6.50 and $6.60. Stocker and feeder cattle were active and firm the greater part of the week, but the close was slow and weak in sympathy with killing grades. The better grades of steers during the period under review cashed around $8 and $9. Top veal calves varied from $14.75 to $15.50, with the latter price prevailing late, an equal of the closing week's high. Southern canner yearlings ropped 15c to 25, finishing at $5 to $5.25.

Hog Prices Higher.

Receipts of swine the past week were approximately 61,817, as compared with 61,655 last week and 67,834 same week last year. Quality was fair to good. Thursday receipts were the lightest since April 1, last. Light hog prices at the close of the period are the highest since April 18, on which day $11.55 was the high price. Heavy hogs are sharply higher as compared with that day. The forepart of the week buyers were bearish and the market declined, but lighter receipts, combined with a better demand, strengthened the trade and prices were tending upwards in late sessions. Medium and heavy hogs were most improved, however. From Wednesday until Saturday good demands were featured but Saturday this demand was lacking and the market was slow. Buyers were discriminating against light hogs of 160 to 170 pounds average. Two or three weeks ago that class was bringing the top, the past week, however, they were being discounted 15c to 25c under those weighing 180 to 200 pounds. If of very choice quality they may have brought top price. Half-fat, grassy kinds were also penalized. Most sales of that class being 25c to 50c under good quality kinds of like weight. Fairly good clearances were noted each day, excepting the first days of the week. Packers were bearish early in the period but a good demand order developed for weighty hogs and they had to follow the advancing market or go without supplies. Light hogs closed the period 40c to 50c up, medium weights 50c to 85c up and heavy and extreme heavy hogs 75c to $1 higher. The above comparison is with last Friday, as last Saturday's market was too uneven to make an accurate comparison. Pigs and light lights encountered poor demand throughout the period. At the close values are mostly 25c lower, spots off more. Bulk sold for the week at $8.50 to $10. Packing sows advanced in accordance with the weightier swine and at the close are 50c to 65c higher. Bulk of sows sold for the period at $8.50 to $9.10. Top sows made $9.10. Stags cashed principally at $7 to $8.

Better Tone to Sheep.

A much better tone was exhibited in the local sheep and lamb market the past week. Receipts were about 40 per cent lighter than last week and the market advanced 50c over last Saturday's close. Packers were the main buyers, although city butchers and other outside buyers purchased a few. Clearance was good. Bulk of desirable lambs sold for the week at $12.75 to $13.25. Bucky, coarse lambs generally sold from $11 to $12.50. Culls, skips and aged sheep remained steady with a week ago. Best culls made $8.50 with skips at $5 to $7.00. Light ewes $5.50, weightier kinds down to $4.50, choppers and bucks $3 to $3.50. Canners $1 to $2.50. Quality the past period was fair to good. Southwest lambs continued to arrive in moderate numbers, but the main decrease was in the native lamb supply. Quotations, slaughter stock: Good to choice spring lambs $13 to $13.50, mideum to good $11.50 to $13, plain to medium $10.50 to $11.50, cull and common $8 to $10. Thin to fair kids $1.50 to $3.

Horses and Mules.

Native and Western horses and mules on commission at the St. Louis market during the week fell slightly under 1000 head. Demand was of good volume and sales were on a generally steady level with the previous week. There was a good clearance.

Missouri and Illinois sent in most of the native stock, and Westerns came from Montana, Wyoming, Oklahoma, Kansas and Nebraska. Preference was decidedly for broke stock and wild offerings did not sell as well proportionately.

Orders the past week were especially good from such states as Georgia, Louisiana, Virginia and Kentucky.

In some cases the demand for good farm horses exceeded the supply. Fat cotton mules were also in good request. Eastern mines continue to provide outlet for some of the small rugged mules.

FEAR OF FROST DAMAGE IS DISPELLED, GRAINS DOWN

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 3.—Dispelling of fear of frost damage led to lower prices today both for wheat and corn. Pressure to sell was persistent, especially in the corn market. Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled at 1⅛c to 1½c net decline, with corn 2¼c to 3⅛c down. Oats ¼c to ⅞c off and provisions unchanged to 25c higher.

Prospects of big receipts of wheat at Minneapolis on Tuesday with favorable weather in domestic spring crop territory added to the downward impetus of the wheat market, but the main factor was improvement of weather conditions in Canada. Entire absence of any further visitation of frost in that country was noted and temperatures there today were reported as ranging from 40 to 52 with skies clear. Word was also received that yesterday's frost in Argentina had apparently done no harm and that harvesting in Europe is making satisfactory progress.

Rallying power shown in wheat at times today was associated with Omaha advices that there is a brisk demand for export wheat by way of the Gulf of Mexico, with premiums at the highest point on the crop. In this connection, talk was current that movement of Southwest wheat has let up, and that the present demand is drawing wheat from terminal markets, a very unusual situation at this time of year.

Rising temperatures over the corn belt put the corn market on the downgrade from the outset. Special attention, too, was given to reports of good crop prospects Southwest, some Kansas advices saying the outlook there is the best since 1889.

Oats weakness today was in sympathy with corn and wheat.

FAVORABLE WEATHER LOWERS GRAIN LIST

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Sept. 3.—Good weather brought lower prices on wheat and corn at the closing session of the week on the local market, corn showing widest range on favorable Southwest news. Besides the fact that fear of frost had been dispelled there are anticipation of increased Minneapolis receipts of wheat.

Better weather in Canada, with no further frost development reported, and influence of hedging led to lower domestic wheat prices. Winnipeg early was down ⅝c to 1⅛c. Liverpool closed ⅛d higher. Weather also was favorable in corn country and prices declined.

December wheat opened at $1.38⅛ and December corn $1.09⅛.

Local wheat receipts, which were 134,400 bushels compared with 145,600 a week ago and 102,200 last year, included 64 cars local and 32 through. Corn receipts which were 37,800 bushels, compared with 89,600 a week ago and 53,200 last year, included 18 cars local and 7 through. Oats shipments were 273,000 bushels, compared with 280,000 a week ago and 635,000 last year.

In the local cash grain market Saturday soft wheat was unchanged to 2c lower. While there was a light country order demand for dry milling qualities, common qualities of No. 3 were draggy and lower. Low grades also were cheaper. Hard wheat was down 1c. Offerings were light, demand quiet. Nebraska No. 1 hard 11.35 pct. protein sold at $1.38; ordinary No. 2 hard was offered at $1.36. Corn was 2c to 3c lower. The demand was only fair but offerings being light. A pretty good clearance was reported. Oats were steady to 1c lower. Everything was cleaned up, offerings not being heavy. Weekly Butter Review.

CHICAGO, Sept. 3.—Advances in the butter market have brought prices to a level which will permit a more free use of stocks from the freezer. Notwithstanding, however, that the market at the moment appears to have a fairly large number of supporters, there is an undertone of nervousness.

Despite the fact that receipts are lighter and trade fairly active, butter still continues to accumulate in the warehouses. During the first half of the week, the net into-storage movement at 10 markets exceeded that of the week previous by a sizable margin, and during the month of August the holdings of butter at the ten markets increased 11,721,144 pounds as compared with 6,796,129 pounds increase during August, 1926.

Estimates regarding the surplus of butter in the United States on Sept. 1 vary from 20 to 24 million pounds. Even the most conservative estimates place the Sept. 1 holdings as the largest on record.

IRREGULAR MOVES MARK STOCK LIST

Unseasonable Improvement in Money Conditions Has Found Reflection Primarily in the Security Markets.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted financial review says:

"The advent of September finds the fundamentals of business undoubtedly sound and free from any sign of inflation, such as at one time seemed possible as a result of easier money. Undoubtedly the continued surplus of idle funds will stimulate greater business activity, provided no adverse trade development occurs, but so far the unseasonable improvement in money conditions has found its reflection primarily in the security markets. As time goes on, investors very plainly are exercising greater discrimination in their choice of issues, but they evdently see no reason to turn away from the stock market. While the great body of issues moves irregularly, a few of the pivotal issues still are sought eagerly. Evidences of distribution are at hand, but such a market as the present defies generalization.

Capital Flotations Awaited.

"For weeks the investment markets have awaited the passage of Labor day for the wave of new capital flotations then expected. Not in six months has the bond market been in so favorable position to digest new emissions as now. This is not to say that all of the recent bonds have been distributed, but it is to say that the glut is definitely past and no more issues now are on the dealers' shelves than are needed to keep the salesmen active. Wall street awaits anxiously Secretary Mellon's forthcoming announcement on the Government's plan for future financing, particularly its program to meet the Nov. 15 requirements.

New Issues Pending.

"On Mr. Mellon's decision whether this large refunding issue shall bear a near or distant maturity date rests in a sense the immediate fortunes of the bond market. If the Secretary of the Treasury decides not to undertake another long-term issue at this time, the market in corporation bonds of distant maturity is certain to benefit. There are good reasons to advance against the issuance of another long-term Government security, furthermore, and these lead the financial district to guess that the next loan may run for a relatively short period. Certainly it is plain that before long the Government will want to increase its proportion of short-term maturities to simplify its program of debt reduction. Whatever plan of refunding the Government finally adopts, however, the autumn months promise to bring a larger emission of new capital issues. Some authorities in Wall street reckon that before the end of the year the prevailing ease in money rates will stimulate new issues in such volume as to induce another period of hesitation on the part of investors.

Large Part Refunding.

"What many of the authorities have failed to note is that a large proportion of the new capital issues in prospect represent refunding loans and will not, therefore, draw down new funds. They will simply replace old loans.

Improvement Anticipated.

"While the evidence of a possible boom in business during the autumn is not so plain now as it was, improvement still is confidently anticipated. Even at its lowest point, the summer slack did not carry trade down to a subnormal level. None of the various Federal Reserve banks report more than a moderate downturn in wholesale and retail activities in their respective territories.

EASY MONEY IS THE DOMINANT MARKET FACTOR

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—Speculative interest in this week's markets was divided between the irregularly higher movement of stock prices, which carried the industrial average to a new record high, and a sharp rally in cotton futures which advanced to new high levels for the season. A rise in wheat was checked by the publication of a bearish crop estimate, although prices improved later on further reports of frost and rust damage.

Bond prices moved within a rather narrow range, although new offerings were well absorbed and the French Government issues went to new high records on reports of an early refunding of the 8 per cent bonds now outstanding here.

Easy money rates continued to be one of the dominating influences behind the rise in stock prices. Trade news was fair with opinion more or less general that a normal fall upturn was in store. Delayed crop movements are expected to accelerate freight traffic toward the end of the month and an increase in coal shipments also is likely, particularly if the weather turns cold.

Trading in stocks centered largely in a few high grade industrial issues such as U. S. Steel, General Motors, General Electric and American Can, all of which were elevated to new peak prices. Pools marked up a number of specialties in which favorable developments are believed to be pending, but the general list disclosed considerable irregularity.

Extensive Readjustments.

Extensive readjustments of speculative accounts, combined with heavy profit-taking, imparted the irregular trend to the price movement however, the persistent demand for several of the pivotal industrials resulted in the establishment of a new high record by the average of 20 leading industrials. Rails also presented several strong spots but the general trend in that group was reactionary on selling inspired by the disappointing traffic and earnings statements, which compare unfavorably with those of the corresponding peiod last year.

Money was in plentiful supply all week, with no change reported in the 3½ per cent rate on day-to-day loans. Banks called from $10,000,000 to $20,000,000 in loans daily in the last half of the week, but brokers had little difficulty in replacing them. No changes were announced in Federal Reserve rediscount rates. Dividend distributions during the week aggregated about $250,000,000, much of which was expected to find its way back into the securities markets.

The list of new highs included such widely diversified issues as American Machine & Foundry, Allied Chemical, Sears Roebuck, Nash Motors, Kelly-Springfield, American Can, Great Northern Ore, and Shubert Theaters.

Weakness of Oils.

Weakness of the oil shares reflected further gasoline price cuts, and the publication of a number of unfavorable earnings statements by such companies as Atlantic Refining, and Pan-American Petroleum. Pierce Arrow issues sank to new lows on the omission of the preferred dividend.

Heavy buying of the Western Maryland issues was the outstanding feature of the railroad share trading. This was attributed to Taplin interests as part of their program in strengthening their position in the soft coal fields.

Dry Goods Market Review.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—Cotton goods houses were quite generally closed today and so were many other houses in other divisions of the market. Cotton goods remained firm and business for the week was estimated to have equaled the output. Burlaps were slightly easier on early reports. Yarns were irregularly higher. New lines of worsted dress goods for spring will be opened on Tuesday. Staple serges

COTTON RALLIES ON WEATHER AFTER EARLY DECLINE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—Apprehensions of unsettled weather over the week-end led to rallies from an opening decline in the cotton market today. After selling off to 22.55c, December advanced to 22.76c or back to yesterday's closing quotation. But there was a renewal of realizing in late trading, that delivery closing at 22.68c. The general market closed steady, at net declines of 6 to 12 points.

The opening was easy at a decline of 18 to 24 points under liquidation and local or Southern selling, probably influenced by relatively weak Liverpool cables, and reports of beneficial rains in Texas. October declined to 22.29c, and March to 22.75c under these initial offerings but selling was less active than on recent setbacks, and the market soon steadied on pre-holiday covering.

At this season of the year, there is more than usual uncertainty with reference to weather conditions over a two-day adjournment and with the market closed from today until next Tuesday, there was evidently a disposition to cover recent sales. This was stimulated by prospects for rather unsettled weather in the South over Sunday, local map readers predicting probable showers over the Northern part of the belt, while there were reiterated reports of a firm spot basis, particularly in the Southwest.

Realizing or liquidation continued, but in comparatively small volume after the heavy selling reported earlier in the week, and prices just about recovered their initial losses. October sold up to 22.48c and March to 22.98c, but the close was 5 or 10 points off from the best, as demand tapered off and offerings increased slightly in late trading.

It was reported in trade circles that cable advices had been received from Osaka reporting a good inquiry for piece goods abroad and that a large business was expected in the near future. According to these advices, the Indian cotton market was excited, with American cotton relatively cheap.

Private cables from Liverpool reported hedge selling, with local, London and Continental liquidation and an absence of support in the market there, also that there was only a small business in cotton cloths and yarns, with buyers cautious.

At the end of June cotton in warehouses in this country was actually smaller by about 200,000 bales than at the same time last year, the firm says.

STEEL REBATE SCHEME OF BRITAIN APPROVED

Special Cable to Post-Dispatch and New York Evening Post.

LONDON, Sept. 3.—Arthur W. Kiddy, editor of the Bankers' Magazine and financial editor of the London Morning Post, in review says:

"The rebate scheme in the British steel industry is generally approved. It is a system already practiced by our shipping companies and the peculiar post-war difficulties in the steel trade here, coupled with the presure of foreign competition, nudoubtedly called for special measure.

"Imports of iron and steel, which in 1923 totaled in value £14,000,000, more than doubled last year, and are likely to reach £50,000,000 this year. It is hoped here that the present move will lead to closer co-operation between iron and steel manufacturers.

"Financial circles have long held the opinion that big fusions are necessary in the iron and steel industry and some of these are likely to materialize soon.

"The Lancashire cotton industry is showing more signs of tackling its own problems with energy, and an important meeting will be held in Lancashire next week, at which J. M. Keynes will be present. Mr. Keynes' criticism of the short-time policy and high prices have been commanding considerable attention in Lancashire.

"While reimposition of legislative barriers against foreign loans here is not anticipated, some restraint on unwise credits where nothing exists to stimulate our trade is thought desirable, as it is recognized that until our exports increase our power to lend abroad is necessarily weakened.

"Britain's position is greatly complicated, however, by the manner in which such large portions of loans placed in the United States are subequently resold here.

"August activity of many stocks was due largely to speculative purchases on anticipation of buying by the public after the holidays are over. Such expectation, however, frequently fail to be realized and the inflation in certain artificial silk shares is causing anxiety.

"Monetary conditions during September are likely to be comfortable and the British Government, like that of the United States, has large issues of impending maturities to consider, some of which are falling due a month hence, and others early next year.

"Among other European financial problems, Germany's problem of effecting still larger reparation payments in the face of the unfavorable trade figures again requires special emphasis.

"French finances have been handled skillfully, and considerable interest is being taken in the rumored indicated willingness of Washington to acquiesce in France's refunding some £60,000,000 in French Government and municipal loans in the United States."

SHOE STOCK STRONG FEATURE OF TRADE

ST. LOUIS STOCK EXCHANGE, Sept. 3.—International Shoe common sold at a new peak price of 202 at the final session of the week on the local exchange. The closing bid was 3 points higher than last sale basis.

The trade volume generally on the market the past week was about on par with previous week. Rice-Stix common transactions figured largely in the total. A net decline in price for week was shown. Wagner Electric recovered an early week decline. Hydraulic Brick preferred was a feature, rising from 79 at start of week to 81¾ for gain of 3 points.

Why the Constitution Sailed

Esther Ralston in "Old Ironsides," at the American Theater.

"Old Ironsides" Arrives To Open Up the Season At American Theater

FTER a long rest the American Theater opens its doors tonight, not, however, as the home of the spoken drama. That will not come until the latter part of the month, for the first attraction the Market street house will be the movie, "Old Ironsides," a film, its name suggests, of the early days of the American navy when the d ship Constitution sailed the seas. With this picture, which is play three or four weeks, comes something new in the way of a een. This is a silver sheet which takes a projection several times ger than that used in the ordinary picture theaters and on it it is sible, according to report, to get some startling effects.

The first regular stage show which will come to the American , according to present bookings, be Richard Bennett in "The ker," and it seems likely that Manager Beismann will have some or more weeks of "legitimate" attractions this season, a decided gthening of the theatrical year over last winter's short run.

UT at the Shubert-Rialto Jules Kardy is predicting that the Shuberts will send some 35 shows this way but so far no date has been set for the opening. Definite bookings, however, have dy been arranged for a number of dramas and musical comedies. g these, some of them old to St. Louis audiences and some new, "The Student Prince," "American Tragedy," Florence Reed in nghai Gesture," "Countess Maritza," "Blossom Time," "The d Wescotts," Leon Errol in "Yours Truly," "Gay Paree of 1927," icago," "The Spider," "My Maryland," "The Vagabond King," ime," "Broadway," "A Night in Spain," "The Desert Song," d in "The Madcap," "The Ramblers," with Clark and McCulgh, Holbrook Blinn in "The Play's the Thing," Ethel Barrymore "Rose Marie."

AMERICAN BORN," a George M. Cohan comedy, which opened the sixth season of the National Players under the direction of O. D. Woodward at the Empress Theater last night, will tinue until the close of the present week. The story of "Ameri- Born" is of an American who goes to England to claim his antral acres and gets into sundry humorous and sentimental comtions. OUT IN HOLLYWOOD

By MARGARET POST NIEMEYER.

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 3.

IF Marie Antoinette, that ill-fated Queen of France had reigned in the twentieth instead of the eighteenth century, she might have lost her crown, but instead of losing her head as well she would have escaped to America and joined the Movie Colony in Hollywood. That at least is a logical conclusion to judge from the number of Barons, Dukes Princes, Earls and smaller fry of nobility who are appearing every day in films here, and are, I understand, complaining that "there are so many Americans in this business that it is almost impossible for royalty to earn a decent living." And could Marie Antoinette—I have to write both names, otherwise one might confuse her with that other beautiful Queen Marie who actually did start for Hollywood but changed her plans when her free transportation ran out some distance from there—have gone with me to visit the 1600-acre ranch of one of the big companies here a few days ago, I am sure nothing could have induced her to return to her little rustic village set and playhouse at Versailles, charming as it was.

ON this enormous studio estate there was almost every type of structure. There was part of the grim-looking fort from "Beau Geste" and at a little distance on a hill, a stately medieval castle—with a red brick Colonial mansion for its near neighbor. A glance to the left and one saw a French street with its cafes and tempting shops, and at a little distance an Algerian house with its gay broad-striped awnings, and venders of rugs and brassware strolling past. The last set is one for Bebe Daniels' new picture. There is even a river on this ranch, and near it we passed up a dusty road lined on either side with groups of soldiers. Some were just talking and others were sitting by the roadside eating their midday meal from a box lunch, but all were watching a most peculiar-looking cow which was approaching down the road. At one side was a large barn, well stocked with hay, and toward it with a queer running gait, came the animal. Suddenly at the command of "Run her in Napoleon," a huge police dog bounded forward, leaping and barking, and the cow with a series of side kicks, back kicks and head tossings finally reached the barn where with a last vigorous tug at the rear end by "Napoleon" it came apart and out stepped Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton, or rather their doubles, for the task of running around in the broiling sun, carrying 60 or 70 pounds of "prop" cow on one's head is not in the contract of stars.

PASSING by the barn we came to a bit of unfinished scaffolding, and at one end from a number of odd-matched doors a small room had been constructed. On one door in the scrawl of a small boy ran the legend "Wally and Ray." Into this room we were ushered and there were the two comedians looking exactly as they do on the screen, for they use no make-up. They were both in light flannels and open-necked white shirts—and Wally was sporting a large diamond circlet ring—Mr. Beery welcomed me with ceremony to the "gold room," taking its name from the golden oak doors, I suppose. Anyway, it was a great room with two mattresses lying on the floor, chairs full of clothing which was brushed aside so that I might sit down, and costumes of all descriptions hanging on the wall. "Wally" and "Ray" are really just two delightful, over-grown boys, comedians on and off the screen, and there is never a dull moment when they are on the lot. Just outside the door stood Mr. Beery's new car, all nice and shiny, and alongside it a gray, long-nosed machine with the two flags of the commanding officer affixed to it, and in it the chauffeur, his feet on the windshield and cap pulled over eyes, was snoring loudly in the midday sun. There was also a wagon dispensing ice cream cones and cold drinks, the driver of which I am thankful to say was wide

What Will Reinhardt Do to the Movies?

THERE is more than passing interest in the announcement that Max Reinhardt, the Austrian who has done so much for Germany's stage and whose name has been on Morris Gest's praising tongue for years, has jumped into the ring behind his hat, standing up on both feet and shouting to the house.

"I'm going to Hollywood to make movies."

Reinhardt, the stage producer, has decided views on actors, which he has expressed over his signature. His authority to speak in the matter is attested by the present eminence of early Reinhardt troupers like Emil Jannings, Ernst Lubitsch, Conrad Veidt, Werner Krauss, Rudolph Schildkraut and Joseph Schildkraut. Besides, Reinhardt was something of an actor himself.

It was in a little theater in one of Vienna's suburbs, a theater managed by a gentleman who not only paid his actors no salaries but graciously permitted them to pay him for allowing them to act in his productions. Schiller's play, "Die Rauber," was being given and young Reinhardt dearly hoped to play the part of Carl or, failing that, the character of Franz Moor. But he didn't have the cash. Reinhardt could only collect enough kronen to buy himself the part of Spiegelberg, his first stage role. Later came little parts in Salzburg, now known to the world chiefly because of Reinhardt's annual festival for drama-lovers.

One day Otto Brahm, manager of the Deutsches Theater in Berlin, came to Salzburg to see a star in a new stage production. The star wasn't so much, but there was a young spear-holder who impressed despite his awkward movements. Brahm signed him for the Deutsches Theate; Reinhardt had come to Berlin.

Max Reinhardt had an idea that art is not only self-expression but conscious impression on the public. As one of his biographers puts it: "To get as near to the public as possible, to gain its ears, its eyes, in fact, all its senses, even its very soul—that has been his fondest endeavor from the very first." (Good box office news to Joseph M. Schenck, who is financing Reinhardt's first film!)

The history of Reinhardt's triumphs in Berlin, as a producer of everything from spectacles with 2000 supers to one-act plays with casts of three and four, has been told many times. Chiefly he did Shakspeare ("A Midsummer Night's Dream" was his first big success), Shaw, Ibsen, Tolstoy, Gorky, Wilde, Maeterlinck, Euripides and Offenbach's operas. Herr Reinhardt soon became one to be reckoned with. When he did "The Miracle" at the Olympia in London for Charles B. Cochran, one of his 2000 players was a fellow named Ernst Lubitsch, slimmer than now. When he did "Faust" in Berlin at the Deutsches Theater in March, 1909, this same Lubitsch played Wagner, Werner Krauss was Mephisto (Emil Jannings' role in Murnau's film), and Conrad Veidt was Faust.

Here is Reinhardt, who is soon to meet Hollywood's colony of film stars, talking about actors in a tract signed by him and named, "On the Importance of the Actor":

"Today and for all time, man must stand at the center of all theatrical acts, man as actor. Where the actor is also a dramatic writer, he has the power to create a world according to his own image, thus awakening the drama to its highest form of life, like Shakspeare and Moliere. Whosoever has anything to do with the theater should be an actor . . . Only when the director, the stage manager, the poet, the dramatic teacher, the scenic artist, the musician, are all actors, when everyone on the stage and everyone in the audience is an actor, and joins in the play, then, and then only then, the theater fulfills its highest mission.

"The individual star, who tyrannizes a theater with his moods, who financially and artistically represses everything and everybody around him, who does not look for good plays but for star roles, is the most

"Second Thoughts -- on -- First Nights"

By Alison Smith

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.

A BELATED second thought on the first night of "Peggy Ann" was confided to us last week by the editor of one of those more erudite weeklies furthest north of Broadway. "It's the Cinderella story," he said sorrowfully, "written by one who no longer believes in it."

For all the plaintive implications in this sad thought it was quite evident that he liked it that way. It explains the presence of a devoted minority at this show who ordinarily shun musical comedy as they would amusement parks. If you have once had Cinderella ladled out to you in lingering, treacly doses, you are in a mood to appreciate the cynical charm of that particularly mercenary little baggage from Glens Falls.

If the authors of "Peggy Ann," however, no longer believe in Cinderella, there are plenty of their patrons left who do. Certainly it isn't their disillusions that have kept the piece alive and flourishing for nine months at the Vanderbilt. And this is where the half unconscious guile of Rodgers, Hart and Fields comes in. You can take it both ways. It has the same quality which has made "Saturday's Children" (with overtones as sardonic as Schopenhauer) pass as a tender, whimsical little study of married life. This, too, has registered at the box office as the coffers of the Booth will show. There is nothing new about this achievement. After all, mothers for generations have been sentimentally crooning Mother Goose to infants who like "Taffy Was a Welshman" none the less because it is one of the most gory and merciless of rhymes.

SO "Peggy-Ann" and "Saturday's Children" have been all things to all playgoers and as a reward have filled their respective theaters since early winter. The two are close to the head of the survivors' list as you look backward before the deluge of new plays which will swamp the dramatic departments tomorrow night. The musical show came into the Vanderbilt on Dec. 27; Maxwell Anderson's comedy arrived at the Booth on Jan. 26.

Still higher in the endurance test is "The Ladder" whose extraordinary pulmotor existence is making dramatic history though not exactly from a literary viewpoint. It opened at the Waldorf last October. A little further down is "The Squall," which appeared a month later, was briefly dismissed by the critics as "one of those things" and has run to fair audiences ever since. January in addition to "Saturday's Children" brought "The Road to Rome" which, through these weeks of cool weather and visiting buyers, has again put up the standing room only sign of its earlier weeks.

"The Spider," which opened in March, is still drawing delighted squeals of terror from large audiences and "The Second Man," arriving in April, will move on only before the relentless schedule of the Theater Guild. April and early May also brought "Hit the Deck," "The Circus Princess," "A Night in Spain" and the "Grand Street

Pictures, Good Ones, Had Record-Breaking Week In the Local Theaters

By NIE.

LAST week proved that interest in motion pictures is not entirely confined to one syllable audiences which look for sex appeal, Cinderella plots or stupidly happy endings. Four or five fine films, far above the average of the ordinary program picture, did a tremendous business in as many theatres, Loew's State alone taking in more than $42,000 in the week with "The Big Parade" which had already played St. Louis twice for extended runs at extended prices. This established a record for an ordinary week's business in a St. Louis picture house, other claims to the contrary notwithstanding. As a result "The Big Parade" will be held over for another week at Loew's and will probably get about half that amount for its second try—and $20,000 is a good week any old time here. Incidentally this same film broke all world's records for a single week when it played to the amazing sum of $144,267 at the Roxy Theatre in New York and came right back for a second week of $137,893. No wonder the producers out in Hollywood can scatter their money to the four winds when a picture will pay for itself in one run in one theater in one city.

"Metropolis," as was expected, did not hold up to the way in which it started off last Saturday and Sunday at the Missouri. A great picture, from a technical standpoint, it held little interest for the average movie goer and most of the people who saw it failed to find it entertaining. The enormous business done Saturday and Sunday, however, gave the Missouri a week above the ordinary.

Down at the Ambassador "Beau Geste" had a deservedly fine week, while "What Price Glory," in its third run, stood 'em up for seven days at the Grand Opera House. "The Country Doctor," at the St. Louis was another good one which pulled 'em in all week and even the Dempsey-Sharkey fight film is said to have attracted $11,000 to the Garrick during its first week there, which is a pile of money for a burlesque house.

THE previous record at Loew's was some $38,000 taken in by "The Son of the Sheik" played just after Valentino's death, when the desire to see the popular star's last film amounted almost to hysteria. That picture also was held over for a second week but the business dropped to about $14,000.

The future of the Grand Central still hangs in the balance but the plan for big pictures and long runs there has been entirely discarded. Paramount, with its extensive holdings in the Missouri and Ambassador, refused flatly to allow its bigger films to play in a theater in which it had no interest, and Metro—which is really Marcus Loew—would turn loose none of its greater attractions for a rival house. That ended the hope of long runs.

It is said that Warner Brothers have been trying to make a deal for the Grand Central to put Vitaphone in that house, but so far no arrangement of that sort is in sight. The Warners may have forgiven, but they could live to be patriarchs in Israel before they could forget, the day when the wooden horse of Greece was ridden into Trojan camp by way of the Capitol Theater. That triple play—Charley to Spiros to George—is said to have cost the Warners, who outnumbered the Skourases by just one brother, an even $170,000 in cash. For six months they paid a weekly rental on the Capitol and were able to keep their Vitaphone going there about 10 weeks. The rest of the time the house was dark, but the rent went on just the same. It would have to be a pretty good proposition which would drag them into St. Louis and a Skouras house again.

Two changes are to be made in the stage shows of the movie houses. Herbert Rawlinson leaves the Ambassador next Friday night and on the following day Eddie Lowry will step in there as master of ceremonies. Lowry, who put in a week at the Missouri a year ago, has been playing in London this summer at one of the night clubs, but got back to New York yesterday.

Out at the Missouri, Jimmy Hodges is to take charge of the vaudeville end of the program, also on next Saturday. Hodges, a St. Louisan, has been touring with a show of his own and has always been a popular entertainer. No definite date has been set for the return of Brooke Johns and, if he comes back at all, it probably will not be until the latter part of October.

The departure of Don Albert, as the conductor of Loew's orchestra and the producer of the stage shows there, casts some doubt on whether or not the Sunday noon stage concerts, which really brought money into the house last winter, will be resumed. It was Albert's scheme and he built it up largely with his own following. A new conductor would have to start in all over again and, in addition, would encounter some new expenses.

The musicians' union last year is said to have made Mr. Loew a very fair price for the extra hour's work each Sunday. If the concerts are resumed the price per man is likely to be doubled. A few bad, rainy Sundays would probably set a loss that could not be overcome for the musicians would get out their raincoats and goloshes and turn up at the theater but Mr. and Mrs. Audience, not being paid $10 or so an hour to make the trip, would simply stay at home.

INCIDENTALLY. the way in which the movie theaters in Chicago rushed into the fray and closed their doors last week to try and force a settlement and a definite understanding with the theatrical labor unions is an indication of the unrest felt by the cinema owners. There is a disposition, on the part of the theater men to go to the mat with their union employes in most parts of the country. Here in St. Louis affairs are pretty well established with the wage scales with the musicians, machine operators and stage hands all set for from one to two years.

Follies" still running in varying degrees of prosperity.

NOT one of the June arrivals lived to see this August. And July brings us up to the assorted Follies, Padlocks, Manhatters and Negro shows, some of them balanced more or less precariously against the first stirrings of the new season in August. Heading the list, with a record stretching from September to September, is "Broadway" which opened on the 16th of this month a year ago. Except, of course, for the not wholly alphabetical precedence of a piece called "Abie's Irish Rose," which seems to have had a good run, too.

AFTER tomorrow, of course, the deluge. Labor day may not still be the official opening date of the new season, but it brings out with a bang a list of openings which seems formidable enough to those dramatic reporters who have been dozing comfortably through the apathetic weeks of summer. The list for next week is headed by the dramatic version of the Pickwick Papers made by Cosmo Hamilton and Frank C. Reilly and with John Cumberland in the role of Mr. Pickwick. And there will follow in bewildering succession:

"Secret Service Smith," a detective melodrama written by Lincoln Osborn and based on "The Black Magician," by R. T. Scott.

"Mister Romeo," a play by Harry Wagstaff Gribble and Wallace A. Manheimer with J. C. Nugent heading its cast.

"Good News," a musical comedy with a college campus for its background. Mary Lawlor and John Price Jones are the leading undergraduates.

THE week after this one emerges serenely with nine openings for its monday night. Some of these, of course, will be shifted and a few may drop out but at best it will be a frenzied evening for the dramatic desk. At present, however, the list stands as follows:

"Yellow Sands," a Devonshire comedy written by Eden Phillpotts and his daughter, Adelaide. It was a decided success in England and will be played here by a London company.

"The Baby Cyclone," a George M. Cohan farce, with Grant Mitchell as the principal player.

"Revelry," a dramatic version of the Samuel Hopkins Adams novel made by Maurine Watkins, the author of "Chicago."

"The Wild Man of Borneo," a comedy by Marc Connelly and Herman J. Mankiewicz with George Hassell heading the cast.

"Women Go On Forever," another comedy with Mary Boland, said to skate on even thinner ice than "Cradle Snatchers." It was written by David Rubin, the author of "Devils."

"The Triumphant Bachelor," an Owen Davis comedy, with Robert Ames in the leading role.

"My Maryland," a Shubert musical show, based on the "Barbara Frietchie" play by Clyde Fitch.

"Creoles," a play of old New Orleans written by Samuel Shipman and Kenneth Perkins. Allan Dinehart is the principal player.

"Is He Guilty," a play by Elmer Rice adapted from the German of Rudolph Lothar and Paul Rosenhayn. Mildred Florence and Orlando Daly are in the cast.

What this night is going to be like, if all these plays hold to their schedule, is a thought warranted to send any dramatic editor into thorough and prolonged apoplexy.

cept fo. Alice Baker, Cl[illegible] Armstrong, Edward Schilling, Hal Price, R[illegible] all other members of the cast are newcomers.

Isa Kremer, singer of ballads and folksongs, will be the headliner on the bill which comes to the Orpheum today. The photoplay attraction will be "Sally in Our Alley," with Richard Arlen and Shirley Mason. Miss Kremer is making her debut in vaudeville, her efforts heretofore have been confined to the concert platform and to making phonograph records. A native of Russia, she has toured Europe a number of times. She sings in 12 languages and her vaudeville repertoire includes "Ush Ya Colada," a folksong of the province of Koursk (Great Russia); "Le Petit Navire," a French cradle song; "La Ciuciara," a Russian number; "Burschenlied," a German drinking song, and "Little Sparrow," a Kentucky folksong. "Senator" Murphy, billed as "America's Political Humorist," who has appeared here on numerous occasions, returns with a new line of chatter. Ward and Van, who were once known as the De Michele Brothers, musicians, are also on the bill, as are Reck and Rector, who perform equilibristic feats, and two other attractions.

Today finds the Gayety ushering in the season at that former home of burlesque by presenting the Lazone Players in musical and dramatic stock. Theater patrons will find this attraction entirely different from the shows which the Gayety has been offering for years, the new policy that the management has adopted this season calling for musical and dramatic shows combined into one performance. Over 40 people constitute the personnel, among them being May Blossom, Mabel Mason, Marie Lazone, Fanny Mason, Vernon Gillmore, H. Lee Allen, Dick Mason Jr., Harry Harvey, Larry Doyle and the Lyric Harmony Four. "Smiles," by Allison Olliver, in three acts and 12 scenes, will be the opening play.

a. The new Beery-Hatton ly is entitled "Now We're in Air" and is a burlesque of s," Paramount's newly re- d epic of the air.

AVING these pleasant hosts drove on towards a border n of the Sahara Desert, Bebe Daniels, that dashing ne is working as a in her new play, "She's ." Bebe having mas- ed as a Spanish gentleman great success both from the inment and boxoffice point , is doing much the same with a desert setting. Be- Moorish type house with its aped balcony and exterior of stairs, stood a large of white-robed, brilliant- Arabs watching two very perspiring Indian showmen ing a sort of shell game couple of wine bottles and which looked like a huge cannon cracker. The little gilt overed exhibition table was ed with cork, handkerchiefs, and other appurtenances of onjurer, and the two men quickly from trick to while the gazing crowd ex- excitedly after each, "Oog-Oog-Lah" louder and louder. as the men were sure they pretty good and making a hit with the onlookers, their donkey, which was standing ding it pretty dull, started away. The showmen after it and in doing so ted down a most powerful, villainous sheik who was just down the steps of the house. Furious, he raises "black-snake" to strike the ders when zip, out flies a ar which cuts the whip off handle, and Bebe, for 'tis her, comes swaggering down eps. A little later the show- were much chagrined to learn er that the supposedly flat- "Oog-Lah's" falling on their was the equivalent of "Ba-" or "That's the Bunk!" Daniels made a splendid ca- ro and doubtless she will equally as good a sheik.

N our way out of the ranch we met Corinne Griffith driving with her husband, Mr. co, in their perfectly ap- ed landaulet. Her glorious hair was uncovered and her irn was snuggled up beside it was lunch time and esday, the natural thing to was to drive to THE restaur- in Hollywood, where every sday and Saturday the their imitators and ad- rs flock to lunch. And the t who can squeeze in is y ready to pay any price to a remote corner of this sanc- in the hope of seeing some of elebrities.

spot is really beautiful and is a feeling of opulence as one reaches the head of airs—for it is upstairs—and by the head waiter with his sive card of reservations. woe be to him who has no vation for Wednesday or Sat- y if he wishes to enter these portals. Inside there are r-decked tables set for large small parties, and in the cen- the room a long table with en or so large silver plat- and bowls behind each of stands an irreproachable rd to see that your order you just as it should, be it r cold. Overhead there is a golden canopy in the cen- and large Venetian glass chan- with their hanging pen- which catch and reflect the ht.

AST Wednesday one of the gayest parties I noticed was that of Virginia Lee Corbin. her guests were Lois Mo- Janet Gaynor, Louise Brooks, line Day and Ruth Corbin. Reubens, stunning in and white, had as her guest Banky, the bride of Rod cque.

ra La Plante in a pale pink and white fox fur was lunch- with her sister, and Virginia and Blanche Sweet were to- r.

the gayest table of all was e known as the "bachelor's" rather a misnomer, as I most of them are married. there were Tom Mix, Noah , Stuart Holmes, Joseph von erg and Eddie Clayton. cheon over I met "Princess" Negri just stepping into a Rolls-Royce sport touring with her husband, Prince , at the wheel.

er I went to see Jetta Gou- that tremendously tempera- actress. She, too, was playing a desert fort scene and my shoes are always full of sand these days from visiting desert sets—over which the French flag was flying. Miss Goudal appeared to be the only person under fire at the moment, but she was keeping a battery of lights and an artillery of cameras busy. She was garbed as a Spanish girl in a soft white dress with red ribbons, and her black hair was swathed tightly about her forehead and ending in a huge, amazing knot high at the back. Part of the set represented a soldiers' hospital and the convalescents were sitting about in wheel chairs, reading, playing cards, smoking or sleeping. A gate to the fort swung open, cameras clicked, directors shouted and things began to look quite interesting and I was just on the point of asking what all the shooting was about when Miss Goudal spied me and became so violently temperamental at the idea of a visitor that I was forced to retire. If anyone should care to peruse the subject himself I believe the answer will be found in "The Forbidden Woman." I suppose that title alone should have been warning enough to me.

A few steps away was a pretty vine-covered white house and several men were sowing quantities of what appeared to be oats in the ground in front of it. I imagined they were going to use birds in the scene and were trying to attract them near the house. But not at all. Just then another man came along with a sprinkling can and began watering the seeds. Upon questioning them I learned that Gilda Gray was to do a scene there in a day or so and they wanted to be sure and have a good lawn ready.

"In a day or so." Imagine. That's confidence in the climate of California for you.

dangerous enemy of the essentially composite art of the theater. The star who finds his field of activity today here, tomorrow there, who skims the cream of everything, permits nothing else to grow up beside him; and the mere business manager who speculates with that star—these are the two most terrible diseases which threaten the present theater with decay."

When Reinhardt gets to Hollywood—that should be a news story!

TULSA TO BUILD LARGE ZOO

TULSA, Okla.—A Zoological society has been organized in Tulsa with the announced intention of establishing a large zoological garden near the city. Construction work will be started on the zoo immediately. Both summer and winter quarters will be provided for virtually all mammals, large and small, which are able to survive the North American climate.

"We realize that it will take many months and perhaps years before we have the zoo which we are planning," W. O. Doolittle, Superintendent of Tulsa Parks, said.

Club of Railroad Employes.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—A club to be organized under the name of Missouri Pacific lines employes and patrons' Ozark hunting and fishing lodge plans to establish a new hunting and fishing club in the White River Valley. A clubhouse will be built on the North Fork and White Rivers near Norfolk.

Teaches Same Class 45 Years.

BRYAN, Tex.—H. O. Boatwright of Bryan, president of the First National Bank, said to be the oldest bank between Dallas and Houston, has been teaching the same Sunday School class in the First Baptist church for 45 years. He has been identified with the bank for 48 years.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—Actors and actresses who played their parts for a bygone generation filled "The Little Church Around the Corner" today as the curtain fell on the last act in the career of Amelia Bingham, actress and producer, who died at her home here last Thursday.

In the crowd of a thousand men and women at the services were many who had appeared in productions starring Mrs. Bingham and hundreds of theater goers who remembered her as one of the great stars of the American stage a quarter of a century ago. The service was read by the Rev. C. B. Alford, chaplain of the Episcopal Actors' Guild, assisted by the Rev. W. L. Phillips. Burial was in Woodlawn Cemetery.

REED ASSAILS M'NARY-HAUGEN FARM RELIEF BILL

Would Not Support It If It Brought Him Highest Office in Land, Missouri Senator Declares.

ATTACKS POTENTIAL G. O. P. CANDIDATES

Says Lowden Is Unfit for Office and Blames Hoover for Present Plight of Farmers.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HARDIN, Mo., Sept. 3.—Senator Reed would not support the McNary-Haughen farm bill if it brought him the highest office within the gift of the American people, he declared here last night in an address dealing largely with the farm relief problems.

Assailing Secretary of Commerce Hoover and Frank O. Lowden, potential Republican candidates for President, as well as President Coolidge, Reed told the Ray County Old Settlers' picnic crowd that the farmer himself was largely to blame for his present condition because he continued to vote the Republican ticket and for perpetuation of a protective tariff. He was introduced as the "next President of the United States."

Referring to congressional leaders who posed as special friends of the farmer, Reed provoked a laugh when he said: "When one of those fellows tells you he is devoting his life to your interest, you hold your pocketbook with one hand and reach for your revolver with the other."

Calls Lowden Unfit for Office.

Regarding Lowden, Reed recalled the 1920 slush scandal and declared Lowden was unfit for the office, but his most biting assault was directed at Hoover, whom the Senator held largely responsible for the farmers' plight.

As food administrator in the war, Senator Reed said, Hoover had held American wheat down to about $2 a bushel. He charged Hoover with abitrarily fixing the prices, enabled big moneyed interest to sell products to the farmer at a high level and forced the farmer to sell his products at a low fixed level. Bankruptcy was inevitable, the Senator asserted.

Senator Reed said he was ready to vote for a co-operative feature that would be helpful, but never would consent to the fee-fixing provisions of the McNary-Haugen bill which, he asserted, would rob the farmer.

Would Not Vote for Bill.

"The proponents of this bill have not told you the Government would take a part of your profits for this proposed board, but I am telling you about it," he said. "Once the farmer knows about this bill he will oppose it, too. So far as I am concerned, I would not vote to take away the farmers' profit even for the highest office in the land."

Reed said prohibition has contributed to the farms' ills and so had the advent of the motor car, because both had harmed the market for grain. But he held that Hoover and the Republican party with its tariff were largely responsible for what he termed the robbery, notf only of the farmers, but of all the people

Senator Reed concluded with an assault on Andrew W. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury, and the Pennsylvania election frauds.

RIGHT TO HANDLE THEATER COOLING SYSTEMS DISPUTED

Engineers Claim They Should Operate Refrigeration Plants as Pressure Machines.

The claim of Local Union No. 2, International Steam and Operating Engineers, to the handling of cooling systems in St. Louis theaters, work now done by union electricians, is based on conditions in other large cities and on the fact that refrigeration plants are pressure machines, J. L. Cooper, business agent for the engineers, said yesterday.

Cooper points to the fact that, although the electricians have handled the cooling systems in local theaters, engineers are employed for the work in the large theaters of other cities. Pressure in the systems sometimes reaches 1300 pounds and Cooper declares an explosion in a local theater about a year ago was caused by an excess of pressure in the cooling plant. He also stresses the point that engineers run the refrigeration machinery in the ice factories and industrial plants having local refrigeration.

There is no law requiring the employment of engineers for the work, but Cooper and his associates are seeking public support in an effort to obtain the work as a safety measure. Union electricians however, declare the work is theirs, since the cooling systems are powered by electricity, and characterize the efforts of the engineers to be a "work grabbing" move.

Anaconda Sets Another Record, Taking Illinois Handicap

DWARD GRAY ALSO LOWERS TRACK MARK IN SEVENTH

ckey Lee Hardy Rides Three Victors — Queenston Defeats Watchword and Pays $49.80 for $2.

By Dent McSkimming.

Two track records fell in the ex- nded program of eight races at airmount Park yesterday after- on, Anaconda setting a new mark r the mile and an eighth in the linois Handicap in beating Smil- g Gus, and Edward Gray estab- hing a new track record in the le and three-sixteenths event, hich closed the program.

In each case the finish was a rilling duel in which the winner arely established his superiority, naconda holding on just long ough to outlast Smiling Gus and dward Gray coming from behind o nose out Brig o' Doon in the last yards. The crowd of 10,000 nd reason for enthusiastic cheer- g when favorites won the first, ird, fourth, fifth and seventh ces. On the other hand, the de- at of Watchword in the second used anything but a riotous er.

Hardy Has Won 165 Races.

Jockey Lee Hardy scored three ctories, bringing his total for the ar up to 165. He leads the untry in winning mounts. Yes- day his winners were Bradley's y, Yeddo and High Life.

Because of the obstreperousness Anaconda, the start was momen- ly delayed and when the bar- was sprung, Scimitar bolted the rail from the center of the ck and jammed into Arabian Wooldridge, throwing all three their stride. However, they re all in a line as they passed grandstand, except Anaconda ich was three lengths in front running like a scared rabbit. mmy Root sent Fresco after An- nda but Hardy and Chilcutt re- ined their mounts to hold third fourth positions as they went und the clubhouse turn and wn the back stretch.

A Thrilling Finish.

While they all waited for Ana- da to weaken, Meyer kept his ad up and held his advantage.

Brooms Victor in $55,000 Hopeful Stakes; Chance Play Takes Cup Race at Saratoga

Brookmeade Stable 2-Year-Old, an Outsider in Betting, Captures Juvenile Classic From Field of 17 Under Good Ride by Jockey Maiben.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Sept. 3.—Scoring over a field that comprised the cream of the juveniles both east and west, and amid the cheers of 20,000 race fans, the Brookmeade Stable's Brooms, an outsider in the betting, won the Hopeful Stakes, which carried a net value of $55,050 here today. His victory was a clean-cut one and stamped the colt a good one. Harry Payne Whitney's Victorian was second and Nassak, in the Rancocas Stable's silks, an odds-on favorite, third. Victorian gathered in $6000, while Nassak earned $3000. The six and a half furlongs were run in the good time of 1:20 flat.

The race was not a true run one There was a lot of crowding in the early part and Dodgson, on whom the westerners placed their faith, was caught in a jam and went down. Mack Garner, who rode the colt, escaped serious injury.

Seventeen In Race.

Seventeen two-year-olds paraded for the event. They lined up at delay, they were sent away to an the barrier and after a two-minute excellent start. Brooms, displaying unusual speed, rushed into the lead, followed by Victorian with Excalibur third. There was not much in the running position in the early part, but in the stretch Maiben brought Brooms to the outside, where the going was best, while Workman kept Victorian in the deep going. Brooms held on gamely to win by a length, while Victorian beat Nassak three lengths for the place.

Saratoga Cup Race.

The Saratoga Cup run over the mile and six furlongs route was won by Chance Play with Forever and Ever second and Espino third. Chance Play dashed to the front and led throughout to win by a half a length over Forever and Ever with Espino third half a length back.

Flying Al won the opening event, a mile dash over a heavy track. Bruns the odds-on favorite, was second with Gnome II, third. Bruns led the field to the far turn, where Flying Al took command and won in a drive by a head. Bruns took the place by four lengths from Gnome II.

J. E. Widener's Lorenzo won the Saratoga Steeplechase run over the two and a half mile course, leading from start to finish. He won like a real jumper. Thorndale was second and Madrigal II, third. The race was worth $7000. Lorenzo jumped away to the lead, and won by four lengths. Thorndale was second, a like distance ahead of Madrigal II.

PENNANT PROGRESS

The New York Giants moved into second place in the National League race by defeating the Phillies twice yesterday and are but two full games behind Pittsburg in first place.

Pittsburg defeated the Cardinals and dropped the champions to fourth place, while the Cubs lost to Cincinnati and fell to third position, two percentage points behind the Giants.

The Cardinals are now one and one-half games behind the Cubs, an equal number behind the Giants and three and one-half games behind the league leading Pirates.

The Cardinals would have to win two games while the Cubs are losing two to reach third place and could move into second place if the Giants lost two while the champions were winning two. To pass Pittsburg the Cardinals would have to win four games while the Pirates lose four.

Browns Score in Ninth to Beat Tigers, 11-10; 30 Men Take Part in Loose Game

Kenny Williams Hits His 15th Homer of Season and Third of Series; Eight Pitchers Fail to Impress, Except Ernie Nevers, Who Hurls a Perfect Ninth, Fanning 2 Men.

Thirty ballplayers took part in a merry roundelay of sport yesterday, the scene being Sportsman's Park and the actors—30—count 'em—30—members of the St. Louis Browns and the Detroit Tigers. When the curtain, long delayed, finally fell on the farce, it was discovered that the Browns had won by an 11-10 score.

Eight of the cast were pitchers or, at least, were so designated on the programs furnished the 2000 fans in the audience. As a matter of fact, seven of them were miscast, the only one who did any starring being Ernie Nevers. Ernie appeared in the ninth act and fanned two Tigers and threw out a third.

It was the fourth victory for the Browns in five games played and the winning run was pushed over by the Browns in the ninth after the Tigers, scoring six in the eighth, had tied it at 10-10. In this ninth, Rice, who has a faculty of walking to first, drew a pass from Billings, the ex-Brown University collegian.

Bing Drives Run Across.

Sisler sacrificed perfectly and Williams was considered too dangerous, so he was passed. This angered Bing Miller, who picked on the first pitch and sent it to left for a single, Rice scoring.

Crowder's start was not especially brilliant even though the Tigers scored only one run. Warner walked and stole to open the game and, after Blue had flied out, scored when McManus punched a single to center. Heilmann rolled out, advancing McManus, and Fothergill walked, only to be nailed on the rear-end of a double steal.

With O'Rourke out in the Browns' half, Harry Rice drew his fifth straight pass and went to third on Sisler's single. Collins took Williams' smash and threw to Tavener for a force of Sisler, but Tavener, trying for a double play, threw wild to first, Rice scoring and Williams reaching second to languish there when Collins threw Bing Miller out.

Crowder issued single passes in both the second and third, but the Browns, in each inning, pulled double plays to help him out. It didn't quite work out that way in

MISS CATHERINE MAGUIRE SETS HIGH JUMP MARK

Northern California A. C. Wins Women's National Meet With 54 Points—St. Louis Ties for Fourth.

By the Associated Press.

EUREKA, Cal., Sept. 3. — The Northern California Athletic Club, with a total of 54 points, today captured the national track and field championship for women. Three world's records and five national marks were shattered by the greatest assemblance of feminine stars ever to appear on the Pacific Coast.

Other teams finished as follows:

Pasadena A. C., 29; Patterson (N. J.) Recreation Club, 14; Western Association, St. Louis, 9; Illinois Women's A. C., Chicago, 9; St. Bonaventure, New York, 3.

Helen Filkey, crack hurdler of the Illinois A. C., set a new world's record in the 60-yard hurdles. Her time was 8 1-5 seconds, bettering her own previous mark by one-fifth of a second.

A second world's record went by the boards when Margaret Jenkins, Northern California, tossed the javelin 127 feet 3½ inches. Her three closest competitors all were Californians.

PITTSBURG FINDS HAINES, H. BELL AND LITTLEJOHN FOR EIGHTEEN SAFETIES

Big Jess Removed From Mound After First Inning, in Which He Yields Five Hits and Six Runs; Then Champions Fold Up and Are Easy for Hill.

By J. Roy Stockton,
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 3.—Pittsburg's slugging Pirates buried the Cardinals under a carload of base hits this afternoon, blasting Jesse Haines from the slab in one inning, collecting a total of 18 safeties and pushing the world champions into fourth place by scoring a shutout victory, 14 to 0. Carmen Hill, the spectacle-wearing righthander, held the Cardinals to five singles and was master all the way, the Pirates giving him a six-run lead in the opening frame.

Rogers Hornsby and the New York Giants by trouncing the Phillies twice, moved into second place in the National League race ahead of the Cardinals and the Cubs. The Cubs again lost to Cincinnati and fell to third position.

The Champions now would have to bunch two victoies with two defeats by Chicago and New York to regain second place and would have to win four games while the Pirates are losing four to pass Pittsburg.

With Alexander and Haines, the best pitchers in the league, battered and beaten by the leaders, th prospects of Donie Bush and his men being overtaken in the pennant race are not bright.

As in the first game of the series, when they pounded Alexander and shot the infield full of holes, the Pirates today gave an impressive demonstration of their power. Haines had won 21 games. He had beaten the Braves, the Phillies and the Dodgers and had beaten them by great pitching. But today the same Jesse Haines looked like a bush leaguer.

That Awful First Inning.

Big Jess stopped Lloyd Waner, always a thorn in the side of the champions, in the first inning, but Barnhart walked and Paul Waner was hit by a pitched ball. Wright slapped a single to left center, scoring Barnhart and sending Paul Waner to third. The fleetfooted Waner making Hafey's arm look like an ordinary wing, instead of the greatest in baseball.

Pie Traynor continued the bombardment, shooting a single to center and Paul Waner scored and Wright raced to third. Grantham smashed one through the box to center field and Wright scored and Traynor reached third. Harris hit to Maranville, who had a chance for a double play, but the Rabbit fumbled and had to be contented with a play at first, Traynor scoring and Grantham moving to second.

After each blow there was a conference. But it appeared to be bad policy to take Haines out for any pitcher. And Big Jess continued to pitch. Earl Smith belted a single to center and Grantham scored and when Haines, trying to put too much on the ball, made a wild pitch, Smith went all the way to third. Haines was cracking under the heavy fire now and Carmen Hill, a weak hitter even among pitchers, slapped him for a single to right, a blow that crashed against the right-field wall, scoring Smith with the sixth run of the inning.

Lloyd Waner, up for the second time, flied again to Hafey, but the Cardinals were beaten.

Their Ace Trumped; O'Farrell's Men Lose Their Power and Pep

Under all sorts of misfortune, against the stiffest opposition, the Cardinals have battled on valiantly, full of fight, confident no matter how great the handicap. But with Haines beaten, Jess Haines, the world series hero, winner of 21 games, the World Champions folded up. They lost their pepper and aggressiveness and in the innings after the first any team could have beaten them and any pitcher could have stopped them.

Herman Bell took up the lost cause in the second inning and in his three frames on the hill he was lambasted for six hits and four runs. With one out in the second Paul Waner singled off Toporcer's glove, Wright singled to right, Traynor walked, filling the bases and Grantham walked, forcing Paul Waner over the plate. Harris slammed a single to left and Wright and Traynor scored.

There was no more scoring in that inning and Bell turned back the enemy with one hit in the third, but in the fourth Traynor singled to center, continued to third when Holm missed the bounding ball and scored on Grantham's single to right. That made it ten to nothing, but the Pirates were not through yet. Carlisle Litlejohn went to the hill in the fifth and the league leaders gave him a rough reception.

Lloyd and Paul Again.

Lloyd Waner started with a scratch single to Maranville, the Rabbit, fumbling a grounder far to his right. Barnhart walked and Paul Waner slashed a triple down the right field line, scoring his two comrades. Wright and Traynor went out, but Grantham singled to right and Paul Waner scored.

Littlejohn improved after that inning and the Pirates scored only one more run, increasing heir total to 14 in the seventh on Paul Waner's double and Traynor's single.

Inability to hit, a weakness that has confounded the Cardinals all season, prevented them from getting a running start in their fir inning. Hill was none too goc

TILDEN AND HUNTER TO PLAY WILLIAMS AND JOHNSTON FOR TIT

FOUR DAVIS CUP STARS IN U. S. DOUBLES FINAL

Williams and Johnston Lose a Set to Lott and Doeg and Play Extra Games in Final Set.

By the Associated Press.

BROOKLINE, Mass., Sept. 3.—The four members of America's 1927 Davis cup team will battle the finals Monday in the forty-fifth annual national doubles championship tennis tournament at the Longwood Cricket Club here.

The "Big Four" of United States tennis, William T. Tilden II, and his partner, Francis T. Hunter, New Rochelle, N. Y., and Richard N. Williams, Philadelphia, and his new teammate this year, William "Little Billy" Johnston, San Francisco, came through an interesting bracket of semifinals today in which both teams were forced to display their best tennis.

Tilden and Hunter defeated John Hennessey, Indianapolis, and Lucien Williams, Chicago, holders of the American clay court title, 5—7, 6—2, 6—2, 6—2. Williams and Johnston also were driven to four sets before they could eliminate the youthful Davis cup team alternates, John Doeg, Santa Monica, Cal., and George M. Lott Jr., Chicago, [illegible], 6—4, 10—12, 6—4.

Hunter Off His Game.

The result of the first set of the Tilden-Hunter, Hennessey-Williams match was a surprise. The clay court kings had eliminated the French champions, Henri Cochet and Jacques Brugnon, yesterday, but Tilden and Hunter were favored to win in three straight sets.

Hunter was weak from the start. In the fourth game Hennessey and Williams broke through him with a bombardment of fast drives which he netted. Williams and Hennessey continued to direct their attack at him exclusively and time after time they yielded points on errors. In the eighth game he lost service again while Tilden's appearances at the line invariably brought game to the Davis cup alternates.

Tilden Changes Tide.

The second set brought breaks through Williams twice and with Tilden at the peak of his game, things moved quickly, although Hunter netted often and Williams and Hennessey played an all-court game well. The third set went much the same except that Hunter failed again at the line in the fourth game. Hennessy dropped the first and fifth while Williams' service was taken by the Wimbledon winners in the seventh.

The fourth set see-sawed back and forth for six games, in the seventh came a break through Williams which opened the way for Tilden and Hunter to take the next two for set and match. The young clay court titleholders were pitted against experienced and the veteran strategy of Tilden, which was too much for them despite the obvious ability they displayed for first-grade tennis.

Lott and Doeg Defeated.

The Williams-Johnston, Lott-Doeg match was much the same story with the inexperience of the two youths counting against them. Yet they had two youthful characteristics which did count, determination and endurance, and it brought them the third set after they had lost the first two.

The match was unusual in the ability of all four players to serve consistently and win their games.

Mixed Doubles Results.

In the national mixed doubles tournament, Tilden and Mrs. Franklin I. Mallory, New York, were eliminated by Jean Borotra, France, and Mrs. Charlotte Hosmer Chapin, of Springfield 7—6, 8—6.

One fourth round match was completed with Eileen Bennett, England, and Henri Cochet, France, defeating Kea Bouman, Holland, and Jacques Brugnon, France, 6—3, 3—6, 6—4.

The national veterans' doubles title was won by Fred Hagge and Dr. William Rosenbaum, both of New York, who defeated E. Wallace Meyers, London, and M. D. Whitman, Boston, 6—2, 6—2.

Commissioner for High School Athletics Will Be Considered At Committee Meeting Tuesday

Recommendation of Radical Change in Government of Local High School Sports Considered Probable — Plan Suggested by Dr. D. C. Todd of the School Board.

By Gerald Holland

The first step toward the creation of the office of "Commissioner of Public High School Athletics" will be taken Tuesday when the Instruction Committee of the Board of Education meets to discuss the plan offered by Dr. D. C. Todd, a board member.

The Instruction Committee including Richard Murphy, Arthur Blumeyer, and Arthur Werremeyer, of the Board, acts in an advisory capacity to Superintendent of Instruction Maddox. If a favorable decision is reached in connection with the proposal, a suggestion will be offered to Maddox that he recommend action by the board. It is reported that two members of the committee are favorably inclined to Dr. Todd's plan.

High School athletics at present are under the direction of a league board which includes a student and faculty representative from each of the five high schools. The five school principals comprise an advisory council to act in unusual cases.

Central High Case Cited.

Exponents of the "commissioner" plan believe the present system to be rather unwieldy, and that opinion is supported by several instances in recent years wherein the board's treatment of eligibility cases has not been satisfactory. An eligibility protest involving a Central High School athlete several years ago led to much unpleasantness and the temporary withdrawal of Central High School from league athletic competition.

If authority and responsibility can be vested in a single commissioner, it is thought that such decisions will be speedy and final.

The commissioner, if board action leads to his appointment, would devote all his time to the direction of athletics whereas the league board members at present must find time for athletic matters after several hours daily in the class room. Coaches and league board members serve without additional compensation.

Stadium Nearing Completion.

Within the last year, the Board of Education, has taken two important steps in connection with school athletics. The ban on games beyond a 25-mile radius, which had been imposed more than 15 years before, was lifted last December, opening the way for inter-city contests. The board authorized the construction of the new $488,000 Stadium at Kingshighway and St. Louis avenue which will be completed in time for fall football games.

The appointment of a commissioner of athletics would apparently complete a forward move that would raise the standards of high school athletics and improve conditions in general.

the start. Traynor made a great stop and throw to retire Holm leading off and then Toporcer walked. Frisch singled to left and after Bottomley struck out Hafey was hit by a pitched ball, filling the bases. It was a great chance for Southworth, but Bill has spent too much time on the bench and in doctors' offices. His eyes have been dimmed and he could not deliver, sending up a little foul to Traynor.

Cards Easy After First.

That was the last chance the Cardinals had when a hit or two hits or six hits would have done them any good. Perhaps they were discouraged. At any rate they were easy for Hill through the rest of the game. Hafey singled in the fourth for the second Cardinal hit and Schulte, batting for Bell singled in the fifth. The other two Cardinals' safeties were made in the seventh when they again filled the bases, this time with nobody out and yet did not score. Littlejohn beat out a grounder to Traynor and went to second on Pie's high throw. Maranville walked and Schulte singled over second which Rhyne stopped, filled the bases. Holm and Lester Bell filed to Cuyler, who had replaced Barnhart and Frisch sent a long but futile line drive to Paul Waner, who could give most fielders a motorcycle and still cover more ground himself.

Tomorrow the Cardinals will try their luck against the Chicago Cubs and Manager Joe McCarthy has announced that the champions will have to face Charlie Root, 23 times victor. Bill Sherdel probably will hurl for the Cardinals, with Flint Rhem working Monday morning and Alexander perhaps, volunteering to work the afternoon contest of the Labor day program.

Come Home Tuesday.

After the three games with the Cubs the Cardinals return home to complete the schedule at Sportsman's Park, with the exception of a three game invasion of Cincinnati.

Today's game was the final meeting of the season between the Cardinals and the Pirates. Pittsburg won 14 and the Cardinals eight of the 22 games.

NEW ORLEANS CLUB LEADS IN SLOOP RACES

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Sept. 3.—Southern Yacht Club of New Orleans took the lead in the eighth annual Lipton Cup fish-class sloop regatta here today by winning third and fifth places for a total of 26 points.

Other scores: Biloxi, 25; Pensacola, 24; St. Petersburg, 23; Mobile, 13; Houston Texas, 11; Tarpon Springs, Fla., 8; Saratota, Fla., 6.

MRS. BAEHR AND MISS HAGEMEYER CAPTURE TITLE

They Defeat Mrs. Lindemann and Miss Baer in Public Parks Doubles Final, 2—6, 7—5, 6—1.

Mrs. Melicent Baehr and Miss Lottie Hagemeyer, Missouri Valley women's tennis doubles champions, annexed the public parks doubles title yesterday afternoon by defeating Mrs. Ann Lindeman and Miss Virginia Baer, 2—6, 7—5, 6—1, on the Jefferson Memorial Courts in Forest Park.

A new combination in tournament play, Mrs. Lindemann and Miss Baer gave the seasoned team of Mrs. Baehr and Miss Hagemeyer considerable difficulty early in the final match. Mrs. Lindemann was all over the court getting shots from the other side, while Miss Baer shone with fine driving strokes. The runners-up concentrated their attack on Miss Hagemeyer and won the first set and had a 5-4 lead in the second set before their opponents solved their style to take three straight games.

In the final set, Mrs. Lindemann and Miss Baer won the first game, then the champions took six in a row.

Mrs. Baehr and Miss Hagemeyer are the finalists in the singles tournament also. They tried to play off their match yesterday, but started so late that only two sets had been completed before darkness. Each player won a set.

By agreement they will play it all over again this afternoon, starting at 2:30 o'clock, best two out of three.

MISS MAGUIRE SETS HIGH JUMP RECORD IN NATIONAL MEET

A. C., broke her own national record with a shotput of 39 feet, ¾ inches. Her old record was 38 feet, 3⅜ inches.

A new American record for women was created by Catherine Maguire of Pacific, Mo., in the high jump when she reached a height of five feet, one-half inch. Her closest opponent was Marion Holley, Northern California Athletic Club, with four feet, 9½ inches.

In the shotput finals, Lillian Copeland, Pasadena, A. C., bettered her national record breaking mark of 39 feet, ¾ inches, made in the first heat. Her finals effort was for a distance of 39 feet, 6¼ inches.

Eleanor Egg of the Paterson (N. J.) Recreation Club established a new American broad jump for women with a leap of 17 feet 1¾ inches. The former record of 17 feet even was held by Helen Filkey, Illinois Women's A. C., Chicago.

Lillian Copeland of Pasadena A. C. broke another national record, her second of the day when she threw the discus 103 feet 5 15-16 inches. In second place was Fanny Burt, Pasadena, and third was won by Dee Boeckmann, Western Association, St. Louis.

The 100-yard dash national record was tied by Elta Cartwright, Northern California. Time, 11 2-5 seconds. Minnie Meyer, Northern California, was second; Margaret Ritchie, St. Bonaventure Club, New York, third, and Miss Filkey fourth.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Counting the Unhatched.

IF the Cards should win the pennant, "Rabbit" Maranville will be out of luck, as far as officially sharing in the split of the pot goes. As with Warwick last year, Maranville was acquired a day or two too late for him to be classed as a world series' eligible this year.

Only players who were with the club "on or before Aug. 31" are eligible to compete in world's Series. The Commissioner might make an exception and permit him to play, with the consent of the opposing team.

But the chances are that Maranville would not get into the big series. Cleveland was permitted to use Joe Sewell, who joined too late for world's series eligibility, but the club urged the death of Ray Chapman as reason for allowing Sewell to play. He was O K'd.

Perhaps the Cards might say that Tommy Thevenow was lost through accident, and argue Maranville into the lineup. But it is improbable.

If Maranville is of material aid to the club, the players will see that he is not financially forgotten in any "divvy." But his absence from the big series would force the club to employ a makeshift infield.

Time to Change.

PRESIDENT HEYDLER, in clarifying the rules governing hits and the fielding thereof, in big league games, points out that where ground rules are necessary to keep back spectators on the playing field, "that part of it which is roped off from the crowd becomes the playing area."

President Heydler had to make a ruling because of the practice of club owners of admitting overflow crowds on to that part of the field between the foul lines.

What the league president might do, to better purpose, is to have legislation passed barring spectators from the field under all conditions, so that ground rules would never be necessary.

Standardize Parks.

Conditions governing baseball games should be standardized. Assuming that no spectators were permitted on fields at any time, the situation still would be unfair. They will not be strictly ideal until all parks are of the exact size, all fences of uniform height and distance from home plate and all backgrounds for batters made as nearly as may be the same. The pitchers' mounds should all be of the same height, too.

Under such conditions ball players could do as well on an opponent's grounds as on their own. Perhaps some day will see this all equalized.

Gone Mad—No, Not the Dogs.

LONDON dogdom, taking up greyhound racing for the first season, has literally gone dippy over it. From June 20 to Aug. 10, the peak attendance jumped from 20,000 to 82,000.

Tracks have opened at Birmingham, Manchester, Liverpool and many smaller towns. The game has spread like a prairie fire. Horse track promoters are worried, because the dogs with an investment one tenth as great are making much more money.

Something is askew in this new dog situation which exists here as well as abroad. Probably the fad will burn itself out as did the one-time craze for motorcycle velodromes, which blazed up in the United States a few years ago.

The fact that within 60 to 90 days, a greyhound track investment of $100,000 can be repaid with a 200 per cent profit, is the bait that lures all the quick rich investors.

But it's a reasonable guess the fans will tire of this expensive plaything.

Stock Peddling Tracks Arrive.

MISSOURI'S worst is yet to come. That will be when the spring racing season starts next year, with half a dozen tracks operating and no governing body to control them.

Horse racing takes 10 times the capital required of dog racing. Jockey clubs that must build tracks in Missouri face a million-dollar outlay, with the certainty of only two years of operation.

Conservative horsemen, therefore, are padlocking their pocketbooks until Missouri racing is supported by a law that will protect an investment against legislative reaction.

Lack of such a law doesn't prevent the activity of a lot of stock-selling jockey clubs getting into the field.

More than one track that is now successful began as a stock-peddling enterprise; but before it survived a lot of grief was suffered by somebody.

Amateur Boxers In 8 Inter-City Bouts Thursday

Five of the eight inter-city bouts on Thursday amateur boxing program at the People's Motorbus Outdoor Arena have been confirmed, according to an announcement of Coach Wilsman of the Motorbus Club.

The latest local boxers to be matched include Jacob Graswick of the East St. Louis Knights of Columbus Athletic Club, who will meet Eddie Orm of Indianapolis, in the lightweight division, Mickey Mazer of the Motorbus A. C., a flyweight, will exchange punches with Joe Reilly of Gary, Ind., and Reggie Wood will tackle Howard Jones of Fort Wayne in another lightweight bout.

Other matches previously announced match Al Stillman, a middleweight, with Billy Meyer of Indianapolis and Dave Knost, heavyweight, with Kenny Roberts of Gary, Ind. Knost appeared on the last amateur card and gave his opponent such a lacing at the start that he was unable to answer the bell for the second round. Stillman was unable to get into action at the last show when Ted Roberts, Jefferson Barracks boxer, whom he defeated with difficulty previously, failed to put in an appearance.

Entries in the preliminaries to date are: Pee Wee Brinson, East St. Louis K. C., 105 pounds; Clarence Wagner, P. M. A. C., 118 pounds; Richard Smart, unattached, 126 pounds; Al White, P. M. A. C., 135 pounds; Palmer Ash, P. M. A. C., 154 pounds; Russ Conklin, O'Fallon, Ill., 175 pounds; Pat McCarthy, unattached, 175 pounds. Entries from the South Broadway A. C., Y. M. H. A., and the Tower A. C., have not been received as yet.

Fresco could get no closer than a length back and Smiling Gus gradually closed the gap which at one time was at least 10 lengths. At the stretch turn there were four contenders and Smiling Gus was third, coming fast. Anaconda was obviously tiring but Meyer kept him running. In the shadow of the stand, with the crowd of 10,000 roaring wildly Smiling Gus passed Fresco and had his nose at Anaconda's flank. Hardy brought the whip into play and Gus strained to catch the leader whose pace was furious. At every leap, Smiling Gus gained an inch. They flashed past the judge's stand, Anaconda, tired, winner by a neck and Smiling Gus, his rush too late, second, a length in front of Fresco. The others Scimitar, Woolbridge and Arabian formed a second division.

High Life a 4-year-old colt by Prince Pal-Rebel Queen was the medium of Jockey Hardy's third victory of the day, in the seventh race. Obtaining an advantage of a length at the start of the mile and a sixteenth journey High Life remained the pacemaker throughout. Spanish Star ran second all the way and Buck was third.

Edward Gray, in winning the last race on the card, set a new track record for a mile and three sixteenths. The winner overtook Brig o'Doon in the last 70 yards to win. Blue Fish was third. The time was 1:58 1-5 as compared with the old mark of 1:59 1-5 set by Fabian.

Freaks of the Mutuels.

In the first race, Heed, which was quoted at 20 to 1 to win, finished second and paid only $12.22 for $2, thereby disappointing those who held place tickets. On the other hand Forward Pass, which finished third, was quoted at 3 to 1 to win and paid $9.40 for a $2 show ticket, far beyond what was expected. Those who got less than they anticipated on Heed made much more noise wailing than did those who rejoiced in getting more than they expected on Forward Pass. Jessie Belle won the race after passing up Bride O' The Wind.

Probably the biggest shock of the meeting was dealt the bettors when their almost unanimous choice, Watchword was beaten in the second race, a short dash for 2-year-olds. Jockey Hardy had his mount on top after passing Tish on the turn, but Tommy Root got a surprising burst of late speed out of Queenston in the last sixteenth of a mile and passed both of the leaders. Possibly if Hardy had anticipated this challenge he might have gotten Watchword farther to the front but when he tried it was too late. With all the money on Watchword, Queenston's victory brought a refund of $49.80 for $2. Glint O' Gold stumbled and went to her knees as the barrier went up and was immediately eliminated. This was Root's first victorious mount in several days.

Hardy Shows His Stuff.

In winning the third race with Bradley's Toney, Jockey Hardy proved that he knows fully his horse's capabilities and knows how to "rate" him. Hardy checked Toney for the first half mile and then let him run when they reached the far turn. Sweep Net had what looked like a safe lead at that time and Jockey Rausser made every effort to resist the challenge of Bradley's Toney. But step by step the big black horse cut down the intervening daylight and then took the lead about 70 yards from the finish. Hardy worked hard on his mount in that last telling drive and deserved to win. Ruth Gold, heavily played favorite, came with late speed to finish third.

The victory of Max Brick in the fourth race marked the baptism of Ben Carrol as a trainer. Ben, a brother of T. J. Carroll, who owns a string of good horses, had never saddled a winner of his own stable before yesterday. Max Brick is owned by Mrs. H. B. Kessen. He won as easily as the Yankees are winning a pennant.

Crescent Stable Coming.

The Fairmount Park management was advised that the Crescent Stable, owned by G. Frank Croissant and in charge of trainer Jack Middleton, will arrive from Chicago, Sunday. Among other good horses this stable has the good performer, Kentucky Cardinal.

A. G. Dunlap advised Julius G. Reeder, associate secretary of the Fairmount Jockey Club, that he was shipping his stable of horses from Windsor for the remainder of the Fairmount Park meeting. Included in the Dunlap stables is the fast sprinter, Queen Towton.

E. J. McConnell, with Greeter, Low Gear and others, shipped from Fairmount Park to Dade Park, Saturday.

Good Card Tomorrow.

Monday's card at Fairmount Park could hardly be improved upon insofar as class and number of entries is concerned. The feature event, the Labor Day Special at a mile, has six of the best horses racing at Fairmount Park as the entries.

An innovation which proved quite popular with Saturday's crowd at Fairmount Park were the popular melodies rendered by the Jolly Jester quartette. This organization is composed of Dute Brown, Joe Gallagher, Charles Voerge and Bob Stark.

Sparking Another Pennant Machine

ROGERS HORNSBY, the big punch in the New York Giant's drive which has netted them 24 victories in 30 games. Hornsby hit a home run with two men on bases in one of New York's two triumphs yesterday. The double victory moved the team from fourth to second place.

Browns Beat Tigers, 11-10, In Loosely-Played Game

the Tiger fourth, McManus walked to start and Heilmann dropped one behind the screen in right for a ground-rule triple which let McManus score. Fothergill drove a single to left, scoring Heilmann. Crowder then got the next three.

It was unfortunate that Williams found he bases unoccupied when he came up in the second part of the fourth, for he scattered the few fans in the right field pavilion with a homer, his fifteenth of the season and his third for the present series. Crowder stemmed the tide in the fifth and then the Browns staged a seven-run storm. Before the "blow" was over, "Rip" Collins was among those absent.

A Wild Inning, Men.

Melillo opened with a single and skipped to third on Gerber's hit to right. Crowder doubled to right to put Melillo over after which O'Rourke took one in the ribs and took first, filling the bases. Out went Collins and in came Hankins. Rice greeted the newcomer with a double to left which registered Gerber, Crowder and O'Rourke.

Sisler was safe and Rice took third when Wingo muffed Sisler's fly and Rice scored on Williams' single to right. Hankins was removed to avoid injury and Holloway entered the lists. Bing Miller forced Williams and Sisler scored. Dixon singled to right, putting Miller on third and Bing counted on Melillo's sacrifice fly with the seventh and final run of the inning.

Singles by McManus and Heilmann and Fothergill's slap into a third Brownie double play meant a Tiger run in the sixth.

Holloway stemmed the onrushing Brown tide in the sixth but was nicked for a run in the seventh. Sisler singled and, after Williams died, so did Bing Miller. Miller stole and when Bessler's throw was high, Sisler came over.

There was grief in the Tiger eighth—also three Brownie pitchers. All the Tigers did was to score six runs and tie the score at 10-10. Elements in this ghastly procedure were two passes and four hits—not to forget the three St. Louis pitchers—Crowder, Vangilder and Ballou. Crowder was in there at the start and Vangilder, relieving, pitched to two men, both of whom singled. Then Ballou came in and managed to retire the side, though not without allowing a pair of runs while he worked. Then the ninth, when Bing Miller's hit scored the winning run.

Jones vs. Whitehill Today.

The final game of the series of six will be played today with Sam Jones pitching for the Browns and Earl Whitehill favored to go for the Tigers. The Browns are scheduled to depart immedately after the game for Cleveland where they play a double-header tomorrow afternoon. Howley's men will not be seen here again until Sept. 28 when they open a three-game clash with the Indians which brings to an end their 1927 home season.

73-YEAR-OLD TENNIS PLAYER WINS IN MEET

Dr. George H. Rice Defeats 18-Year-Old Youth on Triple A Courts, 6-4, 6-2.

By DAVISON OBEAR.

The St. Louis District tennis championship for men players opened on the courts of the Triple A. Club yetserday afternoon with one of the best entry lists since the first tournament in 1917. All of the outstanding tennis stars of the district as well as a number of new players of promise are competing in the singles play, which reached the third round as a result of matches decided yesterday.

If possible the tournament committee hopes to complete the third round by tonight. All remaining first round matches must be played before noon today, while all second round contests will be finished this afternoon or defaults will be issued. First round doubles will open this morning and must be completed by night.

All the Favorites Win.

All of the favorites for the district singles title advanced yesterday. Wray Brown won his match by default while Fred Josties, Ted Drewes, Karl Hodge and the other seeded players gained a round in the play. There was only one default registered in the 27 matches played for yesterday. Eighty-five players entered the singles while 32 teams are listed in the men's doubles.

Of the 27 matches yesterday only five required the limit of three sets. Mac Smith, East St. Louis champion disposed of William Bierman, former Washington University captain, in a close three-set battle while Forrest Stuckman took 38 games to win from Ray Epstein.

Dr. George H. Rice, veteran player, eliminated young Brent Murpry in a first-round match. The score was 6—4, 6—2. Dr. Rice is 73 years old, while his opponent is but 18.

Pacific Coast Elevens Weaker For 1927 Race, Warner Writes

Oregon Aggies Suffer Worst Blow, With Twelve Players Lost From Last Season's Squad by Graduation.

University of Southern California and Stanford Both Hard Hit — Teams More Evenly Balanced Than in 1926.

By Glenn Warner

Coach of Stanford University.

PALO ALTO, Cal., Sept. 3.—Football teams of the Pacific Coast face the barrier for the 1927 race, more evenly matched than at any time in the past few years. This makes for uncertainty which in turn has developed increased interest in the game. From the standpoint of good football, large crowds and general public interest, I expect the 1927 season to be the greatest in the history of football on the Pacific Coast.

Stanford and University of Southern California, generally recognized as the strongest teams in the Pacific Coast Conference last year, weer the heaviest losers by graduation, with the possible exception of the Oregon Aggies, and will probably be somewhat weaker this season. With the exception of the Aggies, all the other conference teams should be stronger, which means that Washington, Washington State, Oregon, California and Idaho must all be figured as contenders for the title. Montana can scarcely be expected to finish near the top.

No changes have been made in the head coaches of conference teams, although there have been other changes on the coaching staffs of various schools. McEwan at Oregon, Hollingberry at Washington State, Price at California and Erb at Idaho, who were new in their positions last year, are all expected to turn out better teams this fall.

Oregon's Outlook Bright.

Although she did not figure very high in the percentage column, Oregon had a good team, which improved greatly toward the end of the season last year. McEwan retains much of the material from his 1926 squad and should be a real trouble maker this fall. Washington State lost only to the University of Southern California in 1926 and is figured to be a leading contender this year. The Cougars lost only five letter men, including their two regular guards. If Hollingberry can fill those two vacancies satisfactorily, he will be right up there with the leaders.

Price's problem at California will be concerned mainly with replacing the linemen he lost, and filling Capt. Griffin's place at fullback. "Nibs" has some splendid material from the substitutes and freshmen, however, and is confident that the Golden Bears will regain some of their lost prestige.

Idaho lost five lettermen and retained 12. Owings, star fullback last year, will be missed, but Bill Kershisnik, a 210-pounder from the freshmen, is expected to fill in well. Erb has some other high class material from the yearling squad.

Washington lost only one man from the powerful line which has been together for two years and Bagshaw will have only his backfield to worry about. George Guttormsen, all-coast quarterback, is lost, as are five halfbacks. Bagshaw's biggest problem will be to find a field general to take the place of Guttormsen.

With apparently only mediocre replacement material, Paul Schissler faces a tough job at Oregon Agricultural College in replacing the eight regulars and four other lettermen who graduated. The Aggies lost their regular center, one guard, both tackles, one end, fullback, quarterback and one halfback. Dixon and Dickerson, the great pair of tackles, and Wes Schulmerisk, star fullback, will be missed most. Montana did not win a conference game last year and, although reputed to be stronger, can scarcely be expected to fare much better this season.

1926 Leaders Hit Hard.

University of Southern California and Stanford, the two leaders last year, were hit almost alike. Each lost heavily in the line and each lost her outstanding back. The Trojans lost nine regulars and the Cardinals six. Each team parted with a great pair of ends. Of U. S. C's eight departed regulars, Cravath at center and Kaer at quarter will probably be the hardest for Coach Howard Jones to replace. Cravath was one of the outstanding centers in the country and Kaer was chosen on practically every All-America team. Laraneta, fullback, who with Kaer was one of the biggest ground gainers in the country, will also be missed.

Stanford lost one of the finest pairs of wingmen I have ever seen in Shipker and Walker, and replacement material for the end positions seems to be poorer than for any others. In addition to these men, the Cards lost their two regular tackles, Capt. Swan, All-Coast guard for three years, and George Bogne, their most dependable halfback. Stanford's greatest trouble will be in finding men to take the places of Shipkey and Walker, as replacement material at the other positions seems fairly promising.

Stanford Stadium Enlarged.

The largest crowd in Pacific Coast sport history is expected to see the Stanford California game this year. The Stanford stadium is being enlarged by the addition of 16,500 seats, which will bring its total seating capacity to 88,000. The new Multnomah stadium in Portland is now being used for Conference games and among others the Stanford-O. A. C. game will be played there this year.

Two important intersectional games have been scheduled by Pacific Coast universities, U. S. C. meets Notre Dame at Chicago and O. A. C. meets Carnegie Tech at the Multnameh stadium in Portland. It is understood that California is negotiating for a post-season affair an dthe Tournament of Roses will have its customary game on New Year's day.

Big Three Begin Football Series

MASTER-MINDS of the football coaching world begin, with this article, a series which will continue in the Post-Dispatch throughout the football season.

The "Big Three" strategists, men qualified by long years as tacticians for major institutions, are: "Tad" Jones, head coach at Yale; Glenn Warner, genius of Stanford University, and Knute Rockne, whose exploits as gridiron star and success as a coach are almost unparalleled.

For several years this trinity has kept Post-Dispatch readers informed on all phases of the game. This year each will contribute one article weekly covering football in their respective sections.

Each will also describe important football games in which his team figures.

'Lefty' Grove Hands Yankees First Shutout

Philadelphia Southpaw Fans Nine Batters in Gaining 1-0 Triumph.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 3.—Lefty Grove handed the New York Yankees their first shutout of the season today before 25,000 fans, by winning a hurling duel with Wilcy Moore that gave the Athletics a 1-to-0 triumph. Grove limited the Hugmen to four widely distributed blows, Joe Dugan, who doubled in the eighth, being the only man to reach second on him. Babe Ruth made two singles, Lazzeri one.

Grove fanned nine of the Yanks, whiffing Ruth on three pitched balls in the seventh and finishing the game by repeating the feat on Gehrig. The speedy left-hander gave his audience a treat in the second inning by fanning the side, Meusel, Lazzeri and Dugan, on 10 pitched balls, Dugan getting the only foul.

With two out in the fourth, Cochrane doubled and scored on a single by Dykes for the only run of the game.

SPORT SALAD

Lyrics by Limerick Luke.

WHILE the Cards to the leaders are hugging
The hole around short they are plugging;
For, Maranville, a bear,
In the field will be there,
While the others attend to the slugging.

Abetted and aided by Walter
The Red Birds no longer should falter;
For, Maranville and Frisch
Make a wonderful dish,
And our chances it greatly may alter.

While tardy in locking the stable,
As per the old maxim or fable,
If they do not relax
And get down to brass tacks,
To recover the horse they'll be able.

QUITE SO.

There may be better batters than Maranville, but when it comes to patrolling the sector between second and third and territory adjacent thereto, never let it be said that the "Rabbit" doesn't know his carrots.

One by one the veterans drop by the wayside and are forgotten for the nonce. But when there are holes to be plugged the old boys come back with a bang.

Youth will be served but when it comes time to throw out the lifeline, the old war horse to whose nose the smoke of battle is incense and myrrh is used as the anchor to windward.

The Old Guard.

AND that's the way the money goes;
They can the Rabbits and the Grohs,
But when they falter in the strife,
We see them back as big as life!

With a lead of 13 games and 27 to go, figuratively speaking, the Yankees' mathematical chances of not winning the pennant are verging on the zero hour.

In other words the As have a cataclysmic chance of beating out the Yanks.

The Yankees' ambition, now, is to do the American League marathon in 100 flat or better.

Hit 'er Up, Boys!

THE thing can be done as the butcher remarked,
The thing can be done I am sure;
When Lou and the Babe a few homers have parked
The century mark they'll secure.

"World Flyers Reach Bagdad."
Regards to Sinbad the sailor.

More and More.

WHILE marathon aces
Are birds of a feather,
Success in their races
Depends on the weather.
When crossing the ocean
Our flyers are back of 'em.
But, there are so many,
It's hard to keep track of 'em.

Wrong Number.

The downtown phones were cut over to the dial system last night. It's a wise man that can call his own shot and put it in.

HIT OFF NEHF GIVES CONTEST TO CINCINNATI

Hendricks' Men Held Without a Safety for Six Innings by Blake, Then Four Are Bunched.

CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 3.—The Cincinnati Reds bunched four of their five hits in the last of the seventh today to beat the Chicago Cubs, 2 to 1, after being held hitless through six innings.

Heathcote scored for the Cubs, in the sixth, getting home from second base on Wilson's single to left. Heathcote had walked and had gone to second after Sukeforth had nabbed Stephenson's foul.

With one out, Kelly doubled to left field in the seventh for the Reds' first hit off Blake. Zitzmann ran for Kelly and went to third when Walker grounded out. Ford singled, scoring Zitzmann and tying the score.

Artie Nehf, recently released by Cincinnati and taken in by McCarthy, went to the mound to succeed Blake. It was his first appearance for the Cubs.

Critz beat out a bunt and Ford took third. Hargrave batted for Sukeforth and Nehf walked him, filling the bases. With two out, Lucas singled off Beck's shins, scoring Ford.

CHICAGO CAPTURES $5000 OAK PARK HANDICAP AT HAWTHOR

F. M. GRABNER GELDING TIES TRACK RECORD

Winner Runs Mile and Sixteenth in 1:44 in Beating Flat Iron and Princess Doreen.

By the Associated Press.

HAWTHORNE, Ill., Sept. 3.—A crowd of 15,000 turf fans turned out this afternoon for the final day of Hawthorne's 18-day summer meeting. Monday the scene shifts back to Washington Park for a 12-days' meeting.

The fourth race, the $5000 Oak Park Handicap at a mile and a sixteenth, for 3-year-olds and up, featured today's program. F. M. Grabner's 4-year-old gelding, Chicago, with McDermott up, captured this event and equaled the track record of 1:44. Flat Iron was second while Princess Doreen, the public choice to win, finished third. Princess Doreen led the procession to the home stretch turn where she seemed to tire under her top weight of 122 pounds. Chicago moved up from third place and took command in the stretch to win by half a length. Flat Iron raced in second place all the way. The race was worth $4550 net to the owner of the winner and Chicago paid $7.96 in the mutuels.

Everlasting, a 2-year-old colt from the Audley Farm Stable, and ridden by Russell, won the opening event, a five and one-half furlongs sprint, by three lengths over Sign Off, a 40-to-1 shot. Golfier was third.

Gen. Clinton with Kinzer up took the lead and set the pace throughout the mile and a sixteenth, to win the second with four lengths to spare. Red Pennant finished second by a length and a half over Bear.

Gen. Grant, Allen up, was an easy victor in the third, a handicap for 2-year-olds at six furlongs, after making every post a winning one. Two lengths back of the winner came Easter Stockings and May Cooper was third.

Lord Julian, with Hughes up, won the fifth, a mile and 70 yards, by half a length after leading a field of 3-year-olds and upward all the way. Alloy was second and two lengths back Bronze finished third.

Mysterious ridden by Jenner, came from behind to win the sixth at a mile and a sixteenth by one length. Dolly Seth, the leader to the stretch, finished second and Up and Down was third.

DOWN the STRETCH

Saratoga Closes.

SARATOGA'S annual racing season came to a close yesterday with the running of the Hopeful Stakes and Saratoga Cup Handicap. The racing scene will now shift to the Westchester Racing Association's track at Belmont Park where a 12-day meeting will begin tomorrow. The features of the Belmont meeting are the Futurity, worth about $100,000, the Grand National Steeplechase, worth $21,000, and the Jockey Club Gold Cup with a value of $21,000.

The racing at Saratoga during the past month was full of upsets. Chiefly among these were Reigh's defeat in the Grand Union Hotel Stakes and Hopeful Stakes. Another was when Joseph E. Widener's Chance Shot went down to defeat to the erratic Herodian. One walkover was recorded at the meeting when Maelstrom took the feature race Friday by walking around the course.

Seven Races on Card.

SEVEN races are on the opening day card at Belmont Park with the Featherweight Handicap, for all ages, at six furlongs, the feature. Only one claiming race is on the program. Happy Argo, the English horse, is top weight in the feature. He is assigned 124 pounds. E. B. McLean's Prince of Wales is next in line with 122. Sixteen horses are named for the race. The secondary offering is the Broad Hollow Steeplechase Handicap at two miles. The crack jumper Fairmount is entered by J. E. Widener.

The Labor Day Handicap for 3-year-olds, at one mile and one-sixteenth, will feature the opening day program at Washington Park tomorrow. Nine good horses are entered in the event, with Hydromel top weight at 115. The other starters are Sixty, Frank McMahon, Bombay, Ledge, Quibbler, Bob Rogers, Marlboro and Rushbank. Frank McMahon tapered off his training for the stake yesterday morning. He went a mile in the fast time of 1:40 2-5. The Labor Day Handicap is worth $1000 in added money.

Ten crack sprinters are named to start in the third race at Washington Park, a conditional handicap. J. N. Camden's Oh Susanna will compete with Coldstream Stable's Little Syn, T. S. Jordan, Anna Marrone II, Hot Time and five others in the overnight race. The purse is valued at $1200.

INTERNATIONAL POLO SERIES OPENS AT MEADOW BROOK SEPT. 10

ak in Old "Big Four" Combination Closes When Webb and Steven- on Return to Form.

By Peter Vischer

EW YORK, Sept. 3.—In the nding international matches, Britain's courageous chal- ers from far-flung India face opportunity to rend the world polo as it has not been torn in rly a score of years.

ar more than a series of con- s between friendly internation- rivals will be decided on the h green turf of International ld, prized playground of the adow Brook Club in Westbury, heart of American polo, start- Sept. 10.

The tradition of winning Amer- n polo, established by Harry e Whitney in 1909 with a con- ent remakng of the game, is stake. Only once since the t triumph of the only "Big " of American polo, has Brit- broken in upon this deeply- ted tradition that America wins rnatonal polo matches. That in 1914 and the break lasted y until Nations could turn back polo from more serious wars.

The American polo tradition in- ved more than the mere win- of games. It resulted in the ition of the old off-side rule, h consequent changes in strate- and tactics. It resulted in the ition of the height limit for es

It was perhaps natural that so rous a tradition should result the development of polo genius. tney was such a genius, and he the first victorious American m to suit himself. Devereux burn is such a genius, and he changed the playing of the k positions to suit himself. mas Hitchcock Jr. has some- ng of that touch of genius, and will undoubtedly leave his mark the playing of No. 2.

And so we find that the Amer- n tradition had drawn away m the team idea. There is no at American team today. There a great No. 2, Hitchcock, and influential back who has been at for many years and will bably achieve greatness again. burn. And there are two other ayers who have to scoot around best they can to complement games of these two.

Making Last Stand.

The old guard of American polo making its last stand. J. Wat- Webb, the spearhead of the erican attack, is 42; he has n on two previous international ms. Malcolm Stevenson, the 3, is 40; he played on the in- national team of 1924 and was bstitute on the 1927 team. Mil- n is 46 years of age; he has n playing international polo for ears.

These three are playing their t international matches. Webb Stevenson only made this team r a terrific battle with younger d; they had to force aside two yers already officially selected, ston Guest and J. Cheever Cow- . Milburn was never really a ndidate for the team; he made it the simple expedient of not an- ncing his retirement, as Louis Stoddard did at the age of 46, en he might very easily have de the international four once re.

Truly, the old guard is making ast stand. And this gallant de- e involves more than three nd players, who have given r best to the great game.

In a way this present series rks a tremendous stride forward the establishment of polo as a tional sport. As a result of the cussions attendant upon the se- tion of the American team, per- in all corners of the country thinking about polo and bring- new blood to it. Should it hap- that the American team is de- ed, a flood of new ideas will forward to struggle with the

Should the old guard go down re this team from Britain, e will be such assaults upon great tradition established by tney that will astonish those have marveled at its glories. Three years ago it was simple to tell that the British were in a calamitous beating. This year ybody's guess is good.

The American team will be g, despite the fact that it has only twelve chukkers of polo the first game of 1924, when venson was toppled from his e and badly hurt. Experience, wledge, tremendous hitting er, courage, aye even genius, are combined in the 1924 n.

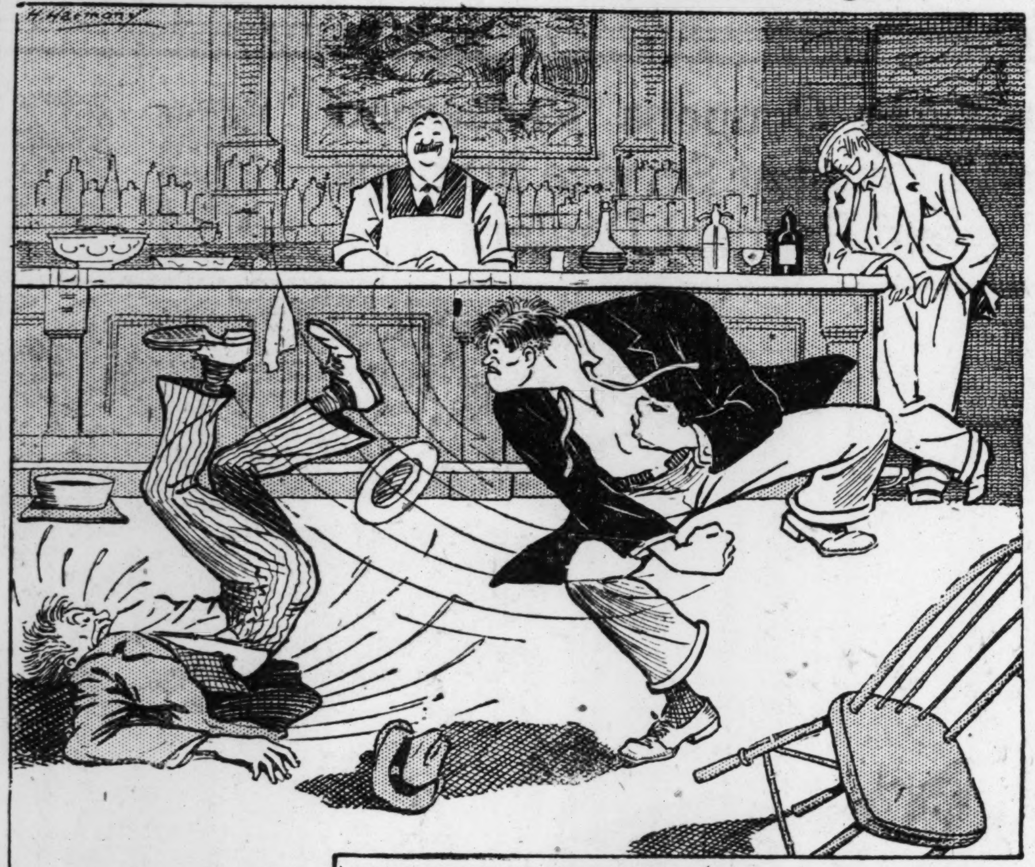
British Have Real Team.

And the British have a real . They have a fair-to-mid- No. 1 in Capt. C. E. Pert, a ling good shot in Maj. A. H. liams at No. 2, the spectacular rk at No. 3, and a very prom- g back in Maj. Atkinson. I say omising" because Atkinson is of those slow starters who has ght himself to his game, which has done many times in India only once in America, and that in a practice match.

K. O. Frisbie Puts Wrong Sharkey to Sleep

—In Meantime, Patsy Signs Englishman for Bout

No. 22—A Fighter's Letters to His Manager



H. Harmony
I COME UP INSIDE IT AND HOOKED HIM WITH MY LEFT ON THE BUTTON

EVENTS RECITED IN PREVIOUS LETTERS

HARVEY (K. O.) FRISBIE, 18-year-old chauffeur, joins the boxing stable of Patsy O'Brien, a hard boiled but human, prize fight manager. Aside from his ring proclivities, Frisbie is the self-appointed successor to Rudy Valentino as the world's leading sheik. K. O. Frisbie is quite sure he can bowl over Paolino, Sharkey or Tunney. After watching Harvey polish off a number of tough second rates, O'Brien secures the boy a summer job as life saver at ultra fashionable Belgravia Beach. Various adventures follow at the beach, including an exhibition with Gene Tunney, after which there is considerable difference of opinion as to whether or not Frisbie quit out of compassion for the champion or out of respect for him. The beach season is culminated by Harvey being offered a job as personal chaperon to Ralph Alps, known as the hurdling halfwit, a college boy who takes his drinking seriously. Old man Alps asks Frisbie to follow Ralph around and keep him out of as much trouble as possible. Harvey accepts the job.

By Walter Davenport.

DEAR PATSY: Jack Sharkey came near being flattened by me, too, today and nobody could say I hit him below the belt even once because they was only one punch and that landed on his chin and you could of used an adding machine to count over him for all the good it would have done.

The funny part of it was that it was not Jack Sharkey not that it would of made any difference because the way I slapped this boy down would of stopped the 20 centuries express coming out of Albany.

The way it happened was this. As you told me in your letter I took the job being private watchman over young Ralph Alps, who is called the hurdling half wit in the college where he plays football or body guard as his father the big millionaire calls it, and the first thing Ralph said he had two tickets for Montreal.

"Let's see what they are good for," he said. "You and I ought to make a big hit no matter where we go because you are a promising young heavyweight contender and I am no bum myself, especially with a few strength giving shots of scotch under my belt."

"Just as you say," I said.

Ralph Does Some Throwing.

WHEN I told Mr. Alps that I would take the job of running around with his son for a while seeing that he did not get into any more trouble than necessary, he told me to humor Ralph along until it looked sure that some stranger who did not have a sense of humor was going to flock down on him and put a couple more dents in his skull.

"When you see that going to happen," said Mr. Alps, "sock him yourself and take him to a safe hotel to sober up. I know somebody is bound to slap him stiff no matter where he is and I will feel more comfortable if I know it is done by a friend, and especially somebody who knows how to do it only don't crack down on him any oftener than you have to."

So Ralph and I got on the train to Montreal and all the way up I don't have a bit of trouble with him, as nobody wanted to take a crack at him except three traveling salesmen who couldn't lick Fred Fulton even, and Ralph threw them out of the smoking compartment himself and we had a nice trip up. Ralph is pretty refined in some ways and is politer even than Tunney if he wants to be, besides being no push over with his hands himself. If his old man can't get any more colleges to take him for the price of a couple of new buildings like he has been doing, maybe you can do something with him because he can put up a pretty stiff fight if he is handled right.

Anyway, we no sooner got in Montreal than Ralph remembered you can get a drink there and he was all for finding a place. He had a couple in our room at the Windsor and two more in Drury's place and said he wanted to find a boy named Jones who had a place.

"All right," I said. "Only don't get plastered."

Sharkey Gets Belligerent.

WELL at this Jones place he knew the fellow who wanted it and they got to talking while I read the paper to see whether you put anything in about me fighting this Englishman named Liverpool Lumpke you say you got for me sometime soon. I did not see anything after reading it over a couple of times so I looked around for Ralph, and, hearing a voice in a room in the back, I went back to look.

Ralph was having an argument with a big boy who looked like he wasn't used to being indoors and the minute he saw me he said to the big boy:

"So your name is Sharkey, is it?"

"Sure," said the fellow.

"Well I do not like the way you wear your feet, you big rabbit," said Ralph. "I am going to have all that changed. Wait a minute."

Ralph come over to me, and whispered that it was Jack Sharkey and that he would lick him himself if he wasn't that he had licked so many guys like Sharkey that he did not get any kick out of it any more.

"But listen, Frisbie," he whispered to me. "You go on up and bust this big foul ball on the jaw and tomorrow all the papers will be full of it and maybe they will have to give you a fight with whoever wins between Dempsey and Tunney, if anybody."

Before I could decide if I would do so or not, this Sharkey come over and wanted to know if we were talking about him and what Ralph meant about his feet.

"The trouble with your feet is that you are on them too much," I said.

"That ain't my fault," he said. "They ain't no man here who can do anything about it. I never been off my feet except when I sit down or got to bed and there ain't no man here who can make me."

He was a very coarse fellow.

"Well," I said politely, "how do you know when nobody here has not tried yet. Put up your mits and let's see."

Frisbie Makes a Mistake.

HE started one from the floor which would have been as sweet a smack as you ever saw if I had not ducked. I come up inside it and hooked him with my left to the button and, as I say he was out so far that a dozen cops in flivvers could not of reached him with a rope.

And then I found out that it was all a little joke and that it was not Jack Sharkey of Boston but Joe Sharkey of Quebec. He has a place like Jones' place but it is in Quebec and maybe we will go up there and see him because we are feeling sort of sorry for making a mistake, although it was only a college boy joke after all.

This is not such a bad job. I can get off any time you say so; let me know when you want me to pickle Liverpool Lumpke, the Englishman, for you. Ralph will come along with me because he says he met a lot of nobility when he was in London last year and maybe he knows this Lord Cowslip who brought Liverpool Lumpke over and wants to bet five thousand bucks on me to win by a cavein.

Do not worry about me not being in condition because Ralph is doing the drinking for both of us and I am not touching a drop in any manner, shape and form. I weigh 200 pounds the way I am and am feeling pretty sorry for Liverpool Lumpke already.

Yours truly,
K. O. FRISBIE.

A Bout at Last.

DEAR FRISBIE: You are fighting Liverpool Lumpke in the semi-windup at the opening of the Dorgan A. C. next Friday night, so put on your hat and start down, because from what I know about Quebec a lot of things can happen to you up there to fix you so you could not put up a good fight against one of Singer's midgets little boys.

Up in Quebec those French Canadian boys do not wait for the fight to start before going to work on you. Before you got half your piece said they got a big tough finger in both your eyes and the next thing you know the doctor at the hospital is all out of thread from putting stitches in you.

Quebec is a nice little town for anybody who wants nothing but a lot of peace and quiet, but with this Dalph Alps of yours around there is bound to be a touch of rioting, and while I do not care how many of those Canucks break in their boots on Ralph I got a lot of plans for you and haven't any influence with the Quebec police. When the cops take hold of you up there they get cramps in their hands and don't let go for a couple of years, so you better come back to the states, where if a Judge gives you more than three months for murder the humane societies start riding him and people begin taking up a collection for you. Anyway, you better come home.

Your manager,
PATSY O'BRIEN.

Chicago Team To Meet Local "Hurling" Club

Irish National Game Will Be Played at St. Louis U. Field Today.

Local exponents of the Irish national game of "ruling" will meet the Boland Hurling Club, champions of Chicago, in an intercity contest this afternoon at St. Louis University Field, Grand boulevard and Lacdede avenue, starting at 3:30 o'clock.

The meeting last year resulted in a close victory for the Chicagoans. Hurling is a combination of soccer, hockey, baseball and a number of other sports, and is a game of great antiquity. It was played in a primitive form before Caesar's conquest of Britain.

The following men make up the local team: Joe O'Brien, J. Carroll, F. O'Brien, P. Ryan, John Ryan, D. O'Connor, James Ryan, Ed Ryan, Jack McGrath, P. Hannon, M. Franklin, William Burke, M. Ryan, T. Ryan, J. O'Meara, James Coleman, M. Coleman, J. McCarthy, J. Barrett and C. Davis. J. Fogarty will referee.

Tilden Expects Greatest Tennis of Davis Cup Competition This Year

Decisive Defeat of Japan by French Shows Invaders Are Ready to Put Up Formidable Battle Against American Stars.

By William T. Tilden II.

(Copyright, 1927.)

France is ready for the Davis Cup. Their decisive defeat of Japan which last year carried them to the limit of five matches and almost beat them, is proof positive that the great team of Cochet, Lacoste, Borotra and Brugnon is almost at top form and tuned to the minute for the challenge round. It is true that Japan was not so strong as last year. Harada, the great star of last year, is far from his best form, but even the lapse of Harada cannot account for the terrific beating administered by the French stars. It was a case of almost perfect tennis winning a deserved victory.

TILDEN.

I have played both Ohta and Harada this year and know that such scores as the French pair, Cochet and Lacoste made opening day in the singles speak volumes for the quality of their tennis. Lacoste has regained the control and accuracy he so sadly lacked against Lott in Southampton. While Cochet showed all his regular brilliancy in every department. It seems to me Cochet and Lacoste are both hitting harder than they did in Europe.

It was a clever and significant move of the French in playing Borotra in singles after the cup tie was won. The Bounding Basque had only just arrived and needed practice so his appearance in both doubles and singles was a sign of how intensively he is practicing. There seems little reason to question the prophecy that Cochet and Lacoste will play the singles against the United States, but I hear rumors that Gillon, the French captain, is tuning Borotra up to use if he sees any sign of faltering in the form of his two big aces.

Borotra and Brugnon are supposed to be the logical doubles team, but the way that the French paired in the national doubles, with Borotra playing with Lacoste and Cochet with Brugnon, looks now as if Gillon was considering one of these combinations. These are the regular combinations that played at St. Cloud and Wimbledon yet the general opinion is that Borotra and Brugnon are stronger than either of the others. It is difficult to hazard a guess on the French Davis Cup doubles team. If either of these teams win the American title it is logical to suppose they will be selected. Should both fail then it would appear certain Borotra and Brugnon will be selected.

The continued rains of the past weeks have proved a handicap to the French in their training, and they deserve great credit for the manner in which they have reached top form against all handicaps.

The climax of the Davis Cup competition is here. Billy Johnston has arrived and is proving to be in top form and great physical condition. Francis T. Hunter is tuned to the minute and playing the tennis of his life. Williams is his old brilliant self, and I feel as good as I ever did. If ever a challenge round gave promise of a bitter struggle it is the coming one. I look to see the greatest tennis of the Davis Cup history played this year before the famous trophy is safe in anyone's hands. May the best team win, but I hope and believe that the defenders are the best team.

Walker Cup Golf Play for 1928 Set at Wheaton

Will Be First Time Meet Has Been Held Off Atlantic Coast.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—H. H. Ramsay, secretary of the United States Golf Association, announces that the Executive Committee, assuming that the Walker Cup competition will be held in 1928, has selected the Chicago Golf Club at Wheaton, Ill., as the course for the competition.

The committee received an offer from the Bob O' Link Golf Club of Highland Park, Ill., for the international matches but the competition was finally awarded to the Chicago Golf Club, which is one of the charter members of the United States Golf Association.

This is the first time that the Walker Cup matches have been played away from the Atlantic Coast and the golfers of the Chicago district are keenly interested in the event.

Solar Plexus Wins First Heat In Cup Regatta

Horace E. Dodge's Boat Averages More Than 47 Miles an Hour.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Sept. 3.—Solar Plexus, owned by Horace Dodge Jr., and driven by Bill Horn of Detroit, won the Detroit Yacht Club development trophy, feature event of the opening card of the annual gold cup speedboat regatta here today. The Dodge entry defeated the craft of Commodore Harry B. Greening of Hamilton, Ont., Rainbow VI, two boats entered by Gar Wood, Baby Gar III and Baby Gar VIII, Bottoms Up, piloted by J. H. R. Cromwell and Baby Chic, by S. B. Smith.

The race, which was open to boats with a maximum piston displacement of 625 inches, developed poor time. The fastest 30 mile heat was negotiated by Commodore Greening's Boat at an average speed of 47.1 miles an hour. The Solar Plexus' average speed for the three heats was 44 miles an hour.

The Rainbow VI, favorite to win was forced out after the first heat with engine trouble, and none of the other entries, with the exception of Solar Plexus, finished three full heats. As a result only first place was awarded in the official standings.

The race for Hydroplanes of 151 inch piston displacement went to Miss Massachusetts, driven by L. T. Savage of the Boston Yacht Club. Miss Westchester II, piloted by E. W. Hammond of the Horse Shoe Harbor Yacht Club won one of the five mile heats for second place.

The hydroplane race is sponsored by the Mississippi Valley Power Boat association, donors of the Elgin trophy. The heat winners in today's race are scored with winners in races for the class, sponsored by the association during the season, and the trophy is awarded at the end of the year to the craft compiling the best percentage.

The Call of the Outdoors

By ALEC MERMOD

The Southern Illinois Sportsmen's League held its Seventh Annual Picnic at the grounds of the Madison Kennel Club last Sunday, and this outing was a success in every way, all the events were run off like clock work and everyone had a thoroughly good time.

The dog show held under the auspices of The St. Louis Pointer and Setter Club ranked first in the point of attraction, for it's been many a day since as many really good dogs have been seen at a bench show.

Pointers and English setters were about equally divided and there were quite a bunch of Irish setters and a few Gordons.

Space does not permit a detailed account of this show so only the winners in each class will be mentioned.

English Setters—Puppies. Byrd, owner, H. A. Ellers, Jackson, Mo.

English Setters—Novice. Ike's Momoney, owner, W. R. Fulton, Vergennes, Ill.

English Setters—American bred dogs. Rodney Paliacho Man, J. Wesley Hoar.

English Setters—Limit dogs. Rodney Paliacho Man, J. Wesley Hoar.

English Setters—Open dogs. Highland Laddie. Philip Hopley, Witt, Ill.

Best English Setter in show — Highland Laddie.

Irish Setters—Novice. Bob, M. B. Wallace, St. Louis.

Irish Setters—American bred dogs. Love's Rowdy, Frank Rashaw, Hannibal, Mo.

Irish Setters—Limit dogs. Red Top, M. B. Wallace.

Irish Setters—Open dogs. Big Boy, Webster Tilton, St. Louis.

Best Irish Setter in show—Big Boy.

Big Boy has been a consistent winner wherever shown and his win of last Sunday puts him in the champion class. Besides being the best Irish Setter in the show he was rated as the best dog of the entire show.

This Irishman is not only a Bench Show dog, but is a real bird dog in the field.

Pointers — Puppies. Burleigh's Carolina Touchstone, George P. Burleigh.

Pointers—American bred dogs. Pacemaker's Joy's Ted. W. J. Schneider.

Pointers—Open dogs, under 55 pounds. Manitoba Speed Boy, Mrs. E. Hoechst.

Pointers—Limit dogs, 55 pounds and over. Gump's Indiana Rex, James Garman.

Best Pointer in show, Gump's Indiana Rex.

Frank Fellows of Springfield, Mo., judged all dogs, and he deserves a vote of thanks from every one for the able manner in which he handled this difficult job. As a rule there are a number of exhibitors who feel that the judges have not rendered a fair decision, either through ignorance or prejudice, but at this show there was not a single complaint.

Fellows is one of Springfield's most prominent business men, and at one time owned one of the best pointer kennels in the United States.

Frank Fellows bred dogs for the love of the game and not for profit, and developed some of the best in the country. There was no better shooting dog of any breed than Frank's Den, which was one of Fellows' best pointers. In the trap Shooting Contest, Dr. Art. Azman was high over a field of 45 with a score of 97 out of 100.

Dove Season Is Opened.

Dove season opened on Thursday and the hunters turned out in goodly numbers, and, while some of the shooters had no trouble in getting the limit of 10, others complained that the doves had left the country.

C. C. Cherbonnier and Ed Schopp spent last week-end on the Robidoux near Waynesville, and report good fishing.

On August 23 at the Missouri State Fair was held the first Outdoor Life Conference of Missouri. The object of this conference was to awaken public interest in the conservation of wild life in the State, and to create in the minds of the public a desire to co-operate with the Game and Fish Department by, not only complying the laws pertaining to hunting and fishing but by taking a more active interest in Game Protection and Propagation.

We must take off our hats to the present game commissioner, for he has accomplished more since he has been in office than anyone else who has held this position, and while the writer may not be in sympathy with all of McCanse's ideas, his work has accomplished wonders and the improvement in conditions is very noticeable, and if Kieth will only get started on the Auxiliary Game Refuges we will sing his praises louder than ever.

Duck shooting this section bids fair to be much better than it was last fall, and if the cool weather continues we will have some blue wing shooting on the opening day.

Conditions in Arkansas are no better than last year, for the floods are still in evidence with very little chance of receding enough to make good shooting. Last year there were plenty of ducks in the country but there was so much water everywhere the ducks were not confined to any one spot but spread out for miles and it was almost impossible for anyone to secure a good bag. The high water in the various states saved thousands and thousands of ducks last year so we will have a chance at some of these this fall.

Coaffee Defeats Bowman in Sprint

Captures 100-Yard Event in Meet at Toronto—Dehart Hubbard Also in Race.

By the Associated Press.

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 3.—Cyril Coaffee of the Illinois A. C. won the feature event of the Canadian National exhibition track and field meet today when he defeated Dehart Hubbard, former Michigan University star, and Chester Bowman, United States national sprint champion, in the 100-yard invitation dash. Coaffee's time was 9 4-5 seconds.

A mixup occurred in running the 12-mile modified marathon, in which R. McHugh of Chicago was declared the winner by officials. Harold Webster of Hamilton claimed to have been first, and Charles Snell of Toronto insisted he was among the first three, but neither claim was allowed.

Miss Ethel Catherwood of Saskatoon, failed in her attempt to set a new world's record in the high jump, but bettered her Canadian record by one inch in clearing the bar at 5 feet, 2 inches.

YALE, WITH VETERANS GONE, PESSIMISTIC IN FOOTBALL OUTLOOK

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 3.—Football prospects at Yale this coming fall are regarded with some pessimism by those who are already here in anticipation of a start of practice on Sept. 15. The outlook is gloomy, due to the fact that so many of the mainstays of Yale's eleven last fall have been graduated.

The early practice will bring out about 120 players of whom the number of veterans of varsity eleven caliber will be unusually small. Among those close to varsity sports it was said today that Head Coach Tad Jones faces the most difficult task in his experience here, for he will have to find a team which can hold its own against Dartmouth, Brown, Army, Princeton and Harvard out of players who were far from outstanding in their play last fall.

SHRADER SETS RECORD AT TAYLORVILLE TRACK

TAYLORVILLE, Ill., Sept. 3. — Gus Shrader, Cedar Rapids, Ia., driving a Doyle Valve Special set a new track record in the automobile races at the close of the Christian County Fair here today when he drove his car one lap in 30 seconds. The result of the 10-mile race follows: Boyle Valve Special, Shrader, first. Hamilton Special, Bennie Shoaf, second; Springfield Special, Zook, third. Time 11.3.

PROMOTERS START ELIMINATION BOUTS IN FLYWEIGHT RANKS

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Sept. 3.—With the reitrement of Fidel Labarba, flyweight title holder, the California promoters have started a tournament to determine his successor. George Blake, manager of the champion, says Fidel can still do 112 pounds, but his entry into Stanford University will prevent any title match now. The Hollywood Legion is staging Corporal Izzy Schwartz-Speedy Dado match, at 112 pounds, as a starter. The winner will meet Willie Davies of Pennsylvania and the winner of that will take on Newsboy Brown. Britt Gorman of Minneapolis and Frankie Genaro, former fly champion, are also there for the tourney.

If one goes up, the others must come down

Your car will run better with "balanced" PENNANT gasoline and motor oil

Since you can't have lemonade that is both sweet and sour—nor coffee that is both rich and weak—it is impossible to have a gasoline that has both "low initial" and "end point" and at the same time strong pulling power when the motor is hot.

These are two contradictory qualities. In unbalanced gasoline, one quality is in excess at the sacrifice of the other!

By a special process at the refinery, PIERCE PENNANT gasoline is balanced—equalized—harmonized—so as to combine all the flashy quick-starting and all the high-power qualities possible to combine in one gasoline.

By a special process also PIERCE PENNANT motor oil is balanced—proportioned—symmetrized—so as to combine all the quick-flowing quality at starting temperatures and all the "oiliness" and heat resistance that can be combined in one motor oil.

You'll notice the difference at once in your motor, but you'll notice it still more after several hundred miles, when you find you're getting this better performance at less cost per mile.

Pierce Petroleum Corporation Since 1857 St. Louis

"I toured for two weeks," said Mr. Day of Webster Groves, "and I sure learned a lesson. I know now that gasolines are not all alike—far from it!

"Some would start all right and others made the engine pull, but not one of them had both easy-starting quality and high power at engine temperatures.

"I thought often of 'balanced' PIERCE PENNANT gasoline and the picture of the two boys on the see-saw. And when I got back to St. Louis I was mighty glad to fill the tank up again with the one easy-starting gasoline that also has power!"

ANNUAL PIKE'S PEAK CLIMB ON LABOR DAY

Stock Cars to Compete in Their Class as Well as Racing "Specials."

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Col., Sept. 3.—Keener competition than ever before is expected in the Labor day automobile race to the summit of Pike's Peak, which is generally accepted as the blue ribbon hill climb in this country. There will be two competitions, one for "special" cars, the other for stock models.

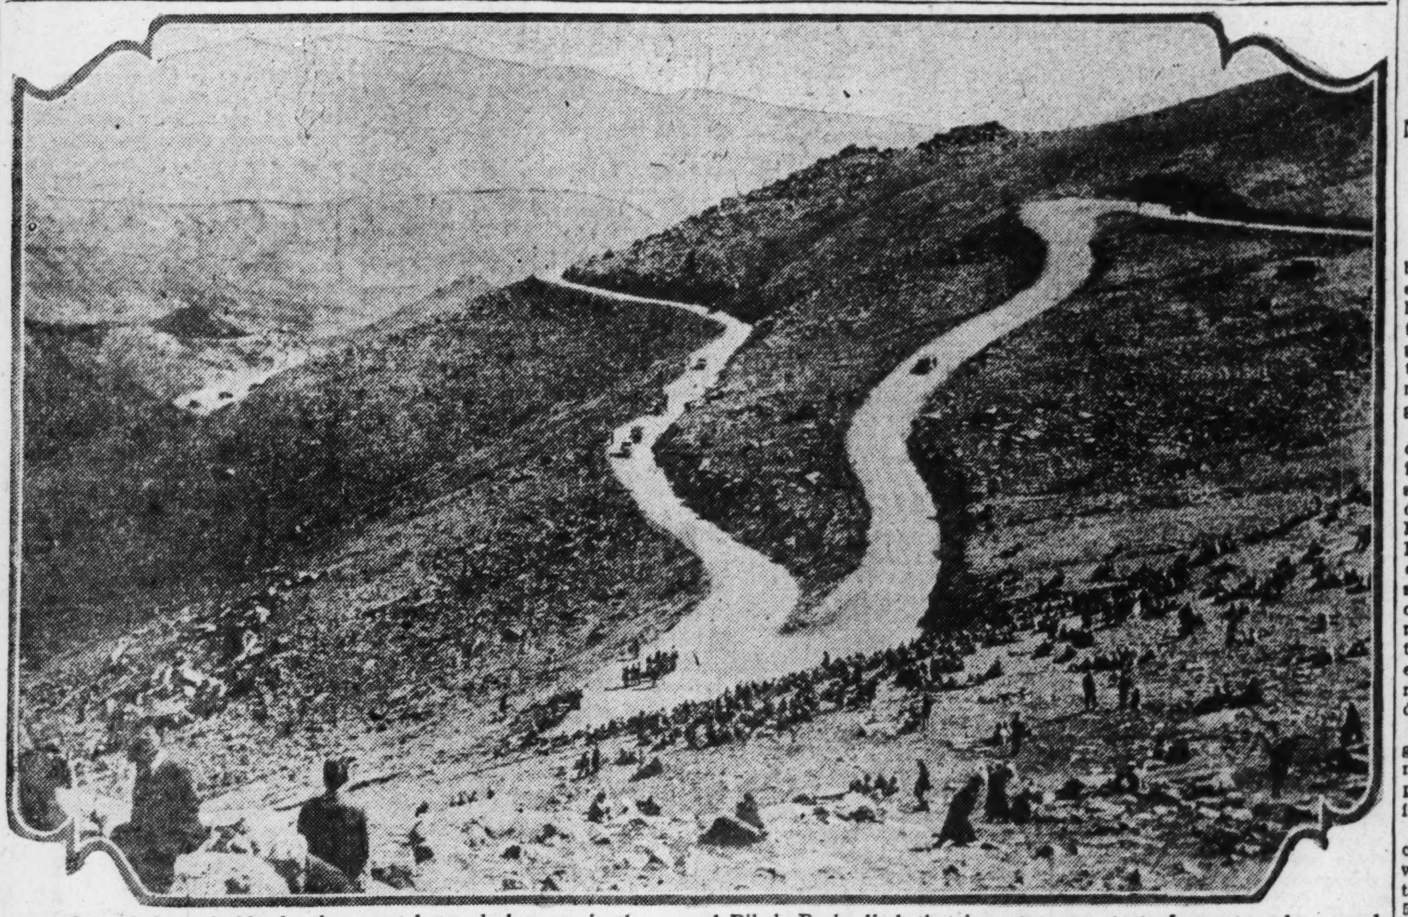
Among the stock cars entered are Auburn, Stutz, Studebaker and Star four. The "specials," which are more or less extensive modifications of standard chassis, include Stutz, Lexington, Paige and others. How many of the cars entered will start will not be known until Labor day morning.

Wade Morton, racing veteran, is to pilot a stock Auburn roadster. Glen Schulz, winner of last year's climb, is to drive a Stutz "special." Charles Meyers, who holds the record for the climb, is scheduled to drive a Studebaker.

F. E. Moscovics, president of the Stutz Motor Car Co., and Bert Dingle, the old racing driver who is Stutz factory service manager, are here to see that the Stutz stock entries are in fit condition for the race.

The annual Pike's Peak classic is a real thriller, for the cars must climb from an altitude of some 7000 feet to the top of the mountain, which is 14,120 feet above sea level. The road up the flank of the mountain twists and turns continually in a series of switchbacks. The roadway is 20 to 50 feet wide, and the grade ranges up to a maximum of 10½ per cent.

Where Cars' Stamina and Drivers' Skill Undergo a Real Testing



One of the switchbacks that must be made by cars in the annual Pike's Peak climb that is a strenuous test of car staunchness and power and drivers' skill and courage.

ALL-WEATHER ROUTE ASSURED FROM KANSAS CITY TO OMAHA

By the Associated Press.

ATCHISON, Kan., Sept. 3.—An all-weather highway from Kansas City to Omaha was assured the past week when the Atchison County Commissioners let contracts totaling $42,482.93 for bringing up to standard grade the last unimproved link of United States highway No. 73 north from Kansas City, Kan.

The work contracted for today involves grading-graveling of six and a half miles of road from northwest of Atchison to the Brown County line. The remainder of the highway in Kansas is now being improved.

DAIMLER BRINGS OUT MINIATURE '12' ENGINE

New V Type Motor Has Only 188 Cubic Inch Piston Displacement and Dual Units.

A car with what is believed to be by far the smallest 12-cylinder engine ever made for public sale has been standardized for 1928 by the Daimler Co., Coventry, England, which last year about this time introduced a 12-cylinder model that was the largest passenger car ever built.

These two extremes in 12-cylinder car size are made on almost identical lines. The new car is simply a relatively miniature rendering of the other. Both have Knight sleeve valves, as have all Daimlers for 20 years past. The engine consists of two blocks of six cylinders set V-fashion on the crankcase. There are two magnetos, two battery-coil ignition systems (for dual ignition is provided), two water pumps, two carburetors and two entirely separate induction systems.

The bore and stroke of the engine are 65x94 m. m. (approximately 2½x3¾ inches), the total piston displacement, therefore, being only 188 cubic inches.

This engine is to be fitted in chassis of four different sizes, the wheelbases ranging from 131 inches to 145 inches, and the tract from 52 inches to 60 inches. Roomy bodies can, therefore, be fitted on the largest chassis.

The price of this car in England ranges from $5650 to $7150 for the chassis alone and from $7850 to $10,900 for complete sedans.

Best Irish Setter in show—Big Boy.

Big Boy has been a consistent winner wherever shown and his win of last Sunday puts him in the champion class. Besides being the best Irish Setter in the show he was rated as the best dog of the entire show.

This Irishman is not only a Bench Show dog, but is a real bird dog in the field.

Pointers — Puppies. Burleigh's Carolina Touchstone, George P. Burleigh.

Pointers—Open dogs, under 55 pounds. Manitoba Speed Boy, Mrs. E. Hoechst.

Pointers—Limit dogs, 55 pounds and over. Gump's Indiana Rex, James Garman.

Best Pointer in show, Gump's Indiana Rex.

Frank Fellows of Springfield, Mo., judged all dogs, and he deserves a vote of thanks from every one for the able manner in which he handled this difficult job. As a rule there are a number of exhibitors who feel that the judges have not rendered a fair decision, either through ignorance or prejudice, but at this show there was not a single complaint.

Fellows is one of Springfield's most prominent business men, and at one time owned one of the best pointer kennels in the United States.

Frank Fellows bred dogs for the love of the game and not for profit, and developed some of the best in the country. There was no better shooting dog of any breed than Frank's Den, which was one of Fellows' best pointers. In the trap Shooting Contest, Dr. Art. Azman was high over a field of 45 with a score of 97 out of 100.

Dove Season Is Opened.

Dove season opened on Thursday and the hunters turned out in goodly numbers, and, while some of the shooters had no trouble in getting the limit of 10, others complained that the doves had left the country.

C. C. Cherbonnier and Ed Schopp spent last week-end on the Robidoux near Waynesville, and report good fishing.

On August 23 at the Missouri State Fair was held the first Outdoor Life Conference of Missouri. The object of this conference was to awaken public interest in the conservation of wild life in the State, and to create in the minds of the public a desire to co-operate with the Game and Fish Department by, not only complying the laws pertaining to hunting and fishing but by taking a more active interest in Game Protection and Propagation.

We must take off our hats to the present game commissioner, for he has accomplished more since he has been in office than anyone else who has held this position, and while the writer may not be in sympathy with all of McCanse's ideas, his work has accomplished wonders and the improvement in conditions is very noticeable, and if Kieth will only get started on the Auxiliary Game Refuges we will sing his praises louder than ever.

Duck shooting this section bids fair to be much better than it was last fall, and if the cool weather continues we will have some blue wing shooting on the opening day.

Conditions in Arkansas are no better than last year, for the floods are still in evidence with very little chance of receding enough to make good shooting. Last year there were plenty of ducks in the country but there was so much water everywhere the ducks were not confined to any one spot but spread out for miles and it was almost impossible for anyone to secure a good bag. The high water in the various states saved thousands and thousands of ducks last year so we will have a chance at some of these this fall.

Coaffee Defeats Bowman in Sprint

Captures 100-Yard Event in Meet at Toronto—Dehart Hubbard Also in Race.

By the Associated Press.

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 3.—Cyril Coaffee of the Illinois A. C. won the feature event of the Canadian National exhibition track and field meet today when he defeated Dehart Hubbard, former Michigan University star, and Chester Bowman, United States national sprint champion, in the 100-yard invitation dash. Coaffee's time was 9 4-5 seconds.

A mixup occurred in running the 12-mile modified marathon, in which R. McHugh of Chicago was declared the winner by officials. Harold Webster of Hamilton claimed to have been first, and Charles Snell of Toronto insisted he was among the first three, but neither claim was allowed.

Miss Ethel Catherwood of Saskatoon, failed in her attempt to set a new world's record in the high jump, but bettered her Canadian record by one inch in clearing the bar at 5 feet, 2 inches.

YALE, WITH VETERANS GONE, PESSIMISTIC IN FOOTBALL OUTLOOK

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 3.—Football prospects at Yale this coming fall are regarded with some pessimism by those who are already here in anticipation of a start of practice on Sept. 15. The outlook is gloomy, due to the fact that so many of the mainstays of Yale's eleven last fall have been graduated.

The early practice will bring out about 120 players of whom the number of veterans of varsity eleven caliber will be unusually small. Among those close to varsity sports it was said today that Head Coach Tad Jones faces the most difficult task in his experience here, for he will have to find a team which can hold its own against Dartmouth, Brown, Army, Princeton and Harvard out of players who were far from outstanding in their play last fall.

SHRADER SETS RECORD AT TAYLORVILLE TRACK

PROMOTERS START ELIMINATION BOUTS IN FLYWEIGHT RANKS

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Sept. 3.—With the retirement of Fidel Labarba, flyweight title holder, the California promoters have started a tournament to determine his successor. George Blake, manager of the champion, says Fidel can still do 112 pounds, but his entry into Stanford University will prevent any title match now. The Hollywood Legion is staging Corporal Izzy Schwartz-Speedy Dado match, at 112 pounds, as a starter. The winner will meet Willie Davies of Pennsylvania and the winner of that will take on Newsboy Brown. Britt Gorman of Minneapolis and Frankie Genaro, former fly champion, are also there for the tourney.

If one goes up, the others must come down

Your car will run better with "balanced" PENNANT gasoline and motor oil

Since you can't have lemonade that is both sweet and sour—nor coffee that is both rich and weak—it is impossible to have a gasoline that has both "low initial" and "end point" and at the same time strong pulling power when the motor is hot.

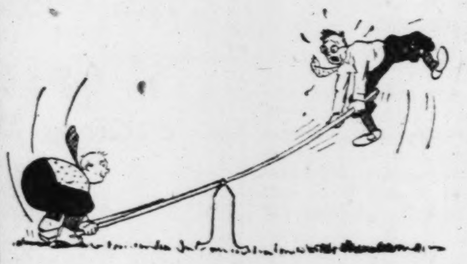
These are two contradictory qualities. In unbalanced gasoline, one quality is in excess at the sacrifice of the other!

By a special process at the refinery, PIERCE PENNANT gasoline is balanced—equalized—harmonized—so as to combine all the flashy quick-starting and all the high-power qualities possible to combine in one gasoline.

By a special process also PIERCE PENNANT motor oil is balanced—proportioned—symmetrized—so as to combine all the quick-flowing quality at starting temperatures and all the "oiliness" and heat resistance that can be combined in one motor oil.

You'll notice the difference at once in your motor, but you'll notice it still more after several hundred miles, when you find you're getting this better performance at less cost per mile.

Pierce Petroleum Corporation Since 1857 St. Louis



"I toured for two weeks," said Mr. Day of Webster Groves, "and I sure learned a lesson. I know now that gasolines are not all alike—far from it!

"Some would start all right and others made the engine pull, but not one of them had both easy-starting quality and high power at engine temperatures.

"I thought often of 'balanced' PIERCE PENNANT gasoline and the picture of the two boys on the see-saw. And when I got back to St. Louis I was mighty glad to fill the tank up again with the one easy-starting gasoline that also has power!"

The race is to be for about 360 miles over a 6-mile course surfaced largely with gravel and with five turns, including a hairpin curve. Souders is a graduate of dirt track racing in this country. ANNUAL PIKE'S PEAK CLIMB ON LABOR DAY

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Col., Sept. 3.—Keener competition than ever before is expected in the Labor day automobile race to the summit of Pike's Peak, which is generally accepted as the blue ribbon hill climb in this country. There will be two competitions, one for "special" cars, the other for stock models.

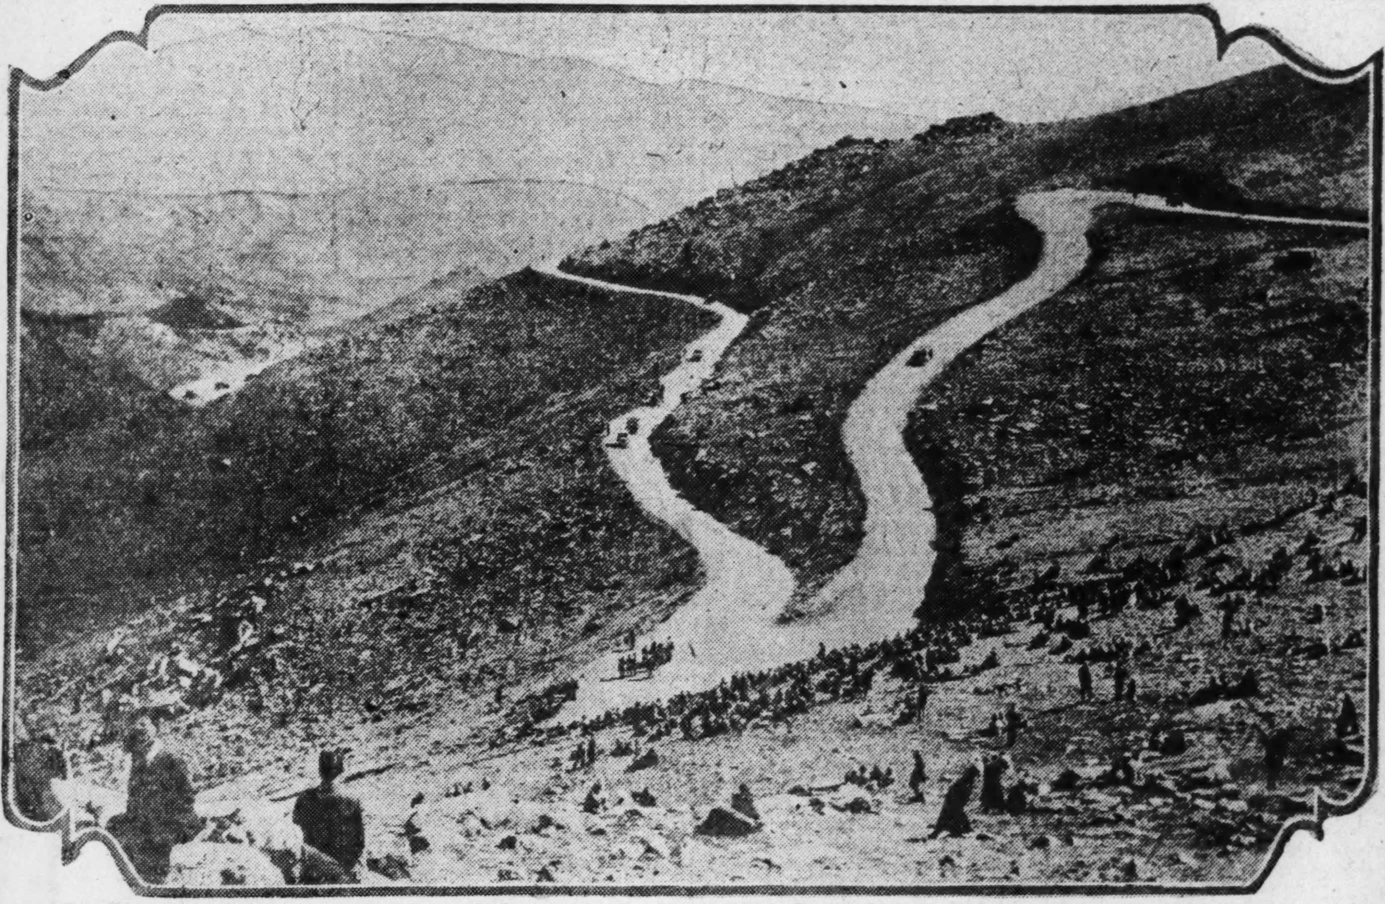
Among the stock cars entered are Auburn, Stutz, Studebaker and Star four. The "specials," which are more or less extensive modifications of standard chassis, include Stutz, Lexington, Paige and others. How many of the cars entered will start will not be known until Labor day morning.

Wade Morton, racing veteran, is to pilot a stock Auburn roadster. Glen Schulz, winner of last year's climb, is to drive a Stutz "special." Charles Meyers, who holds the record for the climb, is scheduled to drive a Studebaker.

F. E. Moscovics, president of the Stutz Motor Car Co., and Bert Dingle, the old racing driver who is Stutz factory service manager, are here to see that the Stutz stock entries are in fit condition for the race.

The annual Pike's Peak classic is a real thriller, for the cars must climb from an altitude of some 7000 feet to the top of the mountain, which is 14,120 feet above sea level. The road up the flank of the mountain twists and turns continually in a series of switchbacks. The roadway is 20 to 50 feet wide, and the grade ranges up to a maximum of 10½ per cent.

Where Cars' Stamina and Drivers' Skill Undergo a Real Testing



One of the switchbacks that must be made by cars in the annual Pike's Peak climb that is a strenuous test of car staunchness and power and drivers' skill and courage.

ALL-WEATHER ROUTE ASSURED FROM KANSAS CITY TO OMAHA

By the Associated Press.

ATCHISON, Kan., Sept. 3.—An all-weather highway from Kansas City to Omaha was assured the past week when the Atchison County Commissioners let contracts totaling $42,482.93 for bringing up to standard grade the last unimproved link of United States highway No. 73 north from Kansas City, Kan.

The work contracted for today involves grading-graveling of six and a half miles of road from northwest of Atchison to the Brown County line. The remainder of the highway in Kansas is now being improved.

DAIMLER BRINGS OUT MINIATURE '12' ENGINE

New V Type Motor Has Only 188 Cubic Inch Piston Displacement and Dual Units.

A car with what is believed to be by far the smallest 12-cylinder engine ever made for public sale has been standardized for 1928 by the Daimler Co., Coventry, England, which last year about this time introduced a 12-cylinder model that was the largest passenger car ever built.

These two extremes in 12-cylinder car size are made on almost identical lines. The new car is simply a relatively miniature rendering of the other. Both have Knight sleeve valves, as have all Daimlers for 20 years past. The engine consists of two blocks of six cylinders set V-fashion on the crankcase. There are two magnetos, two battery-coil ignition systems (for dual ignition is provided), two water pumps, two carburetors and two entirely separate induction systems.

The bore and stroke of the engine are 65x94 m. m. (approximately 2½x3¾ inches), the total piston displacement, therefore, being only 188 cubic inches.

This engine is to be fitted in chassis of four different sizes, the wheelbases ranging from 131 inches to 145 inches, and the tract from 52 inches to 60 inches. Roomy bodies can, therefore, be fitted on the largest chassis.

The price of this car in England ranges from $5650 to $7150 for the chassis alone and from $7850 to $10,900 for complete sedans.

They Are Fast, Powerful

We appreciate that speed is of major importance to many motorists. You will find the Paige eight a fast and capable car. Because of its four-speed transmission, you will enjoy a new sense of quiet and restfulness at high speeds.

An entirely new type of manifold, exclusive with Paige, gives exceptional speed, acceleration and power to Paige sixes.

The motors in all Paige cars are smooth, quiet and economical. They are completely water-jacketed, insuring efficient cooling. Filtered oil, under high pressure, lubricates them thoroughly. They have air cleaners, and bronze-backed, interchangeable bearings. Timing is by silent chain.

We invite you to experience the power and speed of one of the improved Paige sixes or eights on the open road. Ten of the twenty Paige models are now available at lower prices.

'SENTINEL PLAN' PUMPS GUARANTEE PURE OIL

St. Louis Oil Co., New "Hundred Penn" Distributer, Explains Marketing Method.

The St. Louis Oil Co., 240 South Boyle avenue, following its appointment as distributer of "Hundred Penn" lubricating oil, a product of the Canfield Oil Co., Coraopolis, Pa., is introducing here a protective method of marketing the oil which guarantees delivery of 100 per cent pure Pennsylvania oil from the refinery to the motorist's automobile, according to N. J. Hill, president of the local firm.

The plan of the distributer is to supply each dealer in the oil with a set of "Sentinel Plan" blue and orange pumps, equipped with lock and seal, and so arranged that only bonded representatives of the St. Louis Oil Co. can refill them. This is to insure against adulteration, and 80 gasoline stations and garages in St. Louis have so far adopted the plan, Hill states.

This distribution plan guarantees the buyer the same assurance of purity and quality that he would get if he bought Pennsylvania oil in a sealed and branded can, and poured it into his crankcase himself, but without the work and inconvenience of handling a clumsy can and of storing oil drums in his garage.

The St. Louis Oil Co. is a member of the Pennsylvania Grade Crude Oil Association, and that association's seal, as well as the Hundred Penn brand emblem, appears on all the company's delivery pumps.

Cast Iron For Paving.

Cast iron is being tried out as a paving material in France. The Avenue Leon Bollee, a main highway of Le Mans, is paved with iron plates. The plates, as designed by the Government's chief of road engineers, present a slightly corrugated surface which is smooth for automobiles, but rough enough to prevent horses from slipping. Ten tons of plates were used, and engineers say that the new type of road will not only insure durability, but afford a new use for old iron.

ANCIENT ART IN MODERN CAR DESIGN, SAYS REO EXECUTIVE

Art of centuries past is embodied in modern motor design to no small degree, and lines, combinations of angles and curves dating back through medieval to prehistoric times are evidenced in even the most advanced body and chassis design, says C. A. Triphagen, sales manager of the Reo Motor Car Co.

"For example," continues Triphagen, "bowls dug up in ancient Corinth have the same contour, to within a few millimeters, of headlamps used on automobiles of today. Automobile bodies and wheels are being painted with color combinations found in King Tut's tomb. Look at the electric horn of your car, and you will probably be able to find its exact counterpart in the same proportion and vurvature in any one of a number of museums—a counterpart in the form of a vase, fashioned, perhaps, by some Carthaginian potter of Salaambo's day.

"There is not one curve, line, angle or plane, not a single type of cornice, window or molding in the modern automobile body which has not been used by the artists and sculptors of ancient times in some other manner, and while the present-day adaptation of these may seem striking and modernly beautiful, it is merely the combination of that which men of other days carved in stone and of tile, or painted on walls or fabric."

BONHAM WHOLESALE CHIEF FOR SOUTHWEST NASH CO.

J. H. BONHAM

Appointment of J. H. Bonham, for several years special factory representative of the Nash Motor Co., as general manager of the wholesale department of the Southwest Nash Co., is announced by F. C. McDonald, president of the latter firm, which is Nash distributor.

Bonham takes the position with warm endorsement from E. H. McCarty, general sales manager of the Nash Motor Co.

Bonham will have charge of wholesale distribution of Nash cars throughout Southern Illinois and Eastern Missouri for the Southwest Nash Co.

He is a native of Missouri, and, prior to joining Nash five years ago, had a wide automotive experience. His work for Nash was largely among dealers in the South.

SPECIAL SPRINGS AID NASH ROADABILITY, SAYS FACTORY

Exceptional riding comfort of the 21 new models recently introduced by Nash is attributed to the new, secret process alloy steel springs developed by Nash engineers, says a factory statement.

"These springs," says the factory, "are a departure from the usual in that they are individually designed to the weight and size of each model, offering scientific resistance to road shocks and eliminating guesswork to their effectiveness on all types of roads. There are actually nine different types of Nash springs in all. These types were developed for cars in nine different classifications of weight, center of gravity, etc.

"The alloy steel from which they are constructed is made by a secret process which produces a metal perfectly suited for the purpose of absorbing shocks. The spring action in the new Nash cars duplicates in effect the action of shock absorbers."

STUTZ STOCK CARS TO RACE AT ATLANTIC CITY TOMORROW

"Safety Stutz stock cars are to compete in Labor day races at Atlantic City as well as at Charlotte, N. C., on Sept. 19, for the dual purpose of demonstrating their speed and stamina to the public and to afford an opportunity for invaluable lessons to be learned from such drastic performances," says Charles S. Crawford, chief engineer of Stutz Motor Car Co. of America, who made this statement at Indianapolis last week as he as superintending the last details of getting three Black Hawk two-passenger Stutz speedster models ready for their road trip to the tracks.

"Tom Rooney, Gil Anderson and L. L. Corum of the Stutz organization will drive.

"The cars to be seen in stock car racing events at Atlantic City and at Charlotte, N. C., are stock cars, such as come under the strict classification of the American Automobile Association's contest board. They leave the factory as they would be delivered to a customer, but A. A. A. track rulings call for the removal of fenders, windshields, running boards and headlights when the cars line up for track contests.

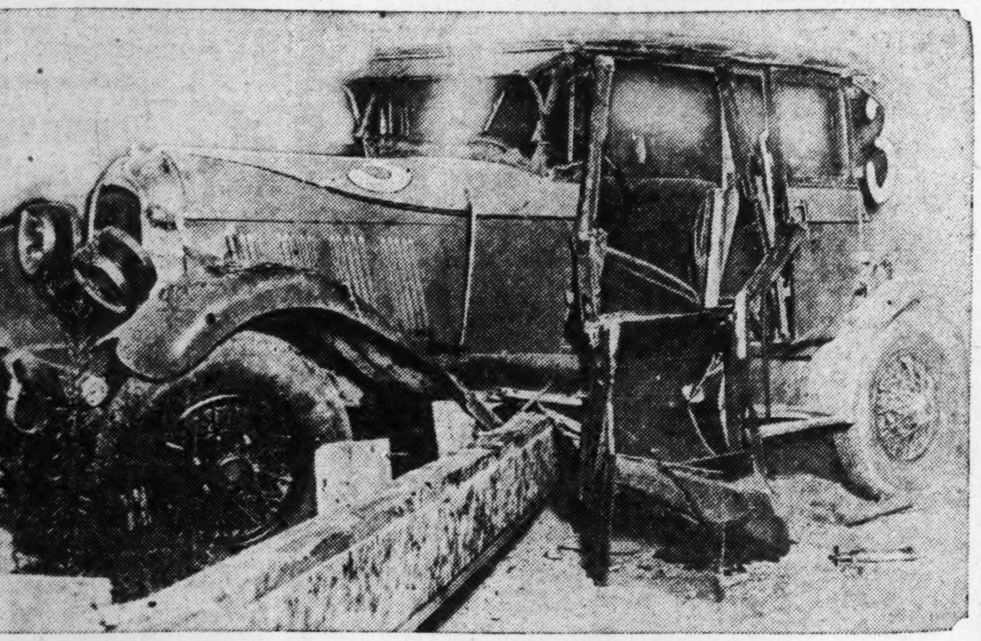
15,000 Miles at 67 m. p. h. Despite Smash



The staunchness of the modern automobile chassis is illustrated by this Auburn eight car which skidded in the rain at high speed during the recent endurance trials on the Atlantic City speedway, turned over and slid on its top into the wall. Despite the wreck and the smashing of fenders and doors, the Auburn was back on the track in six hours and continued until it had covered 15,000 miles at an average actual running speed of 67.621 miles per hour.

REO MODELS PLEASURE, NOT PASSENGER CARS, SAYS PLANT

Revival of the term "pleasure car," as applied to an automobile designed to carry passengers, marks a forward step in motoring progress, says the Reo Motor Car. Co., and insists that all new Reo models be known as "pleasure cars" rather than as "passenger cars."

The reasons given for this return to the original term are that present-day advances in motor-car design have rendered "passenger car" as obsolete as "pleasure car" was once thought to be.

"As a matter of fact,, the term 'pleasure car' was only abandoned as a war-time measure, and the disuse into which it has fallen has nothing to do with its merit. In addition, 'pleasure car' is a much more valuable term today than it was 10 years ago, for the reason that new cars more accurately fit this description," the factory says.

BUICK HAS HEAT-HESISTING 'S' VALVES AIRPLANES USE

Conform Easily to Block Irregularities and Have Longer Life Than Others.

The heat-resisting "S" steel valves which made possible the recent triumphs of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, Commander Richard E. Byrd, and the other trans-oceanic fliers have been standard exhaust equipment on Buick for several years.

Buick became interested in the "S" steel valve, made by Thompson Products, Inc., through tests by the United States Bureau of Aeronautics, at Anacostia, Md. The result of these tests was adoption of the new valve by every American aircraft engine maker and by several foreign makers. For the tests showed that this valve's use increased the life of aircraft engines, which during the World War averaged about five hours—to more than 50 hours. Today the life of an aircraft engine is 300 hours or more, so great has been the progress in valve development. It was, in fact, the perfection of "S" steel valves which made air-cooled aircraft engines possible at all.

Hundreds of explosions occur in each cylinder every minute. The heat which they generate is suggested by the sizzling temperature of the exhaust manifold, but the temperature of the manifold does not even approximate that within the chamber itself. The exhaust valves are continually bathed in fire, for they do not get even the slight cooling which the influx of fresh mixture affords the intake valves. If they could be seen in operation they would be found a brilliant cherry red much of the time.

After "destruction" runs in aircraft engines which ruined the ordinary valve, the Thompsons were still in perfect condition. Their stems had taken on a glossy, mirror-like shine, which resisted wear. They were unwarped, unburned, and unimpaired in efficiency. In operation, their faces showed a tendency to conform to the slightest irregularities in the block seat, making a tight seal. They were, also, lighter than other valves, or operated more quietly. They would run six times as long as ordinary valves without regrinding.

So the Buick owner has the same valves that are performing satisfactorily in airplanes all over the world.

SKOURAS THEATERS TO HAVE CASHOGAS COUPON DAYS

Skouras neighborhood theaters will start Cashogas coupon days, Sept. 5. These coupons, as the public generally knows, are redeemable in gasoline or oil at all Pierce Pennant stations.

Twenty-seven theaters in this chain will offer on one or two days each week, 10 Cashogas coupons with each adult's ticket, and 5 with each child's admission. In addition, they will redeem Cashogas coupons for either cash or theater tickets.

SAFETY PRODUCTS CORP. OPENS CHICAGO OFFICE

The Safety Products Corp., with main office at 2330 Locust street, has completed plans for a Chicago office, which will supply Chicago and adjoining territory with the Safeco compensator.

This device is the latest improvement for hydraulic brakes. It eliminates pumping up brakes, "bleeding," dragging brakes in hot weather and lost motion in pedal.

Sales in the Chicago district are reported to have been very satisfactory.

Dr. Blosser's Cigarettes are very pleasant to smoke, and as you smoke them you can feel their warm, healing vapors soothing the sore, inflamed tissues and membranes, and relieving the congestion of the tiny choked airways. AUTOMOTIVE CONDITIONS FAVORABLE, SAYS GARDNER

"The automobile field as a whole is facing unusually favorable conditions. The manufacturing situation is not adverse, to start with, and world conditions appear to be steadily mending," in the optimistic opinion of Russell E. Gardner, president of Gardner Motor Co., Inc.

"The liberality of American bankers in making foreign loans has not only placed foreign territory in possession of sufficient capital, but has unquestionably done much to predispose our neighbors to buy American made products. Inevitably this must react to indirect stimulation of the automobile industry here, as well as help directly toward increasing the volume of American automobile sales," says Gardner.

"Add to this the fact that we are justified in expecting an increased replacement demand this season, and it will be easily understood that the outlook is somewhat above the usual. It is to be remembered also in this connection that American automobiles dominate the replacement market, being in the neighborhood of 91 per cent of the total world replacement of automobiles."

SPEED KEYNOTE IN MODERN LIVING, SAYS W. P. CHRYSLER

The old adage about "haste making waste" may still be a good philosophical calculation, but "speed" is the keynote in modern life and industrial practice, says Walter P. Chrysler, president of Chrysler Sales Corporation, in a signed interview published recently in Collier's Weekly.

"Speed," he says, "elevates living standards by promoting leisure. The use of all up-to-date ingenuities in time and labor saving improves private life quite as much as it improves business operations. The best way to express the supremacy of speed in our civilization is as a synonym for service.

"The American people are so progressive, move so swiftly and demand so much more in service today than they did yesterday, that the manufacturer who is on the crest of the wave must keep pace or become a back number in 12 months."

How rapidly the automobile industry has moved in keeping pace with the nation's progress Chrysler illustrates by pointing out that when he entered that business a production of 30 or 40 cars a day for a limited time in the annual rush period of about three months was regarded as satisfactory business.

"Now," he says, "in even the middle priced field, a plant is loafing if it doesn't produce from 500 to 700 cars a day, while the cheaper price fields exceed that productivity in ratio to their market prospects, which are, of course, wider than they ever were.

"Naturally, this line of thought brings the motor car manufacturer to the much-discussed question whether a saturation point in automobile production is to be reached some time.

"The question cannot be answered until somebody scientifically defines the saturation point. Growing population, increasing prosperity, intensive desire for the adventure of quick motion and its utility, postpone any attempt to fix the saturation point."

HOW OIL FILTER FUNCTIONS

Describing the function of an oil filter on present-day automobiles, C. W. McKinley, research engineer of the AC Spark Plug Co., declares that an automobile running at average speed circulates the oil in the crankcase throughout the engine's oiling system from 100 to 150 times an hour.

The filter keeps the oil clean, insuring effective lubrication, reducing to a minimum the abrasive matter that ordinarily would cause excessive wear to cylinders, pistons, bearings and other engine parts.

CHEVROLET DEALERS HEAR NATIONAL SALES AUTHORITY

Harry Chamberlain, nationally-known sales authority, who for the past several months has been engaged in conducting sales classes for Chevrolet distributers and dealers in the West, addressed the Chevrolet dealers and salesmen of the St. Louis zone in a two-day sales educational session at the Chevrolet factory here Wednesday and Thursday.

Most Dangerous Road.

One of the most dangerous motor speed courses in the world stretches up, down, and around the snow-capped mountain roads of Switzerland. Daredevil drivers dash over the famous Klaussen pass at a terrific rate of speed for a distance of 15 miles, from Linthal to the Col du Klaussen.

Long foreshadowed

The ideal transportation attained in this Greatest Essex Super-Six was long foreshadowed in the series of individual supremacies by which Essex leadership towered mountain high above the field.

4-pass. Speedster	835

World standards set by Essex itself must be surpassed to achieve it. Standards of comfort and performance, standards of riding ease and economy, and the outstanding standard of value.

Here is all that Essex gave in the past plus advancements that are new and unique in motordom. Here is 50 miles an hour all day long, far greater speed if you want it, and a riding ease that is actually like flying. And here is steam engine smoothness and power which performs the hardest or the simplest task with the same effortless ease.

Today's Essex, like Hudson, has an exclusive high-compression, anti-knock motor that, using ordinary gasoline, turns waste heat to power. These motors are the most powerful and efficient in the world per cubic inch of piston displacement, within our knowledge.

Thousands daily riding in the New Essex realize by what immense margins it holds its leadership—greater in power, performance and reliability—larger, roomier, more beautifully turned out and appointed. You have but to see it to share this enthusiasm. And no matter how high your expectations, they will be brilliantly met, and more, when you ride in the New Essex Super-Six.

Peel Years Off Aging Faces

Any woman can now look less than her age. Modern science has achieved in ordinary mercolized wax a medium which accomplishes the seemingly impossible. Just as a withering rose is made fresh and young looking by peeling off the faded outer petals, so the face will regain its youthful beauty, when the dead cuticle or scarf skin is removed, and the new underskin bursts forth. The wax actually peels off the aged surface skin, gently, harmlessly, but surely. Get an ounce at any drug store, use as directed—and watch the years peel off. Mercolized wax brings out the hidden beauty. To quickly remove wrinkles and age lines, use as face lotion; 1 ounce powdered saxolite and 1 half pint witch hazel.

VEILED PROPHET DUE IN ST. LOUIS OCT. 4

Annual Ball in His Honor Will Be Held in Coliseum Following Night.

Wherever the 1927 World's Series is held, the Veiled Prophet is coming to St. Louis Tuesday, Oct. 4, for his annual parade. The Prophet's Ball will be held in the Coliseum the following night.

This will be the forty-ninth festival in honor of the Veiled Prophet. Next year's celebration will be a golden jubilee. This year some new features will be tried, by way of working up to next year's big occasion.

The Prophet will enter the city from Lambert-St. Louis Flying Field. Those who wish to know whether, as announced, he arrives at the field by airplane can watch the field and see. Anyway, a Reception Committee will meet him at the field, and there will be an informal parade along the road and through city streets leading to his time-honored headquarters near Union Station.

No announcement has been made as to the character of this year's parade. Last year's pageant was based on newspaper cartoon and comic strip characters, and proved a popular hit.

As in recent years, the parade and ball will be on consecutive nights. If rain should prevent the parade Tuesday night, the postponement will be to Thursday night, Oct. 6.

500 SCOUTS TO GET BADGES FOR MERIT

Candidates Must Appear for Review Tests Before Examiners.

Approximately 500 St. Louis Boy Scouts will receive merit badges for Scout activities at the semi-annual "Court of Honor," to be held at the Scottish Rite Cathedral Monday, Sept. 19.

Candidates for "Star" and "Life" badges must present themselves for review at Scout headquarters between the hours of 4 and 5 p. m. Sept. 9 and 17, inclusive. Candidates for "Eagle" and "Palm" awards must appear at a similar hour on Sept. 7 to 10. Candidates must present written evidence of the date on which they became first-class Scouts and also evidence of parents, scoutmaster, teachers or troop committee that they have maintained an active relationship to scouting, have put into practice the principles of the Scout oath and have demonstrated qualities of leadership.

The troop showing the highest average of points for first and second class Scouts will be given the honor of carrying the national colors and council flag at the ceremony.

10 SCOUT EXECUTIVES TO ATTEND CONCLAVE

St. Louis Men at Wichita Meeting Will Tell of Order's Growth Here.

The biennial conference of scout executives will be held at Wichita, Kan., Sept. 18 to 26, inclusive.

About 200 paid scout executives from Missouri, Kansas, Wyoming, Arkansas, Colorado and Nebraska are expected to attend. St. Louis will send 10 representatives, headed by Earle W. Beckman, local scout executive, who also is chairman of the Regional Committee on Civic Service and Council Activity.

The conferences are held chiefly for the interchange of ideas on the advancement of scouting. Beckman expects to be called on to discuss the methods used in bringing the St. Louis scout enrollment to its present standing of 6568 boys, the highest membership in the history of the St. Louis organization.

Reasons for the exceptional interest shown in scouting here include the annual scout "circus," the excellent camps at Irondale and the "Lion's Den" and the semi-annual merit badge show. Beckman and other local executives look for even greater interest to develop through the establishment during the past summer of the "roving camp." The first roving camp, or "teepee," took 40 local scouts on a motor trip of the East, stops including Dayton, Philadelphia, Atlantic City and Washington. The boys making the trip obtained many educational advantages in addition to having a good time.

Plans now are being prepared to enlarge on the roving camp idea next summer, details to be announced later. The initial trip, which lasted three weeks, was made at a cost of $100 to each scout making it. The expedition carried its own tents, kitchen and other equipment and was accompanied by an expert chef.

Boy Scout Troop Notes

NORTH DISTRICT.

Troop 72 — This troop's second annual Labor day hike is being held over this week-end. The new assistant scoutmasters, Block and Joyce, were heartily welcomed and plans for a log cabin are under way.

Troop 3 spent last Sunday at Highland, Ill. A tracking game was held and a number of tests were passed. Four visitors attended the hike. Two former scouts returned to the troop last Tuesday.

Troop 11 — At an interclub swimming meet held at the Y. M. H. A., Troop 11's four-man team captured the silver loving cup offered by the Y. Although competing against men much older, the scouts captured six firsts out of nine events.

WEST DISTRICT.

Troop 2 of the Pilgrim Congregational Church will hold its first fall meeting next Thursday evening. This troop anticipates a full season of scouting this winter. The majority of the troop were out of the city during the summer and are expected to return with collections of leaves, rocks and insects for the troop museum.

Troop 106 of the Second United Presbyterian Church departed Friday afternoon for Lion's Den to spend the week-end. This troop has conducted numerous hikes during the summer months, and the holiday hike will be the last before school opens.

SOUTH DISTRICT.

Troop 250—Twenty-five scouts, Scoutmaster Spohr, Assistant Scoutmaster Reiter and several of parents and friends, had an outing Aug. 28 at Fern Glen. A number of tests were passed.

LINDBERGH ON BOY SCOUT BOOK

The Boy Scout handbook is distributed at the rate of about 100,000 copies monthly. The cover design al will be used on 500,000 calendars to be issued for 1928.

TIME VALUED AT $400,000 GIVEN TO ST. LOUIS SCOUTS

Many Busy Men Spend Hours Without Charge Helping Work of Organization.

The advance made by the Boy Scout movement in general can be attributed in great part to the efforts of interested men who give their services to the work without charge.

In St. Louis and St. Louis County alone, it is estimated there are 1500 men who give an average of 5 hours weekly to scout work. Some idea of the value of this volunteer work can be obtained by placing a nominal sum, say $1 an hour, as the value of each man's time. The annual cost of such service at that rate would be approximately $400,000.

As in the case of the present local scout enrollment, the number of volunteer workers now promoting scouting is the highest in the history of the organization here.

Pony, 40 Years Old, Pensioned.

BERLIN, Sept. 4.—"Rich," an Argentine polo pony, 40 years old, has been "pensioned." His owner is Carl Weinberg, a noted breeder of Waldfried. In the Hoppegarten "Rich" was well known as a pony with a character of his own. He came as an "old horse" from Argentine 22 years ago. "Rich" was always patient and reliable. His nose grew white with age and he gained a great reputation for equine sagacity.

PASSENGERS FIND BUS LINES LEISURELY MODE OF TRAVEL WITH HASTY MEALS AT STOPS

By Carlos F. Hurd.
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

STAGECOACHING days of "Merrie England" and of the Colonial seaboard have been revived on Illinois and Missouri concrete highways by rival motorbus fleets which now carry 200 or more passengers daily from St. Louis to Chicago and a smaller number to Kansas City, with equal numbers on the return trips.

The traveler who buys a bus ticket to Chicago at half what a railroad would charge him for the same journey is not paying tribute to a powerful corporation. In some cases there is no corporation at all, the busses being owned by their drivers or other individuals, and run under a loose co-operative arrangement, with a commission to the local agents in St. Louis and Chicago. But this co-operative stage is passing, and there are at least two central companies, which own most of the busses run under their colors.

These concerns carry group insurance, to indemnify passengers and others against injury. Not all busses in the Chicago service are thus protected, as developed after the recent accident in Granite City, where a bus bound from Chicago to St. Louis wrecked a corner store.

The service between St. Louis and Chicago is not subject to the Illinois authorities, being interstate traffic, and Congress and the Interstate Commerce Commission have not thus far taken it in hand. The lines from St. Louis to Kansas City, being within the State of Missouri, are under supervision of the State Public Service Commission, and their right to operate on the highways is now being contested by the railroads.

Price Cut Attracts.

Motor busses were running to Chicago and Kansas City before this year, but the cut in rates, which has boomed business and made capacity trips common, came in the summer now waning. The cut was from $7 to $5 for the Chicago and Kansas City trips, with a $9.50 round trip fare to Chicago. This was cheaper than any rail rate except for infrequent coach excursions, which were for one day only, while the bus tickets are good for 30 days. In the last few weeks two lines have cut the Chicago rate to $4 one way and one has made a $3.50 fare on certain days.

The result may be seen between 7 and 8 a. m. any day, around the twisted intersection of Washington avenue and Eighteenth street. There the behemoth-like and varicolored busses, some of them bearing such names as "Miss Geraldine," start their loading.

Bargain-seeking travelers begin appearing soon after 6, and ballyhoo men of the rival lines sell them tickets and show them where to place their hand baggage at the curb. It must be only hand baggage, and everything larger than a woman's shopping bag or a thin brief case must go on top. Once on top, there is no disturbing it, and the traveler must do without anything which cannot be taken aboard in hands or pockets.

Within, the first impression is of the comfort of the deeply cushioned leather seats. The narrowness of space allotted to each person is noticed later, especially by passengers who are used to the comparative freedom of a railway coach, where one can walk in the aisle.

Engine Causes Delay.

With the Eighteenth street customers planted in the window seats, and each provided with a baggage check, the bus is ready for a round of hotels, which will fill the aisle seats. Unless, as sometimes happens, the motor requires some tinkering. The rules of railroading, which require the iron horse to leave the roundhouse in perfect condition, do not apply to these hippopotami of the highways, and the passenger may begin his all-day lesson in patience before he gets out of town.

The last hotel visited, the motor-mauling finished and the baggage covered with a tarpaulin, the bus is off on its 12-hour trip, with its 20 to 32 passengers. Over McKinley Bridge and through the Tricities, it makes a promising start, only to make a protracted stop at an Edwardsville or Nameoki filling station. Lunch at Springfield, or occasionally at Carlinville, is the hurried affair that old-time travelers remember in the railroad lunchrooms before dining-car days. In the afternoon ride through Lincoln, Bloomington and Pontiac, limbs become cramped, until even an attack of tire trouble is welcomed as giving an excuse for a seventh-inning stretch by the roadside.

The supper-time snack is an informal and inexpensive affair, at a wayside beanery near Joliet. Here the driver, unapproachable autocrat of the steering wheel, strides into the kitchen and joins the waiters in serving hot dogs and hamburger sandwiches to passengers. This should delight persons who, on shipboard, insist on seats at the captain's table.

Drivers Co-operate.

Probably another busload is in the little restaurant at the same time, for the busses trail each other much of the time. The drivers fraternize at the stopping points, exchange spare parts and aid in each other's tinkering. Passengers sometimes grow restless while their drivers work on rival busses, but their complaints, like Horace Greeley's historic admonitions to Hank Monk, demon stagecoach driver of the Rockies, are met with the bland counsel that they remain seated and keep calm, in which event they will get to Chicago sometime.

Dusk is likely to find the tourists somewhere between Joliet and the suburbs of Berwyn and Cicero, through which Chicago is entered. On some of the lines, the lights in the car are for use only when it is standing still, and the passengers sit in darkness, dozing, or, if the collegiate element is aboard, listening to "Me and My Shadow" and "'Twas on a Night Like This."

Arrived in downtown Chicago, all pile out and wait for their grips to be heaved from above. They have saved several dollars, as compared with railroad fare, lost several hours, as compared with rail schedules, and they may feel that they have earned all they have saved. However, not all travel discomfort is to be found in busses. People who ride in steel railroad coaches also get tired and dusty.

Naps on Night Trips.

Night busses are run on all the lines. Within the metropolitan zone of Chicago the first hour and a half passes in meeting city-bound motors. Then there is a space for napping, interrupted by two sudden lightings-up and pilings-out for cold drinks and midnight lunch. After Springfield, with dawn peeping in at the left, there is little sleep except for the hardened bus riders who have come from Detroit or Pittsburg and are going on to Kansas City, or perhaps to Denver or Los Angeles. Through tickets are sold to the Pacific Coast, and honored on a series of connecting busses, the first being that from St. Louis to Kansas City.

Between St. Louis and Kansas City there is less through travel, and more local traffic, than on the Chicago line. On the run to Chicago the busses of three lines follow highway No. 4, through Springfield and Bloomington, and those of one line are routed by Effingham, Champaign and Kankakee.

U. S. Business Wakes to Menace Of Widening Scope of Court Power to Punish for Contempt

Originally a Matter of Minor Discipline, Then Invoked Against Labor Unions and Strikers, This Authority Has Proved a Two-Edged Sword, Now Cutting Corporations, Directors and Attorneys.

By Paul Y. Anderson,
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

THE President cannot do it; the General commanding the army cannot do it; Governors and Senators and Congressmen cannot do it. The Judge can do it. He may be only a little lawyer, barren of learning and steeped in prejudice but he can do what the wise and great cannot do. He can summarily jail any citizen who criticises his official actions. It is a kingly power. Jefferson and Madison dreaded it, and time has vindicated their fears.

Alarm over the tremendous growth of the power to punish for contempt is spreading to quarters where it was never felt before. Labor has long been bitter over its drastic employment against strikers. Distinguished lawyers have pointed to its ominous advance. Now the business world is becoming disturbed by it. Wise Judges themselves are troubled, and call solemnly for a halt.

Originally, the power to punish for contempt was intended only to preserve order in the court, to compel the testimony of reluctant witnesses, and to penalize those who actually interfered with the orderly processes of the courts. No sensible person could object to such a power; it is essential. Stealthily, however, its expansion was begun. Even then the conservative part of the community was not disturbed. But the old story is being repeated. The man who once condoned the drastic use of a power against those whom he disliked, now finds that power turned against himself.

Double-Edged Procedure Affecting Capital and Labor.

It was one thing to see a dozen pickets haled into court for violating a strike injunction. It is quite another to see the rich and respectable directors of a great corporation hauled up for protesting against the administration of a receivership. To see a labor editor flung into jail for criticising the acts of a court was not always abhorrent to Chambers of Commerce and Manufacturers' Associations. But to have a trade association jerked in for violating the terms of a consent decree is something to alarm every man with an income of more than $10,000 a year.

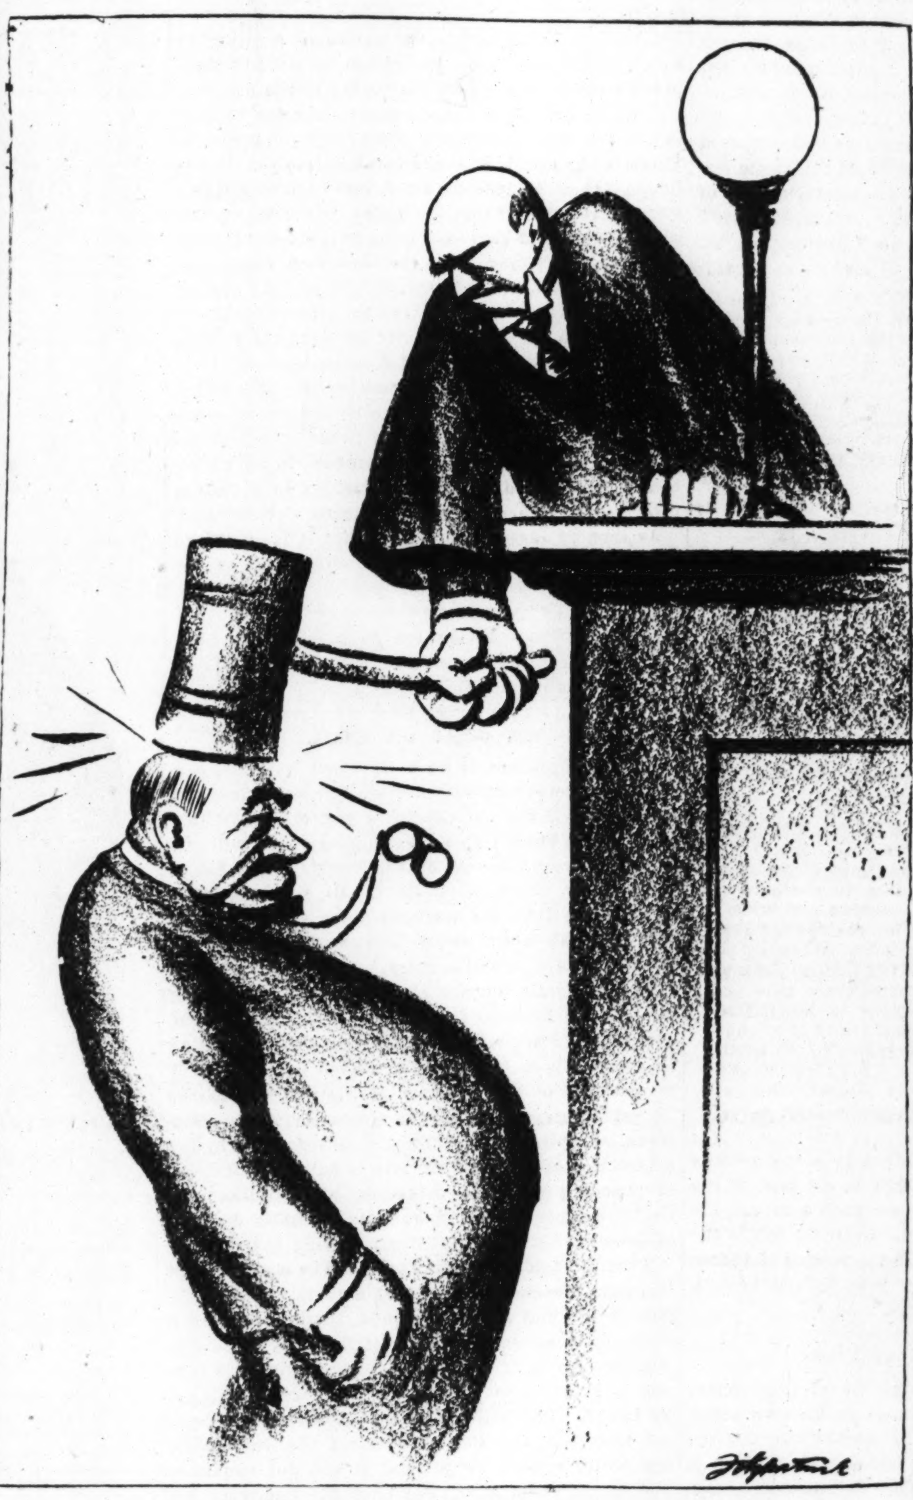
The most powerful objection to contempt proceedings is based on the nature of those proceedings, and arises from the normal man's natural sense of justice. That objection is, that in contempt proceedings the Judge is the victim, the complainant, the prosecutor, the jury and the Court. He senses the injury, makes the complaint, conducts the prosecution, determines the facts and imposes the sentence. An omnipotent God might do it fairly, but Judges are human. Some indeed, are barely that.

Freedom of Speech and Contempt Proceedings.

The case against contempt procedure is brilliantly stated in the September number of Harpers Magazine by John T. Flynn, in an article entitled, "Our Courts and Free Speech." Formerly managing editor of the New York Globe, prior to the purchase and suppression of that fine newspaper by the late Frank Munsey, Flynn became deeply interested in the development of contempt proceedings as employed against newspaper criticism. More recently, as a writer on business and economics, he has studied its use in connection with business reorganizations and trade regulation.

His recital conveys a terrific impression of the lengths to which contempt proceedings have actually been carried in this country. Criticism which could not remotely interfere with the orderly processes of the courts, has been summarily and drastically met. The suggestion that Judges are public servants and responsible to the people, has been irately and violently repudiated.

Scholars generally estimate that in law and court procedure the English are at least 50 years ahead of the United States. But in the item of contempt procedure the English probably are 100 years ahead. There was a time when contempt process was widely and drastically employed in England. One might even be amerced for contempt of the Bishop, for disturbing his Grace in church. But as the development of this dangerous judicial weapon proceeded, the English, sensing the peril of allowing its growth, brought it under control.



"ALREADY SOME VERY RESPECTABLE HEADS HAVE BEEN HAMMERED WITH IT."

English Immunity Contrasted With American Liability.

Flynn recalls the celebrated English case of the Tichborne heirs. Feeling very much displeased with the decision of the Lord Chancellor, they moved around the country exuding wrath, and hurling invective and contumely at the very head of the British bench. They were cited for contempt and brought into court. But they were tried upon an indictment, and before an impartial Judge. He compares this to the recent case of Editor Dale, of Indiana, who was tried and punished by the very Judge who conceived his court to be the victim of the contempt.

There was the case of Attorney Karch, of East St. Louis, who appeared before Federal Judge English in behalf of striking railway shopmen charged with contempt by violating an injunction. Attorney Karch held that his clients were entitled, under the Clayton Act, to jury trials. Judge English exploded with the declaration that such a request was an affront to the court, and a reflection upon the integrity of himself as Judge. He not only denied the motion, but in a paroxysm of rage disbarred Attorney Karch from practice, and had him bodily evicted from the courtroom. For that and other offenses, Judge English had been returned to private life. But the power which he exercised remains.

It has been but a few years since the editor of a Tennessee labor weekly was jailed for publishing an editorial to which a Judge took exception. The editor of a daily paper expressed the opinion that the Judge had acted harshly and hastily, whereupon he, too, was haled forth and sentenced.

Of course, the theory under which contempt proceedings are carried out is that the contempt consists in the attack upon the court, not upon the individual who happens to be the Judge. Such a distinction belongs to metaphysics and the fond patter of bar associations. Perhaps there is a Judge who, upon hearing himself called a fool and a scoundrel, can sit back and calmly determine whether the epithet was intended for the court which he impersonates, or merely for himself. If so, he should be canonized.

"Some Very Respectable Heads Hammered With It."

Among those who knew Judge Blank in the days when he was Lawyer Blank, celebrated for his strong prejudices, indigestion, and hot temper, there will always linger the fear that he might confuse his personal feelings with the dignity of the Court over which he presides. Dishonest he might never be, but human he certainly is, and full of the juices which prevent men from being angels.

The people of other nations have recognized this fact, and have taken measures to protect the citizens from the Judge, and the Judge from himself. "It has remained for Judges in this country devoted to freedom," writes Flynn, "to push out their power in every direction, and to develop upon an alarming scale the fictions under cover of which they are making their most serious invasions. The Judge likes to sit upon his bench and watch his power grow. Apparently the habit of listening to obsequious phrases, and moving amidst bowing and scraping attendants, is not good for the soul of the little man under the black robe."

There is no doubt that in the past business men generally have looked with approval upon the exercise of the contempt power. Its abuse, when it was abused, occurred so often in connection with labor disputes, that the employer of labor habitually regarded it as a weapon wielded in behalf of his side. Football players seldom call the referee's attention to a foul committed by a member of their own team. Flynn remarks:

"It is all right so long as we are knocking dangerous radicals over the head. This neat little bludgeon was invented for that very purpose. But, having been invented, it remains in the hands of the Judge to use on any sconce he feels disposed to rap. And now the cycle is bringing not labor leaders, but business executives, into court. And there

SOLVE INDUSTRIAL PROBLEM BY CHRISTIANIZING INDUSTRY, DR. JOHN McDOWELL ADVISES

Presbyterian Missions Secretary in Labor Day Message Urges Peace Between Employer and Employe.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.

RECOGNIZING industrialism as "the most dominant factor in modern life," and insisting that "the time has come for the Christian Church to take a definite responsibility for creating a spirit in industry that will insure continued harmony between employers and employes," Dr. John McDowell, secretary of the Presbyterian Board of National Missions, issued a Labor Day message addressed not only to the 10,000 ministers of the Presbyterian Church but also to the 2,000,000 lay members. Secretary McDowell considers that "the entire future of our national progress and happiness is bound up in the success of this undertaking on the part of the church," and he adds that "if the church endeavors to evade this responsibility or ignore it, it will lose, in my judgment, the largest opportunity it has ever had in promoting the kingdom of God here on this earth."

As the author of the social creed of the church, which was adopted some years ago by the Presbyterian General Assembly, Dr. McDowell is regarded in his denomination as an authority on the relations of capital and labor. He himself began life in the coal mines, where he lost an arm.

Secretary McDowell's Labor day message follows:

Labor day is always a direct and definite challenge to the Christian churches of America. This challenge was never more vital and urgent than in this year, 1927, and that because of the far-reaching influence of industry.

That industrialism colors the entire life of our day is proved by the increasing demands for industrial education, industrial legislation, industrial organization and industrial publication. No sphere of human interest can escape its influence today. So far-reaching is the influence of industrialism that the fundamental institutions of society, namely, the home, the school, the court, the state and the church, are threatened with a transformation which will change their character and impair their usefulness. The industrial question lends itself readily to a wealth of free associations of ideas not disciplined by logical processes. Too often the industrial question has been approached in a spirit of emotional intensity rather than of rational analysis. It is becoming evident to all thoughtful students of industry that the industrial question cannot be fought through, crowded through or blundered through. It must be prayed through, thought through and worked through. It demands not only sound economics, but true philosophy and effective religion; not only a scientific system, but an adequate spirit.

Good Will Not Enough.

We heartily agree with Elihu Root when he says, with reference to the international field: "Abstract good will is not sufficient. You must have machinery to carry it into effect." Similarly in industry, to carry industrial good will into effect, we must have adequate and efficient machinery. We recognize at once that before the cry for help in the industrial world can be answered effectively, the nature of the need must be understood. Hence we hasten to say that the industrial question is the outstanding human question of our times. It is not concerned merely with mechanical processes, but with the elemental passions and desires of human beings. It is true that it expresses itself in the language of economic science, yet its origin and motive lies deeper in human life than the demands of a re-distribution of wealth. To see in the industrial question nothing more than a program of economic adjustment is to miss the very note that gives appeal, pathos and reality to this intensely human question.

Soul Not Stomach.

The industrial question in the last analysis is a soul question, not a stomach question. At the heart of the industrial question is an insistent demand for a league to enforce industrial peace, not merely as a device to patronage, but as an expression of fraternalism and justice; not merely to escape the wastage of industrial war, but to unite the forces of production and distribution in the interest of unity, fraternity and the right of a full life for every human being.

Before the industrial problem can be solved it must be understood. From our point of view the root question in industry today is one of spirit, rather than one of system, one of motive rather than of method. In a word, it is this: shall industry be Christianized or commercialized? If the spirit of selfishness is left to dominate industry, no change in the system will be of any great benefit to the industrial world. There is a difference between a Christianized industry and a commercialized industry. A Christianized industry is governed by the Golden Rule. A commercialized industry is governed by the law of supply and demand. A Christianized industry aims to meet a human need; a commercialized industry aims to meet a demand. The object of a Christianized industry is usefulness; the object of a commercialized industry is gain. A Christianized industry is dominated by social service; a commercialized industry is dominated by self-interest.

Duty of the Church.

If industry is to be Christianized, the church that bears the name of Jesus Christ must take a positive responsibility for doing at least four things:

First. The church must fill industry with the spirit of Christ. The essence of this spirit is co-operation, service, sacrifice and love, the very things that are needed today in our American industry. It is not too much to say that apart from the spirit of Jesus Christ there is no hope for the solution of our industrial problems. No new system, no new economic effort and no new organization in themselves can solve our problems. The spirit of Christ is the solution of the four greatest problems in industry today.

1. The spirit of Christ is the spirit of intelligence, integrity and co-operation, and is therefore the solution of the first problem of industry, namely, greater efficiency in production. Nothing else will solve this problem. Organization, education and legislation, apart from hearty co-operation on the part of all the factors in production, will not solve the problem. It can be solved only through co-operation based on good will, the very thing the spirit of Christ always creates. The day has gone and, thank God, gone forever, here in America, when an executive or a labor leader can or will say to men: "Shut up! We will do your thinking for you." Wise executives and effective labor leaders recognize that the two things needed in our American industrial system are the greatest possible production and the maximum development possible for each human being.

A Plea for Fair Dealing.

2. The spirit of Christ is the spirit of justice and fair dealing, and is therefore the solution of the second problem of industry, namely, greater equity in the distribution of the earnings of industry. By eliminating selfishness, which is always the chief barrier to a fair division of the

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

"Play in Your Own Yard."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

BEING a native of the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia and therefore accustomed to picturesque scenery, pure air and clear, health-giving water, I thought I knew all there is to know about those drawing cards for summer resorts. But a recent visit to the Ozarks convinced me that it is never too late to learn.

Early in August, this year, the usual call of the mountains came to me and it came to be very insistent. A trip to the Blue Ridge seemed an impossibility so I decided to make the acquaintance of the Ozarks. We left St. Louis at 10 a. m. and on State Highway No. 66, were soon skirting the hazy foothills, and, driving along leisurely to enjoy the wonderful panorama spread out all the way, we reached Piney View, one-fourth mile from Arlington, at 4 p. m., having stopped for lunch an hour at St. Clair. Arlington is on State Highway 66 and also on the Frisco—the railroad that feeds so many of the Ozark's lovely summer resorts.

Piney View is 1400 feet above the sea level, and the view it commands of the rock-ribbed hills and the silent-flowing river, stretching its length a quarter of a mile in front, is one of the most perfect pieces of God's handiwork I have ever beheld. Parallel with the river runs the Frisco and, viewed from this lofty height, it resembles a huge snake as it curves into a perfect S and disappears around the hill. One-half mile below Piney View the Piney River empties into the Gasconade, and just across the Gasconade is Jerome.

Piney View is primarily a place to rest the tired mind and body, while her next-door neighbor, Jerome, is a playground for youth. Hundreds of young people come there to dance and play—which is youth's way of resting. When the Gasconade is too high for swimming those youngsters head for the placid waters of Little Piney, and as you sit on the cool veranda of Piney View overlooking the river you can hear the put-put-put of the motor boats. Soon their cargoes are emptied on the sandy shore and then the fun begins.

Eight miles from Arlington is Rolla—a live Ozark town, bringing each year hundreds of students to the School of Mines. Just a few miles away is Crocker, another of these lovely summer resorts, all as restful and healthful as could possibly be found in Michigan, Colorado, or even my own beloved Virginia.

There are thousands who need a vacation to whom places at a distance are impossible. Then why not play in your own yard—only a little over three hours from St. Louis?

Miraculous Prohibition.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE wets still bemoan the failure of prohibition. From their standpoint they are right. For them prohibition has been just one disappointment after another! They expected taxes to increase, but the Government reports a decrease in 1926 tax collections of $2,535,000,000 as compared with wet 1919. They expected prohibition to reduce revenue. It did not. With repeated tax reductions, the surplus this year was over $600,000,000. They had fondly anticipated that prohibition would bring back the soup kitchen, and that labor would be begging for long hours at poor pay. Prohibition failed! Labor rides to big pay for short hours in his own buzz buggy.

The wets have cause to mourn. All their fond hopes of dire disaster as the result of prohibition have been cruelly blasted. Poverty has shaken her penury, dolled up in silk stockings and tailored togs, bobbed her disheveled hair, bought a "permanent," powdered her nose, and "stepped out," leaving the wailing wets weeping o'er the ashes of their hopes.

Sycamore, a Popular Name.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I READ your editorial about "Shaded Highways" but I do wish writers would stop talking and writing about "sycamore" trees. You know, or should know there is no such tree in America. The tree you constantly refer to is the "buttonwood" and is not a sycamore. The sycamore is not native to America.

GEORGE W. BABCOCK.
Poplar Bluff, Mo.

The Americana Encyclopedia explains that "because of the likeness in foliage and the stripping of the bark, the name of sycamore has been transferred to the American plane tree (Platanus Occidentalis) better called buttonwood." The tree is known by both names.—Ed. Post-Dispatch.

Eliminate Speeding on Highways.

I CONGRATULATE you on editorial with reference to eliminating speeders on the Missouri highways, but why stop at the "paid speeder"—why not eliminate them all?

BEYOND THE ENGLISH CASE.

It is an axiom of gardening that to cut down the weed is not sufficient; one must also grub out the root. Nor was it altogether enough that Judge English was removed from the Federal bench.

There is a root to that grievous matter of a Federal Judge abusing his great power, and in the Harpers Magazine for September John T. Flynn, formerly managing editor of the New York Globe, who is more exhaustively quoted elsewhere in today's Post-Dispatch, tells us what it is.

Mr. Flynn became interested in judicial powers matter through conflicts between the courts and the press in New York. He thinks the time has arrived when the powers of Judges in the United States are becoming a menace to the rights of citizens and ought therefore to be curtailed. He points out that the English people found it necessary to do this. They, too, were exposed to the caprices and prejudices of their Judges, until they finally took away from them some of their summary powers, including the right of contempt. In England contempt cases may be tried before juries. There is no such spectacle there as was witnessed in the conduct of Judge English toward Attorney Karch, nor is it possible under English law for such a thing to happen as recently occurred in Indiana, where Editor Dale was summarily brought before Judge Dearth, whom he had criticised and sentenced for contempt. No doubt the ample English experience also saw such disgraceful abuses of power as that which Judge Leahy indulged himself at Albuquerque in the battle with Editor Magee. At any rate, they removed the root. Mr. Flynn says:

> There is nothing new in this process of contempt. I dare say the very first Judge saw the possibilities of this formidable weapon. In the early days of the English law it was used unsparingly. One might even be amerced for contempt of the Bishop for disturbing his grace in church. But as the English system, as we know it, began to develop its special genius, this dangerous judicial weapon was brought under control.

Of American Judges, whose tyranny has come to occupy the serious attention of Congress, he says:

> It has been reserved for the Judges in this enlightened age and in this country devoted to freedom to push out their power in every direction and to develop upon an alarming scale the fictions under cover of which they are making the most serious invasions. While others are held rigorously to old forms, the court itself knows how to invent new powers for itself. No Judge likes work so little that he will deliberately deny his own jurisdiction.

Of the psychological effect upon the judge of practically unlimited power the writer adds:

> The laziest Judge may like his job little, but he loves his jurisdiction more. He likes to sit upon his bench and watch his power grow. Apparently the habit of listening to obsequious phrases and moving amidst bowing and scraping attendants is not good for the soul of the little man under the black robe. When some years ago Congress passed a law forcing Judges to grant jury trials in contempt cases growing out of violation of injunctions in labor disputes, the lower court denied the jury trial and asserted that Congress was powerless to limit this lordly power of a Judge. The Circuit Court of Appeals agreed with the Judges. Fortunately, the United States Supreme Court saved us from that.

In truth, the powers of Judges puts too great a strain upon human nature. That is the root of the English case, and the sooner we grub that out the better it will be for the nation. Until we follow the example of the British and limit the powers of Judges we will have other Englishes, Dearths and Leahys, abuse and tyranny without end.

REPEAL UNNECESSARY LAWS.

Gov. Byrd of Virginia, a brother of Commander Byrd, the aviator, is a personage in his own right, whose name is on the list of possibilities for the Democratic nomination for President. He is no such national figure, however, as the three leading candidates, but a recent suggestion which he has made reveals a political thinker of a practical, progressive school.

That suggestion was that the Governors of the states call their Legislatures in special session for the purpose of repealing unnecessary laws. Such action, he believes, would promote good morals, good order, the good will of the citizen for his State. "Duplicated Federal, State and local functions," Gov. Byrd continues, are both expensive in money and unsound in principle. The national government invades the field of state operations, the state reaches into the local field and the locality often tries to do too much by law."

The statement pointedly summarizes our superstitious trust in the remedial potency of the law and the unhappy consequences of this obsession.

Gov. Byrd's proposal, it may be acknowledged, is not original. The condition he decries has been inveighed against by leaders of both major parties and by authoritative students of government. The Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst, spectacular reformer of another day, made a similar, though more drastic, recommendation some years ago when he urged the convening of the New York Legislature in extraordinary session to repeal all the laws that body had passed in the preceding 20 years.

That Gov. Byrd's plan will, in substance, be eventually carried out seems most probable. We are moving towards it irresistibly. Our multiplicity of laws has reached that stage of senile absurdity which inspires ridicule. After that the death rattle.

WHALES.

It is an amusing reflection while fishing that there is after all almost no sense in fishing for anything but whales.

Size is the disturbing element in all fishing less than plain whaling. It was the size of the fish caught by Mr. Coolidge that counted in the Black Hills. So it is with all fishing except whaling. What friends it has parted! Everybody who goes fishing knows what he will first be asked when he returns. The certainty that popular curiosity cares nothing about quality, and even less about the good time you have had, the change of mind, and the earned repose at night, but is interested only in size, is what deprives the fisherman of that restful and complacent mood which fishing is traditionally supposed to induce.

The whaler avoids all this. He has no fear that anybody will top him. There will be no crude jests about the big one getting away. There is nowhere else a bigger fish that he could just as well be after, or that someone more fortunate is getting. Having landed his whale, he sits down in the satisfaction of having achieved the ultimate. He smokes his pipe in the sweet contentment of the summa summarium. When he gets home he simply says that got 10, or 20, or 31. He does not have to say what or how big.

What a soul-salving industry it was! Indeed, it was the perfect sport.

TELL IT TO THE FARMER.

"Greater efficiency" is urged upon farmers in a report received by President Coolidge from the president of the Agricultural Engineers' Society. But no less an engineer than Herbert Hoover is authority for the statement that the man engaged in agriculture today produces three times as much as he did in 1890. The boys continue to desert the farms for city jobs, yet those who remain are able, through increased efficiency, to produce such enormous crops that the disposal of the surplus has become the most pressing problem before the industry. Virtually every farm bill, from the Norris-Sinclair to the McNary-Haugen, has been designed to meet that problem. In the face of such overwhelming facts, how can "greater efficiency" be advanced as a remedy for the farmers' troubles?

Actually, the farmer is the victim of a situation which he did not create, and which cannot be traced to inefficiency on his part. He is the victim of a system which enables somebody else to hog the bulk of the money which the public pays for farm products. There is the classic example furnished to the Senate Committee on Agriculture a few years ago by Senator Norris. He showed that the Texas farmer who planted, cultivated and harvested a ton of cabbage, received $7 for it. He showed that the New York consumers paid $240 for it. Such a spread is larcenous and indecent. It is an injustice to the producer and an outrage upon the consumer. If efficiency is needed, it is needed in the process of distribution.

The farmer is the victim of another situation which he did not create—unless he can be accused of creating it by voting the Republican ticket. That is the situation in which he sells his produce in an unprotected market and buys his necessities in a market protected by the most piratical tariff ever devised.

As long as these situations endure it is idle—and might be dangerous—to babble "efficiency" to the man who suffers from them.

THE GREAT OIL CHASE.

Though Europe will have its usual festivals, carnivals and other attractions this fall and winter, it is doubtful if the old Continent can offer anything to rival the show which certain Americans will put on over there. When Attorneys Pomerene and Leahy begin their chase after Harry M. Blackmer and James E. O'Neill, the world is going to witness the sort of thing which never happened before outside the covers of a detective story.

Mr. Blackmer, former chairman of the board of the Midwest Refining Co., and Mr. O'Neill, once president of the Prairie Oil and Gas Co., are the missing witnesses whose testimony is needed to explain the relationship of the Continental Trading Co. to the Teapot Dome affair. Former Senator Atlee Pomerene, as chief attorney for the Government in the prosecution of Fall and Sinclair, is naturally desirous of rounding up these witnesses, while William E. Leahy, defense counsel, is quite as naturally desirous of keeping Mr. Pomerene from finding them.

Thus the actors and the theme. The scene will be Southern France, because that area is highly desirable in late fall and winter, and, further, because it offers more means of enjoyment than anywhere else. But the play is, of course, the thing, and what a comedy it is going to be! It will start as an attempt by Leahy, who left New York ahead of Pomerene, to get to O'Neill and Blackmer before the Government prosecutor reaches them. But it will not remain so simple and unamusing. Far from it! Pomerene will soon find that the way to find his witnesses is to follow Leahy, who apparently knows their whereabouts, and Leahy will quite as soon discover that his chief task will be to elude Pomerene. Thus, instead of a chase of two absconded oil men, the world will be watching a game of hide-and-go-seek between their lawyers. If that isn't a theme for an E. Phillips Oppenheim with a sense of humor, then we never saw one.

Meanwhile, Messrs. O'Neill and Blackmer, comfortably installed in some villa on the Riviera and fortified with all the viands and so on which make life charming, will read the reports of their agents, and enjoy the spectacle so greatly that they will not be able to shed a homesick tear for Denver, Colo., and Independence, Kan.

JOURNALISM IN THE SOUTH.

Flogging in Alabama has in the last few years become so widely practiced that it has been thought necessary to make it a major crime. The Alabama Legislature has just passed a bill (there was not one vote against it in the Senate) providing that any masked man convicted of whipping a person is guilty of a felony and liable to a penitentiary sentence.

We doubt that such a law would have been considered by the Legislature five years ago. It did not act until the State had earned the scorn of the country for the midnight doings of its self-appointed masked moral guardians. Where does the credit go for the antiflogging law? W. M. Walker, in the September American Mercury, says:

> The (Montgomery) Advertiser, the (Birmingham) News and the (Birmingham) Age-Herald, and especially the Advertiser, played leading parts in the recent war against Ku Klux floggings in Alabama, and have been publicly praised by Julian Harris, the leader of the advanced wing of Southern editors.

Courageous journalism has done more than anything else to shame Alabama into action, and among the journalists Grover C. Hall of the Advertiser has been the most militant figure. With men like Harris in Georgia and Hall in Alabama, a new spirit is creeping into the South. These editors are showing the South its faults and shortcomings. They are not content with merely printing the news, but are fulfilling the function of editors in its highest sense.

Col. Watterson and Henry Grady are dead and gone, and their work for the South was left uncompleted. The Harrises and the Halls are badly needed if the primitive backwoods of the darkest South are to be reclaimed for civilization.

THE DELUGE.

WHERE JOURNALISM IS GOING

From the New Republic

NOT very long ago, Pittsburg had 12 newspapers. Today she has five. The story of that reduction is characteristic of what is happening throughout the American newspaper world.

The Pittsburg consolidations are in accordance with the general trend of journalism throughout the country. Consolidation, nicknamed the "Munsey movement," after its late New York practitioner, is the order of the day. According to the reliable journal of the trade, Editor and Publisher, the number of English-language dailies in the United States declined in the past six months from 2001 to 1952 and is still shrinking, probably at an accelerated rate. Equally characteristic of the times is the reduction in the Pittsburg morning field to one paper. Department-store advertising is the lifeblood of the daily press, and, on the whole, with an occasional exception in one city or another, the department stores spend most of their money in the afternoon field. Cleveland, Detroit, St. Louis and other cities have all, in recent years, seen a similar drastic reduction in the number of morning papers.

A THIRD point in which Pittsburg is now typical is that not a single daily paper there is now locally owned. Each of the three publishers has journals in other cities—both Hearst and the Scripps-Howard group, in more than a score of other communities, Mr. Block in half a dozen. None of these proprietors lives in Pittsburg, or, presumably, ever will live there. They conduct chain newspapers with the same efficiency and commercial acumen which is devoted to chain groceries or five-and-ten-cent emporia. Two of the three systems have their own telegraphic news service, and syndicates to furnish "features," cartoons and editorials. Pittsburgers in future (as to a great extent in the past) will be amused, edified and instructed, when at all, by writers and artists who know little or nothing of that city, but live and work in New York or Cleveland or Paris. The local flavor, already much diminished, will be reduced even further.

The days when you could read a newspaper because you agreed with its general policy, it will be noticed, are ended. In Pittsburg, if you want a morning paper at all, you must accept the wares of Mr. Block. This gentleman is best known as a successful salesman of advertising space, on a vast scale. He can hardly be said to be interested in public affairs as is, for instance, Mr. Hearst, but in so far as he has a political platform of his own, it is, "Stand by our noble President!" Mr. Hearst went even further to show that he bowed the knee where Pittsburg does. He came out for Mellon for President. The Scripps-Howard newspaper in Pittsburg is like the Scripps-Howard papers in other cities. Theirs is the most liberal of all the newspaper chains.

THAT the recent consolidations have been good business, there is no doubt. After one copy of any newspaper has been produced, a million may be manufactured with no extra expense except white paper. In consequence, a consolidation of two papers means halving the cost while the revenues of the combination journal remain nearly—or sometimes, quite—as great as were those of the components when appearing separately. In the morning field, Pittsburg is experiencing a monopoly, with the usual attributes. The price of the paper is being boosted from two cents to three, and the advertising rates are subject to increases ranging from 84c to $1.40 a column inch. Editor and Publisher estimates that at least 300 newspaper men will be discharged in the course of the shake-up, and not replaced. The saving in expense thereby achieved is obvious, however hard the result may be on the unfortunate individuals who are thrown out of employment with no opportunity of finding a position again (except by going to some other city, where Pittsburg's experience is not unlikely to be repeated).

Even from the public's point of view, the process is not an unmixed evil. It has one great advantage, since in a crisis, and for a short time only, it permits the individual paper to remain independent of domination by the local department stores: the profits earned in 20 cities may be poured into the twenty-first to keep a paper going until it wins a fight which the national owners happen to think is important. Moreover, while the possession of great wealth usually makes newspaper owners conservative, this is not universally true. The Scripps-Howard chain, the New York World and the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, the Baltimore "Sunpapers," are examples of journals owned by men of great wealth who are, nevertheless, courageous in fighting for what they conceive to be the social good, often in disagreement with the prevailing opinion among men of their class.

SUCH facts do not, however, mitigate the generally undesirable consequences of chain ownership, and syndication of contents. These developments accentuate the process, which has already gone so far, of standardization of thought. They increase the fierceness with which any departure from the majority opinion, in politics, social ideas, even in dress and mode of living, is resented, in America. They apply national formula to local situations to which they are never quite adequate. They offer an attitude toward things, an outlook on life in general, which may or may not, according to pure chance, have any relation to the attitude and outlook of the community. It is no answer to say that no one needs to buy a newspaper if he doesn't want to, and that circulation can only be maintained by catering to the views of the community. In Pittsburg, as we have pointed out, the person of liberal views must look at the world, in the morning, through Mr. Block's stodgy conservatism, or go without the news. The conservative must, in the evening, embrace either Scripps-Howard progressivism, written in popular terms for the masses, or the Hearst formula, in which photographs of scantily clad women, and stories about love-nests and kiss-burglars play almost as great a part as they do in the tabloids. Nobody, whatever his political inclinations, who has the sort of mind which prefers The Atlantic Monthly to The Saturday Evening Post or Liberty, can buy any Pittsburg newspaper with the expectation of finding the affairs of the world thoughtfully reviewed therein by intelligent men as one expects to find them reviewed in The London Times, or the London Morning Post, or the Manchester Guardian. Journalism of that type, needless to say, has all but disappeared from the United States; and where it still remains, it is in most cases a luxury which an obdurate and wealthy publisher insists on maintaining in the face of the fact that larger financial rewards accrue to mob-writing for the mob-mind and the mob-advertiser.

Christianizing Industry As Way to Meet Its Problems

duct of industry. Christianity s the way to the solution of e age-long problem. When the rch is unflinchingly loyal to full-orbed gospel of Jesus ist, it will insist that any in trial system that grinds up n and women to make cheap ds is an un-Christian system; t no industrial system can be istian until it is so organized t every honest and willing ker can find work, and work emunerative that not only can retain his own working pow in health and efficiency, but is able to give to his wife children a decent, a joyous a reasonable life.

The spirit of Christ is the it of brotherhood and hu ity and is therefore the solu of the third problem of in try, namely, greater participa in the management of in try. Christianity above all gions has fostered a keen se of the value of every indi ual, and therefore men filled h the spirit of Christ cannot uiesce in undue subordination human beings to the exigen of any industrial or economic tem.

Giving Employes a Voice.

The spirit of Christ will make impossible for one group in in try to determine all the terms employment for another group; will insist that all rights wihch ulate men's relationships must mutual. The Christ spirit will and that the wage earners, e opportunities in life are so whelmingly influenced by in trial conditions, shall have a e in their determination, a t voice with management in ing terms of employment, the ditions of labor, and the shop and regulations, so that gov ment in industry like Govern in the nation shall only ex with consent of the governed. or it is well to keep in mind the friction between employ and employes has not arisen e because of problems involv distribution of wealth, prob of wages and profits, but to a greater extent it has aris because of questions involving status of the individual em e. And plans that are devised giving employes participation a greater degree in management t not diminish management's tiative or responsibility and t not be regarded as a sub ute for leadership. Plans for ploye participation must sup t it. Industrial engineers labor leaders are agreed that dership through consultation not y preserves the dignity of the ploye, but increases produc

The spirit of Christ is the spir of service and sacrifice and free m, and is therefore the solution the fourth problem of industry, ely, greater satisfaction in the k of industry. The spirit of ist insists that industry exists man, not man for industry, and nnot indorse any system of so y, however imposing its eco ic triumphs, if it cripples the sonality of its workers or it rives them of that control over material conditions of their lives which is the essence of tical freedom

Settling Disputes.

Second. The church must teach stry and mind of Christ first, arding the nature of industry, and second, the law for setting disputes in industry. According to the mind of Christ, industry is a co-operative agency, the purpose of which is to meet human needs. It exists not for private gain, but for public service. Only in so far as industry ministers to the elementary needs of the human race is it Chrisian.

Christ's law for settling all industrial disputes begins with brotherhood and then proceeds to investigation, conciliation, arbitration and finally legislation. Strange that we have had to wait nearly 20 centuries to discover this law. (Matthew 1:14, 15, 16, 17.) Disputes have been stopped by other methods, but they never have been settled; and never will be settled except in obedience to the law of Christ.

Third. The church must apply to industry the test of Christ. His test is never the money-test, nor the power-test, nor even the success-test. It is always the manhood-test, the service-test, the character-test.

"Life," He said, "is more than meat and the body than raiment."

Results in Human Terms.

Christ's question to the men of industry today is not: How much money are you making? or How much power are you gaining? But, What kind of men are you making? What kind of homes are you building? What kind of communities are you producing? What kind of a nation are you forming? Brotherhood, according to Christ, not wealth, is the foundation of industry. Manhood, not money, is the standard of value in industry. Service, not success, is the incentive in industry. Usefulness, not shrewdness, is the measure of reward in industry. W. L. Douglas was elected governor of Massachusetts primarily because it was said of him that he could make shoes, make money and make men all in the same factory and at the same time. Any industry that is not doing this today is not complying with the test of Jesus Christ.

Fourth. The church should inspire industry to do the work of Christ. His work is always that of saving and serving men, saving and serving them physically, mentally, morally and spiritually. It is not the business of the church to make the laws of industry or the methods of industry. That's the business of the State. But it is the business of the church to make the stuff out of which you make laws, namely, Christian men and Christian women.

Barring Prejudice and Passion.

Let the church put the Sermon on the Mount into the heart of the employer, into the heart of the employe, and into the heart of the consumer, and industry will be Christianized; it will become the greatest agency for making not only America bigger and brighter, but for making the whole world bigger and brighter.

If the church does her full duty she must teach the men of industry, laborers and capitalists alike, to think sound and wholesome thoughts, free from prejudice and passion, to speak the truth, and to pay their debts in the same money in which they were contracted, and to prefer poverty to dishonor. She must teach them to worship God by doing some useful work, to live honestly and cheerfully, to love their country with an unselfish and uplifting love; and in the conflict between corporate capital and organized labor, if come it must, they will stand as soldiers not of labor primarily, nor of capital, but of that which is infinitely above them both, the kingdom of righteousness and peace and joy.

Problems of Men.

Out of my experience as a laborer and a student, I am convinced that all of our industrial problems in the last analysis are problems about men, not about wealth; problems about human relations, not about mechanical processes; problems about families, not about finances; problems about communities, not about corporations.

The question as to whether we are to have self-government in industry or State Government in industry depends primarily on the way we handle the human problem in industry. Here is a problem that demands not only our science but our religion, not only our finance but our faith, not only our captains, of industry and leaders of labor but our Christ and His church. Fill industry with the spirit of Christ, teach industry the mind of Christ, apply to industry the test of Christ, inspire industry to do the work of Christ, and it never will be possible for another poet to exclaim:

"O God! That bread should be so dear, sits the Judge in his big black robe and the old contempt bludgeon, still wet with the blood of the reds, in his hand. And already some very respectable heads have been hammered with it."

Power of Bench Exerted in Business Receiverships.

This new and shocking development is the result of two practices to which courts have largely committed themselves. One is the practice of managing large business corporations under the form of receiverships, and the other is the practice of enforcing consent decrees entered into under the anti-trust laws. To those who do not realize the extent which the former practice has reached, Flynn's statistics will be a revelation. At this moment, for example, 42 railroads are being operated by Federal Courts. In other words, Judges are managing 17,000 miles of road with stocks and bonds of nearly a billion dollars.

Paul Cravath, a lawyer of distinction, reported not long ago that in the last 20 years half the corporations in America had passed through the courts in receiverships. It was found that in seven years 233 corporations had come under the direction of the eight Federal Judges sitting in New York City. These Judges had managed property worth $780,000,000, with an annual turnover of $60,000,000.

Passing over the question of whether this is good for the courts and for business—a question on which Flynn presents enlightening facts—we come to the question of what this has to do with the exercise of the contempt power. Well, it has plenty to do with it, and business men who have been complacent over the growth of that power would better sit up and take notice of it.

"It is not so long ago," the article relates, "that the directors of a corporation in the hands of a receiver became very annoying to the Judge. So he forbade them to meet. But these gentlemen thought very properly that they had property rights in the corporation, and hence were within their rights to meet and talk about them. But the Judge soon convinced them that their right was at least questionable, for he haled them before his court and sentenced them for contempt."

Only Presidential Pardon Saved New York City Official.

Even more remarkable was the familiar case of Comptroller Craig of the City of New York. The Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, a public utility, was in receivership, and seeking higher rates. Naturally the city was interested in that. But Federal Judge Mayer denied the city access to the books and files of the company. When Comptroller Craig was invited to attend a conference with the receiver, he refused, because of his inability to see the books. He indulged in some mild criticism of the Court's handling of the matter, whereupon Judge Mayer cited him for contempt, and sentenced him to 60 days in jail, from which he was saved only by a presidential pardon.

A considerable number of judges have even denied that the President has power to issue pardons in contempt cases, and one Judge summarily ordered to jail a man who had received such a pardon. As Flynn pointedly observes: "The President can pardon a murderer who has repented or a thief who has reformed. But the citizen who has offended a Judge, some of them think, is beyond the forgiveness of all but two—'Meinself und Gott.'"

Trade Association Put in Legal Straightjacket.

We come to the second heading under which business men are now exposed to the resentment of Judges and the danger of jail for contempt. The courts have begun to take over the matter of regulating trade practices. This is brought about in this way: A trade association is haled into the court by the Attorney-General, on the charge of violating the trust laws. The members are told that certain of their practices are illegal. They admit charge, assert their penitence, and ask for merciful treatment with the promise that they will sin no more. A consent decree is drawn up, defnining what they may and may not do in the future.

In one remarkable consent decree, the Judge ordered the association dissolved, but permitted the members to form another, and himself actually wrote the constitution and bylaws, naming six things which the new association could not do, and 14 things which it might do! In other words, this Judge wrote out a business code for this trade, and made that code a part of a judicial decree! What is the consequence? The consequence is, that if hereafter the members violate any provisions of that code, they may be haled in for contempt of court, and if they attempt to protest, they may be jailed! One fancies that business men generally will be interested to learn that they can be imprisoned for violating what a Federal Judge conceives to be a proper code of ethics in their business.

The Federal Trade Commission has been violently lambasted by Chambers of Commerce and trade associations—or was, until President Coolidge packed it with men who had been associated with the interests which it regulates (including, in one instance, a former lobbyist for one of those interests). But the protestors had one consolation. They could curse it orally and in their trade papers. They could at least blow off steam. Let some of them try lambasting the regulatory decrees of a Federal Court. They will learn the difficulties which attend the direction of a business enterprise from a cell.

Citizens of the United States are equal under the law. The wealthy and respectable citizen who condones injustice because it is vented upon someone that he dislikes, had better beware. He is sharpening a two-edged sword that may some day cut him. Intelligent leaders in business and industry are beginning to realize that this is true of the contempt power. That power has been broadened and expanded preposterously. To say that its expansion has been necessary to safeguard the "orderly processes of the courts," is absurd. One famous Federal Judge, dissenting in a notorious contempt case, put it well recently, when he said:

"It is in small encroachments upon the right of free criticism of all the acts of public officials, that the real danger lies."

To Teach Flying in Schools.

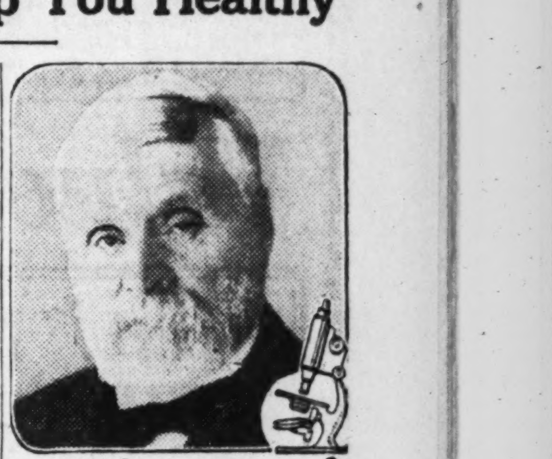
Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BERLIN, Sept. 3.—Undoubtedly the Chamberlin-Levine trans-Atlantic flight to Germany has a great deal to do in driving all Germany flying mad. Airplane history, construction and possibilities are to be introduced as a subject in several schools in Germany. Arrangements have been completed for the students in aeronautics to visit the various flying fields here and elsewhere. According to the aviation schools' authorities, miniature models of airplanes will be constructed by the students themselves.

Canadian Must Serve Japan.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TOKIO, Sept. 3.—Edward George Sudzuki, a Canadian-born Japanese, who is unable to speak, read or understand the Japanese language, recently appeared before the conscription section of the Kanda ward office. He had returned to Tokio on receiving a notice from the War Office authorities telling him that he is a Japanese and therefore liable to military service. The authorities are now in doubt whether to take him into the military service or not. But the lawyers say that under the law he must enter the Japanese army, as ignorance of his own language is no excuse.



Dr. Caldwell's 3 Rules Keep You Healthy

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time regardless of how much one tries to avoid it. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It cannot harm the most delicate system, and is not a habit-forming preparation. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it. It does not gripe. Thousands of mothers have written us to that effect.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when a medicine like Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly, more cleanly and gently, without griping and harm to the system.

Keep free from constipation! It robs your strength, hardens your arteries and brings on premature old age. Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to a druggist and get one of the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup of Pepsin. Take the proper dose that night and by morning you will feel like a different person. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, bad breath, no appetite, headaches, and to break up fevers and colds. Always have a bottle in the house, and observe these three rules of health: Keep your head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open.

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.

Queen of Fall Festival Also W Identity Will not Be Reveal by Airplane on October 4.

THAT venerable yet rugged old monarch, the Veiled Prophet, is busy somewhere gathering together his jewels and ermine preparatory to his forty-ninth annual visit to St. Louis, to view and be viewed by thousands of loyal subjects at the parade and ball to be given in his honor. He will arrive by airplane Tuesday afternoon, Oct. 4, to remain two days. The parade, of gigantic proportions, will be held that night, and the ball the following night, at the Coliseum.

In the vague recesses of his secret realm, willing slaves are preparing costumes for his courtiers, polishing sabers for his guard of honor, and furnishing accoutrements for his entourage. At the same time in St. Louis the committee on arrangements is having suitable chariots and floats prepared, and before long an army of workmen will be transforming with masses of silk and silver tissue his ballroom.

This week, invitations—commands, in court parlance—will be sent by special messengers to the 75 young women who will form the nucleus of his Court of Love and Beauty. Among them, larger than the rest, and more elaborate, will be the all-important missive bidding his chosen one to sit beside him and receive his crown and so rule the destinies of younger St. Louis socially for a year.

News of St. Louisans At Eastern Resorts

Cabaret Performance at Watch Hill Enlivened by Two Missouri Girls—Some Cottagers to Remain Through September.

WATCH HILL, R. I., Sept. 3.—A steady downpour of rain at Watch Hill, which shut society in for several days, was partly responsible for the production of a cabaret performance at the Misquamicut Club a week ago. One of the clever dances was an Apache done by Miss Janet Kauffman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold M. Kauffman of Portland place, St. Louis, who recently returned from Europe, and Philip Watts of New York. Miss Martha Pettus, daughter of Mrs. Charles Parsons Pettus of 33 Westmoreland place, was another St. Louisan taking part, and Miss Mary Marston, Miss Betty Geist, Miss Virginia Stadelman and Miss Virginia Wright among the Easterners.

The last church service for the summer contingent was held this morning in the Watch Hill chapel. The Rev. Edward Schofield Travers of St. Peter's Church, St. Louis, spoke.

NARRAGANSETT PIER, R. I., Sept. 3.—Mrs. Albert Bond Lambert of St. Louis and her daughter, Miss Myrtle McGrew Lambert, are spending a few days in Southampton. Mr. and Mrs. Lambert's son, George Lea, has sailed for Europe.

MAGNOLIA, Mass., Sept. 3.—Mrs. Claude Kilpatrick and Mrs. Samuel M. Kennard of the St. Louis colony are among cottagers who plan to remain here until the last of September.

St. Louisans Leave Michigan for Home

A Few Families Remain in Cottages at Northern Resorts After Tournaments and Functions End.

HARBOR POINT, Mich., Sept. 3.—The Yacht Club ball last Saturday night in the Harbor Point casino still is being talked about as one of the most scintillating affairs Little Traverse Bay has seen in years. For a long time the affair has been the most important event on the social calendar. It is attended by residents of virtually all Northern Michigan summer colonies. The committee in charge of the arrangements for the ball were Duncan Dobson, Frederick Schlafly, and Duncan Meier.

Much ceremony was attached to the presentation of the yachting prizes and trophies won throughout the summer in athletic and aquatic competition.

A blind bogy tournament has been going on at the Harbor Point Golf course, where several St. Louisans have distinguished themselves. First place is held by The Rev. R. C. Dobson, who defeated Dr. F. E. Pierce of Chicago with a score of 85. Charles Ziebig of St. Louis holds second place, having nosed out his younger fellow townsman, Mason Scudder, with a 78. Third place was captured by Alex Jones of Detroit, who defeated Nelson Gatch of St. Louis with an 80.

At a recent election of officers to the Harbor Point Yacht Club, Duncan Meier was elected secretary, and Duncan Dobson fleet captain.

Mrs. A. Shapleigh Boyd has returned to Harbor Point, where she will visit Mrs. J. Will Boyd at the latter's cottage.

The Harbor Point clubhouse will close officially Sept. 18, although there are many St. Louisans who remain in their cottages after that date. Some of those who are especially fond of the autumn in Northern Michigan say October is the best month of all. Those who are known as the late cottagers at the Point are the Duncan Dobsons, the D. I. Meiers, the Charles F. Bates, the Jackson Johnsons, the B. B. Culvers, the Elias S. Gatch family, the F. C. Lakes, Mrs. Harold T. Jolley and her sister, Miss Mary Lees Kennard, Mr. and Mrs. Alex G. Cochran, and Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Schlafley.

The exodus at Harbor Point began noticeably this week when Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin McKeen, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Shapleigh, Mrs. Mary Burns and Mrs. C. H. Walton with her grandson, Stanley Bland Jr., left for St. Louis.

Miss Florence Ludington, daughter of Eliot K. Ludington, who is visiting Miss Elizabeth Clark at Charlevoix, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Garneau Weld Sunday, returning to Charlevoix late Monday.

Mrs. Thomas Meston recently arrived at Harbor Point for the remainder of summer.

Mr. and Mrs. John Wallace Fristoe, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Marvin E. Holderness from the Belvedare colony at Charlevoix were visitors at the Harbor point clubhouse last Friday, where they visited friends from St. Louis.

WEQUETONSING, Mich., Sept. 3. — The Wequetonsing and Roaring Brook contingents of St. Louisans here have spent most of their time of late at the Wequetonsing golf course, where several professionals have been giving exhibitions and challenging the course favorites. Distinguished galleries have watched Joe Kirkwood, nationally known trick-shot player, and Walter Hagen, in matched play competition. The verandas and tea rooms ofthe golf clubhouse are pleasant places to pass the afternoon and always have been popular with St. Louisans here.

Two well known St. Louis golfers have figured prominently in the recent course tournament. Lawson Watts defeated W. S. Hannah of Columbus, O., for the title. Watts upset the predictions of the galleries by his victory, especially in the face of the remarkable scores that have been set up by such brilliant players as Tilden Cummings of Chicago, late of the Princeton golf team. Watts came up from the rear, taking his early games by modest margins and was never ardently considered a serious contender for the major honors.

In the second flight of the tournament, Edward R. Thomas, also of the Wequetonsing colony, defeated James DeCamp of Chicago, to annex the title of his bracket. St. Louis players throughout the tournament made a better showing than had been anticipated in the days when the ranks were being formed.

The exodus has begun at Wequetonsing hotel. The summer season has had its flight and St. Louisans have left, are preparing to leave, or cite the date of their departures as being near. The cottages at Wequetonsing usually stay later than those at the hotel. Colonial Hall, or the other beach inns that line Little Traverse Bay. Mr. and Mrs. Erastus Wells, Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Rodemeyer, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin H. Steedman, Mr. and Mrs. Pelham Turner—who arrived late this month—usually remain at Wequetonsing for the early days of September. Mrs. Theodore F. Prewitt, Mrs. Minerva F. Carr, Mrs. Robert Filley and Mrs. Firmin V. Deslode Sr., have left the hotel for St. Louis or are planning to do so in the near future.

St. Louisans at Wequetonsing seem well pleased with the summer. It has been a delightful one, with the weather almost perfect, although often a bit cool, and more regattas, gymkhanas and other sporting events than have ever been staged in the Northern resorts. However, the older members of the colony seem a bit disturbed over the dropping away of the numbers of St. Louisans. Formerly an almost exclusive St. Louis watering place, Wequetonsing now threatens to be taken over by Louisville, Ky., from where families have been pouring into Little Traverse Bay this year in large numbers.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank U. Hammett and their daughter, Miss Celeste Hammett, have arrived at the Roaring Brook Hotel.

William Robert Shellington has arrived at West Wequetonsing for the remainder of the summer.

CHARLEVOIX, Mich., Sept. 3.—The Belvedere colony has been centering its attention on the colony tennis tournament here. Its ranks, were made up of St. Louis men and women, who figured largely in the finals matches.

Austin Leland managed the affair and, between times, managed to capture the most coveted title of the tournament—that of men's single champion.

In the quarter finals rounds of the men's singles, Edward Taussig defeated Charles Lumaghi 6—0, 6—3. Charles Fox defeated Harry Prussing 6—4, 6—1. Austin Leland defeated Joseph Ferguson 6—3, 6—7, 6—3. In the semi-final round Edward Taussig defeated Charles Fox, 6—2, 6—1. Austin Leland defeated Joseph Folk, 6—0, 7—5.

In the final round, Austin Leland was scheduled to meet Edward Taussig. The match was fast and ran through four games. The score stood 6—2, 3—6, 6—2, 7—5. Leland's drop shots over the net and accurate placements were responsible for his victory over Mr. Taussig.

In the women's singles the quarter final round of play found Miss Alma Clark a victor over Miss Dorothy Moorehead of Chicago, 6—1, 6—1.

Miss Dorothy Bemis defeated Miss Elizabeth Jamieson 6—1, 6—0. Miss Dorothy Fuller defeated Miss Barbara Birge 6—1, 6—1.

In the semi-final round, Miss Dorothy Bemis, and Miss Katherine Herndon ("Taffy") Smith was eliminated by Miss Dorothy Fuller.

Miss Dorothy Bemis lost the final game to Miss Dorothy Fuller, 6—4, 6—3.

Joseph Ferguson captured the men's junior title by downing William McChesney in the finals, 6—3, 3—6, 6—3. Jack Curby was eliminated in the qualifying rounds.

Bill Connett won the boys' singles title in a fast match with Biron Valier, the latter losing only after a long battle through five sets. The score stood 3—6, 3—6, 6—4, 6—2, 7—5. William Connett won another boys' singles title at the district tournament held here earlier in the season.

Miss Fredo Birge won her second Charlevoix title this summer by defeating Miss Jane Allen Connett 6—2, 6—1.

Ausil Leland and John Knight of Kalamazoo, Mich., captured the men's doubles title by defeating a duo composed of Charles Fox and Charles Fox Jr., 6—2, 3—6, 9—7, 6—4, 6—0. Charles Fox was fresh from his golf conquest of one week previous.

The Wallis-Leland combination will meet the McIlvane-Knight duo here Sunday in an exhibition match to decide the mixed-doubles championship.

One of the last parties of the season at Belvedere was given this week by Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Pingree for seven of their St. Louis friends at the colony.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Peters and daughter, Edith, have left Belvedere for their summer place at Forest Beach, Mich., later to return to St. Louis for the winter.

Harbor Point visitors at the Belvedere colony this week were Mrs. R. Calvin Dobson and Miss Dorothy Dobson.

J. J. Morse Jr. has returned to St. Louis after a short vacation at the Belvedere Hotel. He was accompanied at Charlevoix by his father, J. J. Morse Sr.

The exodus for home is being noticed at Belvedere as at Harbor Point and Wequetonsing. Already the hotel is taking on an autumn atmosphere, although most of the cottages still are occupied. Those who usually remain into the brisk September days are the Fergusons, Mr. and Mrs. Kernan Clark, Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Bemis, Mr. and Mrs. J. O'Niel and daughter, Miss Doris O'Niel, and the C. B. Fox family.

BROKER ASKS $15,000 FEE FOR ATTEMPTED TRANSFER SALE

Richard D. Hatton Sues Fidelity Co., Con P. Curran Printing Co. and Individuals.

Alleging he made the research and opened negotiations for the sale of the Fidelity Transfer Co. to the Columbia Terminals Co. last June for a cash price of $250,000, Richard D. Hatton, a broker, yesterday filed suit in Circuit Court for $15,000 as a fee for his services. As defendants he named the transfer company, Con P. Curran, principal stockholder, the Con P. Curran Printing Co. and Frank W. Corley, Sol. W. Gross, Bernard J. Thole and J. P. Curran, officers of the printing company.

In his petition Hatton reviewed the transfer situation in which there has been an effort by certain railroads to give the transfer business exclusively to the Columbia Terminals, freezing out the Fidelity and Central transfer companies, also accredited carriers.

The Con P. Curran Printing Co. does an extensive railroad printing business and Hatton says he was retained by the printing company to determine whether a fight by the Fidelity Company against the proposed freight transfer monopoly might not influence some of the roads to withdraw their printing business from the printing company. He alleges he came to that conclusion after reviewing the circumstances and after advising Curran to make the sale, opened negotiations with L. Wade Childress, president of the Columbia Terminals for the deal.

Con P. Curran is out of town.

TWO STEAMERS CRASH IN FOG

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—The Steamer Munsomo of the Munson line was reported returning to Quarantine today after a collision at Sandy Hook with the freighter Dundrennan. The ships came together in a dense fog. The Munsomo was reported damaged amidships and taking in some water. Neither ship carried passengers.

The Munsomo departed today with a cargo of freight for Havana, Cuba, and the Dundrennan also of the Munson line, clered for Nuevidas, Cuba. The vessels had proceeded down the fog shrouded harbor only as far as Sandy Hook when the crash occurred. The damage if any, to the Dundrennan was not reported but she also is said to be putting back into the harbor.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls or answers by mail cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

P.-D.—Your question relates to an alleged lottery on which newspapers do not publish information.

S. K.—You will find clay products dealers listed in the classified section of telephone directory.

BILL—You may get the colors of the different State automobile licenses from the Automobile Club of Missouri. See telephone book.

MRS. A. J.—The half dollars bearing dates given by you are valued at 50 to 55 cents. There is no premium on the 1893 Columbian half dollar.

THREE FLOWERS.—We do not find the name you ask about in any compendium of proper names of the English language, so cannot tell you of its nationality.

COINS.—Because of the great number of queries on coins writers are advised that a premium list may be had of dealers. See classified section of telephone directory under "Coins."

R. R.—As you say two-thirds of the man's wage is $15.35 (fifteen dollars and thirty-five cents,) one-third of the wage is $7.67½ (seven dollars, sixty-seven and one-half cents) and the weekly wage is $23.02½ (twenty-three dollars, two and one-half cents.) We do not know what the odd cents represent and think there must have been something else subtracted from the wage.

P.-D. READER—A pay-by-work school is conducted at Siloam, Ark. It is the John E. Brown College, now in its ninth year. As to learning a trade we note that the industries run by students include a print shop, brush factory, garage with agency for a well-known make of cars, and a 600-acre farm with dairy, canning factory and minor industries. Write the registrar asking what trades it is possible to learn there in addition to the literary course being given.

LEGAL INFORMATION

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association)

THANK YOU.—Your question as to the rubber plates is answered in the medical queries.

C. Q. R.—Consult the Legal Aid Bureau, Municipal Courts Bldg., Fourteenth and Market streets, for free legal advice.

DAILY READER—"B" can probably attach the property and prevent "A" from selling it. She should consult a lawyer at once.

I. C.—The corporation for which the woman is working would not have to return her salary as she is married. This relates to the question on income tax.

J. M. T.—Since 1901 the 25 per cent limit relating to assessed ground valuation of property for special tax purposes in Missouri has not been in force.

WORRIED.—You may be able to have the present administratrix of the property removed and yourself appointed instead. Consult a lawyer.

J. A.—To find out about U. S. Government homestead land in Missouri write to the General Land Office, Washington, D. C.

ANXIOUS.—The Workmen's Compensation Commission will make an award. Inquire at their office in the Pierce Building, Fourth and Pine streets.

L. B. S.—You can sell the car under the mortgage at once if the person referred to is in default in his payments.

S. A. G.—Any one of the heirs can probably file a partition suit and force a sale of the property. Consult a lawyer.

R. G.—Under the compensation agreement a workman for a company has to go to the company's doctor in case of injury if he wants the company to pay the doctor's bill.

UNFORTUNATE.—The company can hold you for the balance due on the furniture unless they are willing to take it back and release you. If you do not give a month's written notice the landlord can hold you for a month's rent.

DOUBLE DUMB DORA.—The woman can deprive her daughter of car fare if the circumstances justify that. She cannot disown her daughter. The girl's father has a right in the matter referred to. If the daughter considers herself mistreated she can report the facts to the Children's Aid Society, 3858 Westminster avenue, St. Louis. On the question of forcing the daughter we would say it could be done if the woman is acting from proper motives in doing so.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnosis or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

MISS D. S. M.—One hundred and thirteen pounds is your proper weight.

A. N. X.—Consult a physician or lawyer according to whether you desire cure or redress.

CHICAGO.—Send stamped, addressed envelope for the names of specialists if desired. Refer to "Chicago" or state question again.

A. J. N.—Sinus trouble may result from injury or infection and while an operation may not be necessary for a cure, treatment by a specialist in this line of practice offers practically the one prospect of relief and cure, home and self-treatment being useless and of no value.

MARIAN.—There may not be any great danger in sharing the bed with one in the active stage of the disease mentioned, and yet there is some, hence it should not be done. The same table linen and cutlery should not be used, nor toilet articles, towels, etc., used in common. It is better that her laundry be done separately and all personal contact, kissing, etc., should be avoided as it is better to be over than under cautious.

L. H. A.—The following powder should correct your trouble: Salicylic acid, 30 grains; boracic acid, 30 grains; calomel, 20 grains. Mix, sprinkle on affected parts night and morning after bathing in hot water and drying the parts.

PUERITA.—What you refer to is doubtless a natural discharge and will occur occasionally in those who are continent and unless it occurs oftener than once a week or less is without harm or significance and hence not deserving treatment or care. The leading of a well regulated hygienic life with systematic outdoor exercise, correcting constipation, keeping out of lax company, reading good books, etc., are advisable. Also take hot baths at bedtime with cold showers in the morning and no other treatment will be necessary.

REAL MONEY

Real estate salesmen made fortunes selling lots in Detroit during the boom caused by the building of the huge Ford plant. The same thing happened in Gary before U. S. Steel built there. Right here, right now is the third big opportunity for salesmen due to the building in St. Louis of the General Electric plant to employ 25,000 men and we own the nearby property, nearly 300 acres. Our men are making real money and the wide-awake salesmen of St. Louis are getting in on this. If you would like to make $150 to $250 a week come in and meet men who are doing it. We furnish leads. Can use three good salesmen.

Colonel Green Takes Up Aviatio in a Big Way

The Great Hetty's Unique Son Now Busy Developing Another Million-Dollar Hobby.

Colonel Edward H. R. Green.

By JOHN J. BARRY
Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

BOSTON.

DOWN among the dunes of Cape Cod, on the serrated "sunset shore" of Buzzard's Bay where an ancient whaling vessel sails to eternity on a concrete sea, where "The Voice From 'Way Down East" floats off the antenna of the world's largest private broadcasting station, Hetty Green's son, Colonel Edward H. R. Green, the world's greatest hobby rider, is going in for aeronautics.

The neighbors said, "No," but the Texas colonel said, "Yes," and since he and the neighbors differed before and the Colonel won out, he has felt confident of developing a model airport, one of the largest in the country and a field for scientific experiment in aviation, in spite of the neighbors.

A few days ago, in the State House at Boston, a group of wealthy persons who own summer homes near the site of the proposed airport appeared before the Public Works Commission and withdrew the protests which they had filed against the scheme. They had since learned, they stated, that the purposes of the airport were scientific and not commercial. Furthermore, they had received assurances that shore line creeks and streams running into the property of other owners would not be affected.

It was the anticipated noise of a port for aircraft which had aroused forboding and opposition among summer residents of Nonquitt, Salters Point, Bay View, Shore Acres and Padanaram, the society colonies adjoining Colonel Green's estate of Round Hills, at South Dartmouth, Mass. They didn't like the noise two years ago when "The Voice From 'Way Down East" was broadcast from loud speakers on a water tower so that the throaty tenor who wanted to be "Back in Hackensack, New Jersey," could be heard 10 miles away.

The outdoor broadcasting still continues but the loud speakers have been toned down so that the audience comes to Round Hills instead of Round Hills going out to entertain. The summer residents don't care for that arrangement, either. Round Hills is within easy automobile distance of New Bedford, Fall River, Taunton and several other good-sized towns on the Cape. The roads are clogged with flivvers every evening and on the evenings that the Colonel delights the mill workers and other proletarians with loud speaker programs Nonquitt and Padanaram and the others claim they have no privacy whatsoever.

AND then, just as Nonquitt was about inured to the stock quotations, political addresses, bands, orchestras, singers and alleged singers, witty announcers, prize fights, card tricks, acrobatics and what have you that claim the rostrum day and night on the "sunset shore," the Colonel announced that engineers were at work drawing plans for an airplane landing field.

Whirring propellers, sputtering motors, hammering and banging mechanics and the attendant boiler works harmony in prospect so aroused the summer colony that legal action was considered and it was rumored that an injunction would be sought.

There was one other difficulty about the proposed flying field. Colonel Green needs a certain four-acre tract of marsh land. Mrs. Robert W. Swift of Nonquitt, owner of the four acres, said the tract was not for sale at any price. Real estate men report that Alanson B. Houghton, Ambassador to Great Britain, who owns a summer estate at Salters Point and whose home is nearest to the Colonel's estate, offered Mrs. Swift twice whatever the Colonel might bid for the strip. Appraisers have figured that the tract, mostly submerged, is worth $100 an acre. Summer residents were reported to have raised $15,000 to purchase the land and thus prevent the airport.

The Colonel looked on and listened and smiled. "I'd like to have it," he said, "but if I can't I'll go right ahead. I'll just build around it and place beacons over it to warn flyers of the swamp. They say over in Salters Point they have raised $25,000 for the swamp." He smiled again.

THE new airport for Massachusetts, which Colonel Green feels will surely receive the approval of the Government, is to cover 93 acres. Construction probably will start in the fall. The War and Navy Departments and Department of Commerce will need a few weeks to make the necessary investigation. The Government is not allowed to use a free airport so the Colonel expects to add to his millions another dollar a year by renting the airport at that figure to Uncle Sam.

The filling in of some of the swamp land is already under way and the Colonel once optimistically remarked that if he couldn't have the airport he could have more lawn. Certain buildings will be moved and others erected. The very latest in lighting arrangements will be provided so that night landings will be as easy as those in the sun light. All nearby buildings will have red lights on their roof tops to warn and direct flyers to the field.

Two runways will be constructed, one 3800 feet in length and the other 2700 feet, running down to the sea. Sea and land planes will be welcome at Round Hills. While the actual license for the field has not been received, Colonel Green has stated that he received a telegram from the War Department offering him all assistance and available resources and he is confident he will receive the official documents.

The policy which has governed Colonel Green's radio station, WMAF, that of encouraging experiments, will apply to his airport. Advanced students at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in the science of radio carry on experimental work at the Colonel's estate with expensive apparatus which he supplies. It will be the same with the airport. There will be a welcome sign on the front gate. The Colonel wants young inventors to come to South Dartmouth.

"I WANT young fellows with good ideas, but with no money to work them out, to feel that here is a place they can come,'' said Colonel Green of his airport. "I will grubstake them when their ideas appear sound and let them experiment and perfect the ideas. If they develop anything marketable, they can take it out and it is theirs. Today scientific investigation in aviation is hampered by its costliness."

Among the particular experiments in which this wealthy patron of aviation intends to delve is the problem of flying and landing in fog. Experiments will be carried out with fog dispensers such as electrically charged sand, fog-piercing beacons and lights, radio control and radio pictures which may be flashed on the dash-board of an airplane in flight.

Local Congressmen, mayors, chambers of commerce, Rotarians, Kiwanians and other civic organizations are backing the Colonel in his attempt to make Buzzard's Bay a center of aeronautics. Long before Hetty Green's son was a Colonel he himself had flown. He owned the first automobile in Texas and in 1911 he flew in French Bleriots. He visited the Wrights in the midst of their first experiments with the intention of purchasing a plane, but his mother threatened to disown him if he took to the air and he gave up this plan. He probably will not fly any more himself but he hopes to make flying safe for the younger generation. He is 59 years old.

WHEN word reached Boston of Colonel Green's plans, a National Guard aviator hopped off and a couple of hours later landed on the Colonel's front lawn, with apologies for damaging the grass. The Colonel informed the aviator that he had 75 men with nothing else to do but look after the grass and he offered to have them pull up a hedge to aid the flyer in his take-off. That's the way the Colonel approaches his projects, his million-dollar hobbies. The airport will cost him more than a million before its completion.

His radio station was probably his biggest million-dollar hobby up till now. The million should be plural. From the time that Marconi gave to the world the wireless telegraph, the radio has been a hobby with Colonel Green. Learning of Marconi's work in 1896, he attempted to adapt the new art to railroad use. Baggage cars on the Texas Midland Railroad, of which he was president, were equipped with receiving sets. In operation the experiment at that time was a failure on moving trains but he did use the wireless between stations on the road.

RADIO entered his life in earnest a few years ago when Station WMAF was opened on his estate. The inaccessibility of Round Hills made it necessary for him to utilize land lines and most of the South Dartmouth programs come direct from New York, but there is a broadcasting studio, as palatial as any in New York, at his estate and local programs also are broadcast. For the benefit of the neighbors the Colonel installed the public address system of loud speakers on the water tower which caused so much trouble for him.

The compromise by modification of the power used seems to have pleased almost everyone, however, and each summer thousands drive to his estate, where parking space is provided, and enjoy the programs. There were 6000 at Round Hills the night of the Dempsey-Sharkey fight at the Yankee Stadium and even some of the unfriendly ones from Nonquitt and Salters Point drifted into range of the loud speakers.

It was as a boy that Eddie Green began to ride his hobbies. The first was chicken raising. It wasn't one of the million-dollar hobbies, but it made him what many would call a fortune today. He went from chicks to ducks, from ducks to mules, to railroads, to roses, baseball, yachting, fishing, orphans, inventors, and what not. He raised American Beauties in Texas under glass and made $37,000 in a single month. He gave up roses for dogs.

Just experimenting, he bought the first automobile in Texas, "Old Hurricane," and since that time he has owned racing cars and every other conceivable type of car. On his Round Hills estate he uses a little electric automobile equipped with a radio. He organized the first tarpon fishing club in Texas and is mentioned in his briefest biographies as a worthy disciple of Izaak Walton. Texas didn't have a good baseball club, so he imported one, managed it from the bench and even gave it a p vate car on his railroad. This was t much for any team, and it was t death of the club, smothered in ro

Whatever the novelty, the discov of the day, Colonel Green has sei upon it, made it his own and ende ored in some way to convert it into better thing and of greater use or en joyment for people at large. His mil lion-dollar mansion was his first Ma sachusetts hobby and since 1916, wh he built his massive home on Ca Cod, his estate has been practically public park.

In the day of the palatial yacht Colonel Green broke all records in lavish expenditure. His "Unit States," originally built as a Chica lake excursion boat, cost him $1,50 000. The President's yacht, the "Ma flower," cost $1,000,000. J. P. Mo gan's "Corsair" cost $700,000.

His latest "yacht" is his most inte esting, the whaler that sails on th concrete sea. It is the "Charles Morgan," whaling bark and relic of glorious past. This vessel once w the property of the Colonel's gra father and when the Colonel reali that she was the last of the old bar he purchased her, spent some hu dreds of thousands to fit her up an had the old ship placed in a concre bed away from the ravages of th tides on his estate. A real old-fash ioned wharf stands at her side. Th wharf is in keeping with the old ship On it are placed old seaweed-cover barrels and to make the atmosphe complete the barrels and planking periodically sprinkled with whale The old ship, a memorial and histo cal museum open to the public, is ficially "afloat" and will be for p haps 200 years.

She remains entered in the U. Customs Office annually with a cr list, master and agent. The mas each year is some man who has actu ly been a-whaling and he must ha captain's papers so that they m hang in the cabin.

THE Colonel confesses to havi received 9001 proposals of ma riage by mail. The odd one w received the day he was married, ju after the ceremony. In addition to proposals of the young women w have wanted to assist him in spendi his millions, he receives countless le ters from all kinds and classes, appe for assistance, offers of gold min silver mines, copper mines, oil we anything in the world that might bri a check on the Green millions.

His foster daughters are a contin hobby with him. Just now he h about an even dozen. They are g without means but with promise. W lesley College is the scene of their e ucation. They spend their summers Round Hills. Wellesley College rece ly received a half-million donation Hetty Green Hall, named after t Colonel's mother. When the wards foster daughters marry they cease be wards. With the exception of so French war orphans, all of his wa are girls from Texas.

Capitalist, man of affairs, railro er, lawyer, horticulturist, agricultu sportsman, historian, scientist, lover arts and literature, philanthropist now aeronaut, the son of a famous p ent has carved his own niche.

Whatever the novelty, the discovery of the day, Colonel Green has seized upon it, made it his own and endeavored in some way to convert it into a better thing and of greater use or enjoyment for people at large. His million-dollar mansion was his first Massachusetts hobby and since 1916, when he built his massive home on Cape Cod, his estate has been practically a public park.

In the day of the palatial yachts, Colonel Green broke all records for lavish expenditure. His "United States," originally built as a Chicago lake excursion boat, cost him $1,500,000. The President's yacht, the "Mayflower," cost $1,000,000. J. P. Morgan's "Corsair" cost $700,000.

His latest "yacht" is his most interesting, the whaler that sails on the concrete sea. It is the "Charles W. Morgan," whaling bark and relic of a glorious past. This vessel once was the property of the Colonel's grandfather and when the Colonel realized that she was the last of the old barks he purchased her, spent some hundreds of thousands to fit her up and had the old ship placed in a concrete bed away from the ravages of the tides on his estate. A real old-fashioned wharf stands at her side. The wharf is in keeping with the old ship. On it are placed old seaweed-covered barrels and to make the atmosphere complete the barrels and planking are periodically sprinkled with whale oil. The old ship, a memorial and historical museum open to the public, is officially "afloat" and will be for perhaps 200 years.

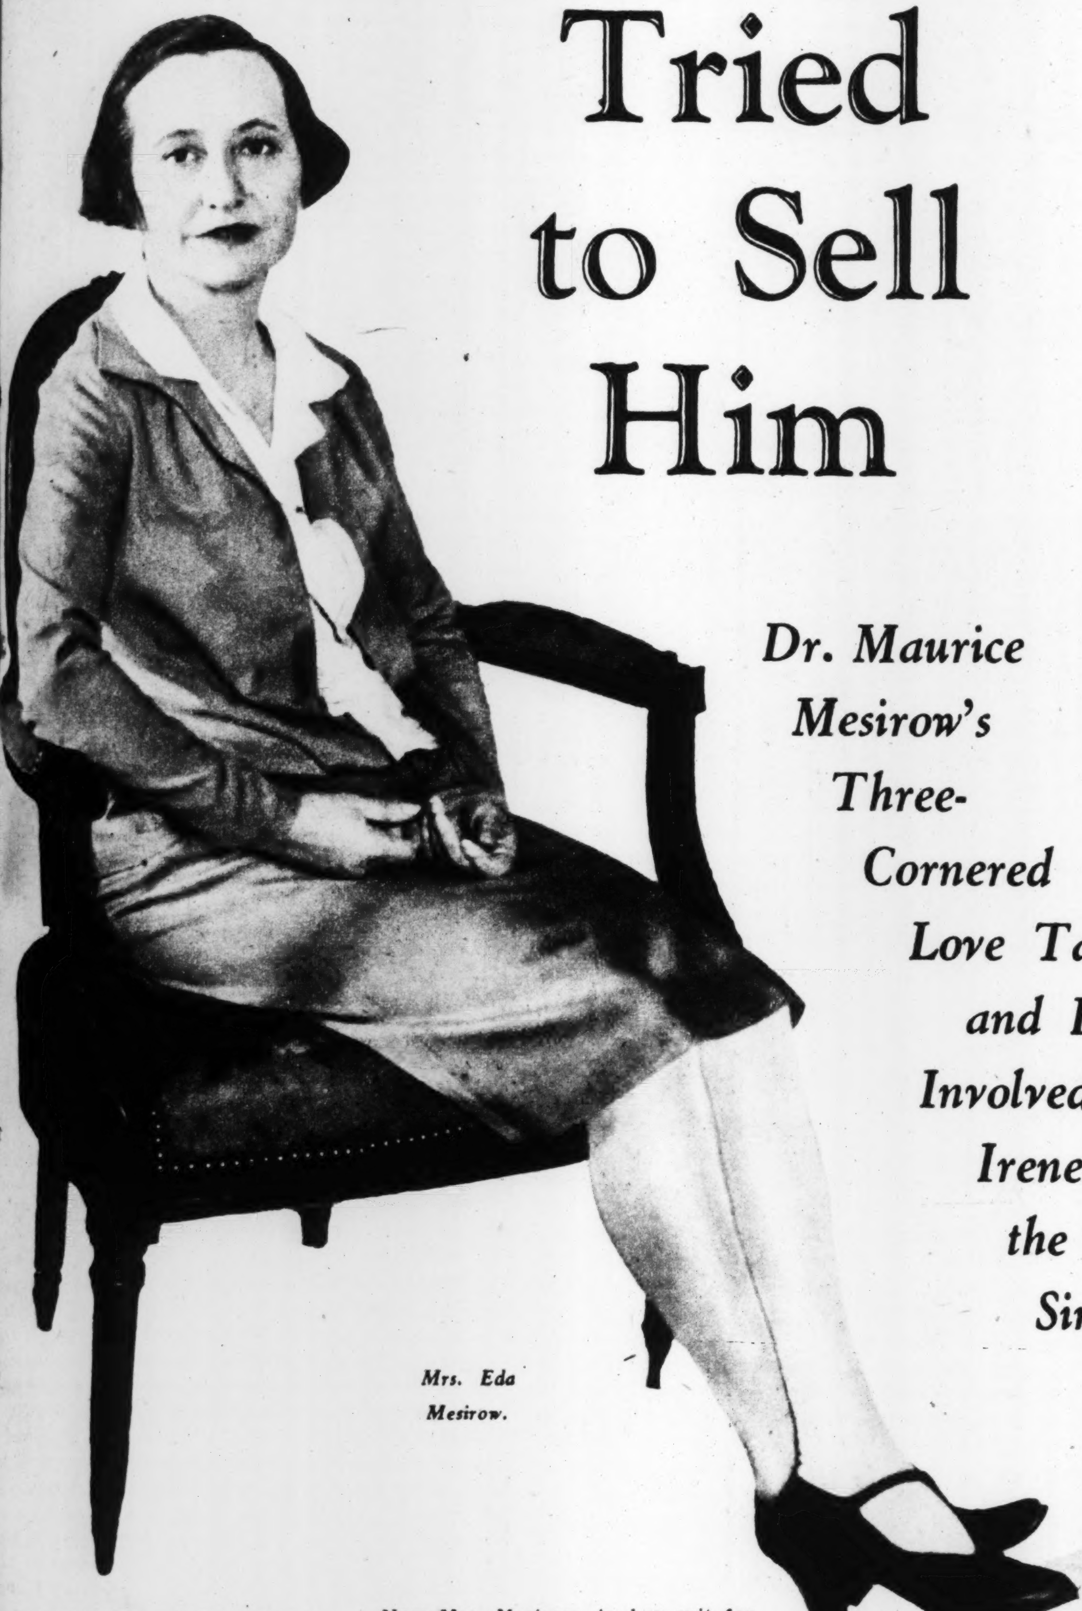
She remains entered in the U. S. Customs Office annually with a crew list, master and agent. The master each year is some man who has actually been a-whaling and he must have captain's papers so that they may hang in the cabin.

THE Colonel confesses to having received 9001 proposals of marriage by mail. The odd one was received the day he was married, just after the ceremony. In addition to the proposals of the young women who have wanted to assist him in spending his millions, he receives countless letters from all kinds and classes, appeals for assistance, offers of gold mines, silver mines, copper mines, oil wells, anything in the world that might bring a check on the Green millions.

His foster daughters are a continual hobby with him. Just now he has about an even dozen. They are girls without means but with promise. Wellesley College is the scene of their education. They spend their summers at Round Hills. Wellesley College recently received a half-million donation for Hetty Green Hall, named after the Colonel's mother. When the wards or foster daughters marry they cease to be wards. With the exception of some French war orphans, all of his wards are girls from Texas.

Capitalist, man of affairs, railroader, lawyer, horticulturist, agriculturist, sportsman, historian, scientist, lover of arts and literature, philanthropist and now aeronaut, the son of a famous parent has carved his own niche.

Claims His Wife Tried to Sell Him



Mrs. Eda Mesirow.

Dr. Maurice Mesirow's Three-Cornered Love Tangle and How It Involved Madame Irene Pavloska, the Opera Singer.

Mme. Pavloska in costume.

CHICAGO.

IT has come about now, at least according to the gentleman's allegations, that a lady is willing to barter off her husband for $5000. The wife in question denies it strenuously, however. She wants separate maintenance, she says, but she hasn't put the gentleman on the market.

And Madame Irene Pavloska, mezzo soprano of the Chicago Civic Opera Company, who is named by the aforementioned wife as she whose charms have taken her husband—this Madame Pavloska fervently and wholeheartedly disclaims that she ever wanted this other woman's husband and that all he's ever been to her was an excellent specialist of the throat when her vocal organs weren't quite in the high shape she would have them.

The husband and doctor in the case is Dr. Maurice E. Mesirow. He is a prominent Chicago eye, ear, nose and throat specialist, with a Michigan avenue clientele. And it is Eda Mesirow, his wife, who he says wanted to trade him off for $5000. First, the physician charges, she offered to give him his freedom for that sum, and then, when he turned down her offer, she suggested that their friend, Madame Pavloska, pay the $5000, thereby obtaining the right to claim the physician as her spouse.

ST. LOUISANS will remember Madame Pavloska. She sang the role of Yum Yum in the Mikado at the Municipal Opera in St. Louis just a few weeks ago. And—on the opera stage—they sang about her: "He's going to marry Yum Yum, Yum Yum." But the soprano infers that that went only as far as the stage; there's nobody going to marry Pavloska as far as she knows. It will be conceded that if anyone is going to marry her, she certainly ought to know something about it.

Mme. Pavloska, besides being one of the leading lights of the Chicago opera, is on the faculty of the Sherwood School of Music of Chicago, and a composer of note. Strangely enough, the person she collaborates with is Mrs. Nina Mesirow Minchin, who is none other than the physician's sister. Their latest piece, "In My Dreams," has just been published in New York.

Now Mrs. Mesirow, in her suit for separate maintenance, named in her petition a "Jane Doe" as co-respondent. Nobody knew who "Jane Doe" was, so Mrs. Mesirow's suit merely remained one of the 13,000 similar suits biding their time in the courts of Cook County until those same courts could get around to taking care of them. That suit of Mrs. Mesirow's didn't create an awful lot of interest.

BUT at the first hearing, the Doctor's attorney demanded to know just who was this said "Jane Doe" who was supposed to have lured away from the Mesirow fireside the affections of Dr. Mesirow. At first Mrs. Mesirow's barrister was reluctant to give the information. Then he did. He said the "Jane Doe" named in the petition was none other than the Chicago opera's popular singer, Madame Irene Pavloska.

And a little faster than immediately Mrs. Mesirow's suit gained in interest. And even faster did Madame Pavloska rush to her own defense and say there was nothing, absolutely nothing, to it. She admitted she was an intimate friend of the Mesirow family. She admitted that on one occasion Dr. Mesirow spent a night at her apartment in a professional capacity while she was critically ill. And she said she had no desire whatsoever to lure the physician from his home. And, says she, she certainly has no intention of sitting down and writing out a check for $5000 to get the gentleman, and, furthermore, she says, she is quite well satisfied with her husbandless state.

Now the "Jane Doe" in Mrs. Mesirow's petition, according to Mrs. Mesirow's allegations, frequented places of amusement with Dr. Mesirow and enticed that gentleman from his home. This "Jane Doe" also is charged with maintaining a clandestine love affair with Dr. Mesirow. And it is charged in Mrs. Mesirow's papers that the Doctor "openly acknowledged he had become madly in love with her."

Dr. Mesirow didn't like his wife's charges a little bit. First, he filed a formal denial. He followed that up with a cross-petition for absolute divorce. He declared his only interest in Pavloska was professional. He admitted visiting her apartment on various occasions in the capacity of a physician. He said he once remained throughout the night when the singer was seriously ill.

But he denied his wife's charges that he was madly in love with Pavloska.

Mme. Irene Pavloska.

According to Dr. Mesirow's cross-petition, his marriage, twenty years ago, happened in this way: At that time, he states, he "was a student in medical school and was ambitious to become a doctor, and that owing to the relationship that existed between your Orator and Eda Mesirow, the said Eda Mesirow threatened to have your Orator expelled from school and publicly disgraced unless he married her; whereupon your Orator, in order that his medical career might not be interfered with in so unscrupulous a manner, married the defendant, and ever since has been subjected to the most vicious and insufferable nagging and scurrilous attacks, both mentally and physically, and has had to contend with a violent and uncontrollable temper on the part of Eda Mesirow."

Dr. Mesirow was graduated from the University of Illinois College of Medicine in 1907, one year after his marriage to the present Mrs. Mesirow.

After reciting in his petition that his wife's "insane jealousy" drove women patients from his office and threatened to wreck his medical career, he goes ahead to charge Mrs. Mesirow with numerous physical attacks upon him, in which he suffered black eyes, a scratched face, and the breaking of his glasses over his nose.

Such treatment, says he, twice sent him to the sanitarium for repairs.

AND, says he, in the petition, "Your Orator further represents that the complainant, Eda Mesirow, has importuned him to secure the sum of $5000 and other sums and properties to give to her and if and when he does that she would permit him to get a divorce.

"Your Orator further represents that he has refused to enter into so collusive an agreement, and submits to this most honorable court his plea for release from so vicious a relationship.

"Your Orator further represents that when he refused to comply with the demands of the complainant, she suggested she go to a mutual friend, Irene Pavloska, of your Orator and his wife, whom she, the said Eda Mesirow, unjustly suspected of desiring to marry your Orator, and offer to release your Orator or secure a divorce from him if the said mutual friend would give her $5000 and upon the refusal of your Orator to agree to this, the said mutual friend became the object of the vicious tongue and scurrilous statements of the said Eda Mesirow."

The publication of this document was the signal for Mrs. Mesirow and Madame Pavloska to get into action again.

"Do I," indignantly demanded Mrs. Mesirow, "look like a woman who would put her husband on the bargain counter?" "I wonder that the department stores don't deal in husbands," she added, and the inference seemed to be that her last sentence was meant as sarcasm for her husband.

"It's all false," comes back Pavloska. "He was my physician. This woman probably based her charge on the fact he attended me and once, when I was critically ill, remained in my apartment throughout the night."

And Mrs. Mesirow says, "I had the evidence when I filed suit for separate maintenance, and I'm ready to produce it at the trial regardless of what Madame Pavloska says or does."

THEN Attorney William B. Berger, Mrs. Mesirow's lawyer, remarks, "Mrs. Mesirow did not want to create any scandal. She thought she could avoid unnecessary embarrassment to Madame Pavloska."

Whereupon Pavloska answers, "The whole thing is preposterous. I know the entire family well. Dr. Mesirow's sister, Nina, who is a noted pianist, is my dearest friend. I have nothing to be afraid of and the charges are ridiculous.

"Persons who have by hard work achieved some measure of success seem to be open largess for accusations of this kind. I shall fight the matter out in court.

"My acquaintance with the Doctor is purely professional. Like all singers, I suffer occasionally from throat trouble. He attends me. All other accusations are unjust.

"Dr. Mesirow's sister and I recently had a song, 'In My Dreams,' published in New York. A second song is under consideration and three more are under way. And that's all there is to it."

IN her suit Mrs. Mesirow declared the Doctor's income was $15,000 a year. But he charged that his wife had so wrecked his health and his practice that he was making a bare $2000 a year. Out of this sum, he says, he has to support a crippled mother and he has been giving his wife $50 a week when he was able to. As Mrs. Mesirow was awarded $40 a week alimony, it looks like she is losing money by her suit. The Mesirows have been separated since 1920. But the Doctor says she continued to harass him.

It was in 1923, says the Doctor, that he had a nervous breakdown due to his wife's "harassment," and was compelled to spend two weeks at a sanitarium. Shortly afterward, he says, "he went east for a period of study, so as to occupy his mind with other than his marital difficulties, and that the year of study wherein he attempted to learn how to specialize in eye, ear, nose and throat work, was the happiest year of his married life, for he had no contact with his wife and was saved from her shrewish attacks."

But it started all over again when he returned, says the Doctor, and her attacks characterized her as a "money-lustful woman."

The ESCAPE of the GIRL BANK BANDITS

Tracked Through the Woods by Their High Heels After a Hold-Up at Mount Jackson, Virginia, They Vanished Just as the Net Closed In.

Part of the posse searching the bandits' trail.

WOODSTOCK, Virginia.

MUCH as on any other morning of the year the three employes of the Mount Jackson National Bank, in the town of that name near here, recently opened up for business for the day.

Ollie L. Burkett, assistant cashier, was in charge in the absence of the cashier. The two others were Mildred, Burkett's 15-year-old daughter, who spends her summers in the bank, and Charles I. Dellinger, bookkeeper. Dellinger was the last to come to work.

With his arrival, Burkett took out of the vault the $2500 necessary for the day's business, the shades were rolled up from before the cages, and the Mount Jackson National Bank was ready for the day.

A few minutes after the bank had been opened Dellinger's cousin, Kirby E. Dellinger, strolled in. He greeted Charles, who opened the door of the cage and talked to him for about 15 minutes. The conversation concerned several notes, signed by the visitor, which the bank held.

Kirby Dellinger seemed in a very good humor and the two cousins laughed and joked together. Kirby at last said abruptly that he was going to breakfast, and left, saying goodbye to his cousin and to the two other employes, whom he knew.

Five minutes later he came back. With two young girls he stepped out of a Buick sedan, leaving a second man at the wheel. Kirby and his two companions came into the bank and he again began a conversation with his cousin. Both girls were fairly attractive and well dressed. One, the elder of the two, who wore a close-fitting black silk dress, lounged near the doorway, looking up the street.

The other, whom the assistant cashier Burkett described as being pretty and who wore white linen knickers, came to the window of the cage and, taking a piece of a $10 bill from her pocketbook, asked him to give her a good bill for it.

Burkett examined it and then passed it back to her, explaining that there was less than half of the bill and for that reason it was unredeemable. She answered sarcastically that she knew better. He then matched the fragment with a whole bill, showing her that she had less than a third. She insisted, however, that because the numbers were on the piece she had it was redeemable.

WHEN Burkett still refused to redeem the bill, she took it casually and stuffed it into her bag as if to leave. As she drew her hand out, however, she held a pistol which she flashed in the cashier's face. He turned suddenly to notice that at the same instant Kirby Dellinger also had drawn a gun—an Army .45—and was covering his cousin, the bookkeeper and Miss Burkett.

Dellinger muttered, "Put 'em up and hand it over," but Burkett, knowing the relationship between the two, laughed, believing it to be a practical joke. But Dellinger knew his cousin better, he knew that he had once served time in a Federal penitentiary for robbing the mails while he had been a mail clerk. He lunged for Kirby Dellinger, grappling with him.

The girl in knickers, her voice suddenly shrill, darted around the corner of the cage door, keeping the bank employes constantly covered, dug her gun into the bookkeeper's ribs and cried sharply:

"Cut that out."

Charles Dellinger, helpless, obeyed. While he and his cousin were breaking apart, according to Burkett, Kirby thrust the muzzle of the revolver into his face and pulled the trigger. There was only an empty click.

With this bad beginning Kirby flung his revolver aside, hurriedly scooped up the money in the cash drawers and the two, with the other girl who had joined them, began to back out. But they did not get away before Charles Dellinger found a second opportunity to grapple with his cousin, recovering $85 of the money that had just been seized.

The sedan was under way before they reached it and they jumped on the running-board and climbed in as it sped away.

So far this is just an ordinary holdup. And not even a very clever or skillful holdup, one that was considerably bungled. But the escape—that is a different story.

JUST outside the bank, after the custom of small Southern towns, seven idlers lounged on a bench in the sun, among them being Deputy Sheriff McKinley Ryman. They had noticed the waiting car but only casually. One of them had even entered the bank during the early stages of the holdup, but noticing nothing out of the ordinary strolled out again.

As soon as the car started away, however, those from inside the bank ran out, gave the alarm and the chase was on. Ryman, with C. M. Shannon and D. E. Nelson, directors of the bank, started in pursuit but were soon outdistanced.

Kirby Dellinger, who was born at Liberty Furnace, a village not far from here, and who spent the first 20 years of his life in this section, knows the Shenandoah mountains well. He chose the most winding and dangerous roadways, pushing the car forward over trails that were little more than logging roads. He pointed the sedan to the northwest toward Conicsville, through the Great North Mountains on a murderous pass, and in the direction of the West Virginia line.

They had planned their escape well. They had tried to prepare for every emergency. A large box, under the rear seat, contained sterilized gauze, absorbent cotton, iodine and other antiseptics, and even forceps and surgical instruments. Two suitcases, one belonging to each of the two girls, were filled with clothes, personal effects, letters and other means of identification.

The machine had been carefully equipped for flight. The tank was filled with gasoline and a reserve supply of oil was carried in the tonneau.

But so rapidly had the alarm spread that the whole countryside was aroused. Ryman's party of pursuers was close on the trail of the fresh tire prints, easily traced on the soft trails, which are little used. Sheriff B. M. Borden, of Shenandoah County, Virginia, with a hurriedly assembled posse, was not far behind. From the West Virginia side of the mountains State constabulary had gathered another band of searchers and were hurrying up the narrow roads to meet the fugitives.

Kirby Dellinger, the leader of the band.

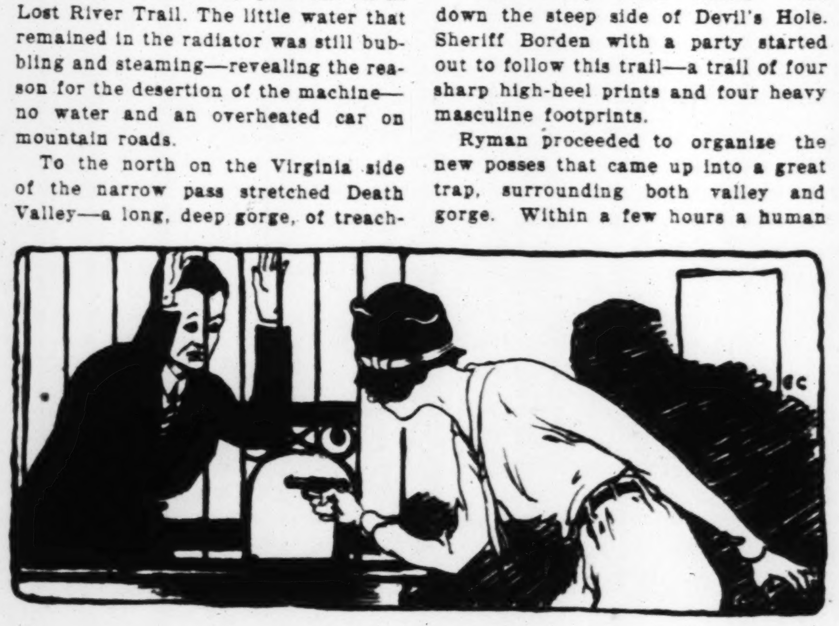
Mildred Burkett, who was working in the bank when the hold-up took place.

The three parties of pursuers met almost simultaneously at the car which the holdup party had abandoned on a rocky pass known as Lost River Trail. The little water that remained in the radiator was still bubbling and steaming—revealing the reason for the desertion of the machine—no water and an overheated car on mountain roads.

To the north on the Virginia side of the narrow pass stretched Death Valley—a long, deep gorge, of treacherous repute, populated chiefly by moonshiners, outlaws, bears, wildcats and rattlesnakes. And to the south in West Virginia is Devil's Hole, a wild, deep valley, hemmed in by precipitous cliffs.

Tracks—very fresh tracks — led down the steep side of Devil's Hole. Sheriff Borden with a party started out to follow this trail—a trail of four sharp high-heel prints and four heavy masculine footprints.

Ryman proceeded to organize the new posses that came up into a great trap, surrounding both valley and gorge. Within a few hours a human chain surrounded Devil's Hole and Death Valley. Escape for the girl bandits and their companions seemed impossible.



Sheriff Borden and the pursuing party followed the fresh trail down the precipitous slope, around the edge of the famous Devil's Hole and back again to the point at which they had descended. It was the high-heeled shoes that almost spelled disaster for the bandit quartet.

The prints showed that the girls had found difficulty in walking through the underbrush and over the rough ground from the beginning, but that they had made fairly good progress for the first few hours. Both girls, reared in the city, knowing only pavements and park pathways, were unprepared for this desperate flight through the wilderness.

By the evening of the first day the frail slippers, not intended for such rigorous use, had turned cruelly at the heel, and must have been inflicting the most severe discomforts on their wearers.

The second day's trail showed that the girls had been on several occasions unable to go on. The men, rather than submit to capture, had carried them much of the way. The tell-tale high-heel prints would appear for a short distance, then suddenly stop for a period and the tracks of the men would become deeper, indicating greater weight. Then again the women's prints would reappear and those of the men become lighter.

All along the edge of the path the huckleberry and blackberry bushes were stripped of fruit, indicating that the four had been in desperate straits for food. The fact that their trail only once passed a spring of drinking water suggested that thirst was another element of hardship.

THROUGHOUT the first day and a large part of the second, the fugitives made a great circle around the edge of Devil's Hole, touching here and there a number of dry streams where they had apparently hoped to find water. Late on the second day, however, they climbed back up the mountain side, crossing the Lost River Trail again almost at the same point at which they had deserted their car the afternoon before, and made their way down into Death Valley.

Capture seemed closer than ever. The human chain about the valley drew in, the pursuers closed up on the trail, often coming so close that the underbrush was still trampled beneath the feet of the four fugitiv

Then, abruptly, the trail ended. Th four had escaped, no one knows h Several days of futile searching esta lished this as a conclusive fact.

There is only one clew as to h the bandits may have escaped fr Death Valley. On the morning of th third day, about five hours before th trail ended, three mysterious hor men—all in men's clothing—dash through the lines, and when hail refused to stop. None of the search was close enough to see them wel they only caught a fleeting glimpse three figures, crouched low, and rid like madmen.

It is possible, however, that th may have been the bandits, the g being disguised in male attire. B if this is the case, what happened the fourth member of the band? N one ventures to say. It is known th Dellinger had relatives in or ne Death Valley who may have assis them.

Authorities claim to have identif the second man as Cecil Wilson, 2 years old. Wilson is a native o Death Valley and he also had relativ there.

THE girls were identified by She iff Borden, in charge of th search, as Betty Wilson, a dan er in cheap Washington, D. The lett and a bank-book found in the tw suitcases that were left in the aba doned car apparently bear out Sher Borden's claims.

Dellinger and Wilson and the tw girls had been visiting for a few da at the Dellinger home at Liberty Fu nace, having come from Washingto a rented automobile. The girls, a cording to Dellinger's mother, w very attractive and vivacious—the called Helen especially so.

By GUY FORSHEY
of the Post-Dispatch Staff

"THE old days of war are gone," writes Captain Herman Archer in his "Soldiers of Fortune." With the hint of a falling tear and the trace of a catch in his voice, this United States Army veteran, who was himself a celebrated soldier of fortune, laments that "the picturesque times have passed forever."

"You have only to compare the colorful, striking uniforms of yesterday with those of the World War," he observes, "to see the difference in ways of war and in soldiers well illustrated. Armies now are vast machines, and soldiers, under the plan, unthinking cogs. Something has gone out of war; something that never can come back to the fighting of the modern day."

One of these things which is gone out of war, according to Captain Archer, one of the things which made armed conflict most picturesque and invested the marching troops with the glamour of romance, is the soldier of fortune such as Samuel Dreben was. A first-class fighting man was Samuel Dreben. They called him "the Fighting Jew." He belonged to that picturesque group of adventurers who scorned to soldier in a peace time army but, when there was fighting to be done, could not resist the lure of burning powder. His profession was that of following battle flags. When there was opportunity he followed his own country's. When there was not, he followed the banner of another land, the one unalterable condition being that it was going into action. Through a dozen wars and uprisings he tramped and fought—the Philippine insurrection, the Boxer Rebellion, various Mexican revolutions, a foray into Honduras—and even the World War, which was not his kind of a war, was not allowed to get along without him.

In that last prodigious set-to Sam Dreben brought his fighting up to date and won the Distinguished Service Cross for wiping out a German machine gun nest. But the World War encompassed the extinction of his calling and his kind. With conscription and modern mechanical methods of combat, the soldier of fortune became as obsolete as the cavalry horse and the saber. Sam Dreben was heartily sick of war when, late in 1918, he asked and obtained permission from General Pershing to come home. He never went to war again. His day was done. When he died at Hollywood, California, not so long ago, his death marked the passing of one of the last survivors of his glamorous breed. With admiration and affection Captain Archer recalls him and his eventful story.

WITH all his adventurer traits, "the Fighting Jew" was not quite like the majority of his adventurer fellows. He was the gentlest of all the tribe and the softest spoken. There was another difference. The traditional soldier of fortune was a notoriously improvident fellow. Sam was not. He never was known to pass up a lively scrap, but at the same time he never was known to enter one without first being torn by a savage internal conflict—the conflict between the lure of battle and the lure of making money. He was good at both. Between wars he made small fortunes, and when a new war came along he yielded to its call only after the soldier in him had mastered, in a desperate tug-of-war, the business man. Back on the firing line, he forgot all business but that of fighting. A string of medals a yard long testifies as to his warrior prowess. And as to his record over many years, General Pershing, who knew him in the Philippines, in Mexico and overseas, had this to say upon his death:

The story of Sam Dreben as pertaining to this country rightly starts at Ellis Island. He landed there a generation or so ago from Odessa, Russia. He looked the part of anything but a soldier. He was a fat and rather frightened boy. With his parents he had fled from the pogroms which had raged through the Ukraine during the last years of the Czar. Arriving in America, the family went to Philadelphia to live and there Sam grew up without becoming much of an early success at anything. He worked at various jobs, quit, worked at others and finally enlisted in the Army. Even as a soldier he gave no early evidence of achieving glory. The history of the insurrection in the Philippines can be told adequately without mention of his name. About the same is true of the Boxer Rebellion. From all accounts available to Captain Archer he was a good but unassum-neath the feet of the four fugitives.

Then, abruptly, the trail ended. The four had escaped, no one knows how. Several days of futile searching established this as a conclusive fact.

There is only one clew as to how the bandits may have escaped from Death Valley. On the morning of the third day, about five hours before the trail ended, three mysterious horsemen—all in men's clothing—dashed through the lines, and when hailed refused to stop. None of the searchers was close enough to see them well—they only caught a fleeting glimpse of three figures, crouched low, and riding like madmen.

It is possible, however, that these may have been the bandits, the girls being disguised in male attire. But if this is the case, what happened to the fourth member of the band? No one ventures to say. It is known that Dellinger had relatives in or near Death Valley who may have assisted them.

Authorities claim to have identified the second man as Cecil Wilson, 22 years old. Wilson is a native of Death Valley and he also had relatives there.

THE girls were identified by Sheriff Borden, in charge of the search, as Betty Wilson, a dancer in cheap Washington, D. C., cabarets, and Helen Blackwell, a flapper of the same city with very young ideas about her rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. The letters and a bank-book found in the two suitcases that were left in the abandoned car apparently bear out Sheriff Borden's claims.

Dellinger and Wilson and the two girls had been visiting for a few days at the Dellinger home at Liberty Furnace, having come from Washington in a rented automobile. The girls, according to Dellinger's mother, were very attractive and vivacious—the one called Helen especially so.

Both girls declined, during the course of their stay, to divulge their last names. Mrs. Dellinger told authorities that she was not accustomed to girls such as these. They both smoked and drank, talked in rather broad language and when she asked them where they came from, the reply was:

"From coast to coast."

Mrs. Dellinger said that the four were up early on the morning of the robbery, packing their bags on the pretense of returning to Washington. They seemed excited and frequently held whispered conferences together.

Having once escaped the net of pursuers there is little danger of capture for some time as the fugitives can travel northward to New York State and southward to Alabama without ever leaving the protection of the wilds. The flapper bandits will get a long course in woodlore and camp craft that they probably didn't look forward to when they started out on their little holdup party.

They Called Him "THE FIGHTING JEW"

The Glamorous Exploits of Sam Dreben Who Was Gentle as a Woman, Keen as a Horse Trader, and a Tiger in Battle.

By GUY FORSHEY
of the Post-Dispatch Staff

"THE old days of war are gone," writes Captain Herman Archer in his "Soldiers of Fortune." With the hint of a falling tear and the trace of a catch in his voice, this United States Army veteran, who was himself a celebrated soldier of fortune, laments that "the picturesque times have passed forever."

"You have only to compare the colorful, striking uniforms of yesterday with those of the World War," he observes, "to see the difference in ways of war and in soldiers well illustrated. Armies now are vast machines, and soldiers, under the plan, unthinking cogs. Something has gone out of war; something that never can come back to the fighting of the modern day."

One of these things which is gone out of war, according to Captain Archer, one of the things which made armed conflict most picturesque and invested the marching troops with the glamour of romance, is the soldier of fortune such as Samuel Dreben was. A first-class fighting man was Samuel Dreben. They called him "the Fighting Jew." He belonged to that picturesque group of adventurers who scorned to soldier in a peace time army but, when there was fighting to be done, could not resist the lure of burning powder. His profession was that of following battle flags. When there was opportunity he followed his own country's. When there was not, he followed the banner of another land, the one unalterable condition being that it was going into action. Through a dozen wars and uprisings he tramped and fought—the Philippine insurrection, the Boxer Rebellion, various Mexican revolutions, a foray into Honduras—and even the World War, which was not his kind of a war, was not allowed to get along without him.

In that last prodigious set-to Sam Dreben brought his fighting up to date and won the Distinguished Service Cross for wiping out a German machine gun nest. But the World War encompassed the extinction of his calling and his kind. With conscription and modern mechanical methods of combat, the soldier of fortune became as obsolete as the cavalry horse and the saber. Sam Dreben was heartily sick of war when, late in 1918, he asked and obtained permission from General Pershing to come home. He never went to war again. His day was done. When he died at Hollywood, California, not so long ago, his death marked the passing of one of the last survivors of his glamorous breed. With admiration and affection Captain Archer recalls him and his eventful story.

WITH all his adventurer traits, "the Fighting Jew" was not quite like the majority of his adventurer fellows. He was the gentlest of all the tribe and the softest spoken. There was another difference. The traditional soldier of fortune was a notoriously improvident fellow. Sam was not. He never was known to pass up a lively scrap, but at the same time he never was known to enter one without first being torn by a savage internal conflict—the conflict between the lure of battle and the lure of making money. He was good at both. Between wars he made small fortunes, and when a new war came along he yielded to its call only after the soldier in him had mastered, in a desperate tug-of-war, the business man. Back on the firing line, he forgot all business but that of fighting. A string of medals a yard long testifies as to his warrior prowess. And as to his record over many years, General Pershing, who knew him in the Philippines, in Mexico and overseas, had this to say upon his death:

"He was the finest soldier and one of the bravest men I ever knew."

The story of Sam Dreben as pertaining to this country rightly starts at Ellis Island. He landed there a generation or so ago from Odessa, Russia. He looked the part of anything but a soldier. He was a fat and rather frightened boy. With his parents he had fled from the pogroms which had raged through the Ukraine during the last years of the Czar. Arriving in America, the family went to Philadelphia to live and there Sam grew up without becoming much of an early success at anything. He worked at various jobs, quit, worked at others and finally enlisted in the Army. Even as a soldier he gave no early evidence of achieving glory. The history of the insurrection in the Philippines can be told adequately without mention of his name. About the same is true of the Boxer Rebellion. From all accounts available to Captain Archer he was a good but unassuming soldier with no particular feathers in his cap. However, when Aguinaldo was at last put down and the Philippines were pacified, Dreben was discharged as a First Sergeant of infantry. Then, after his discharge, came his first free lance venture, when he went to Honduras with La Guardia. There he was a competent "top kick" but in no manner of speaking a leader or a hero. The real Sam Dreben was yet to appear.

He appeared first in 1912 when the troops of General Campa, rebel leader in the uprising against Francesco Madero, were falling back before the Federal forces after a desperate fight near Parral, Mexico. In that makeshift outfit of rebel snipers, this paid soldier of another land, fighting for a cause that at best was but vague in his mind, shone out like a patriot god. Almost single-handed, he won the encounter. Omitting preliminaries, let Captain Archer tell the story of the exploit:

"Gen. Campa and Gen. Salazar," he writes, "had surrounded the city, planted their artillery ready for a bombardment and had demanded the town's surrender. The demand had been summarily refused. Federal troops had marched out against the rebels. Gen. Francisco Villa, one of the Government leaders, had begun an enveloping movement, and had all but flanked the revolutionists before they discovered their plight. Retreat had been sounded. The Federals pressed forward to victory. The retreat threatened to become a rout; Gen. Campa's eighteen - year - old son was shot dead at his side. Suddenly, the morale of the rebels collapsed. They turned and fled in panic. Everything seemed lost.

"But there was one figure that remained like a rock against this victorious charge. A short, stout little man sat on a machine gun in front of General Campa's carefully planted artillery. This was Sam Dreben, the Fighting Jew.

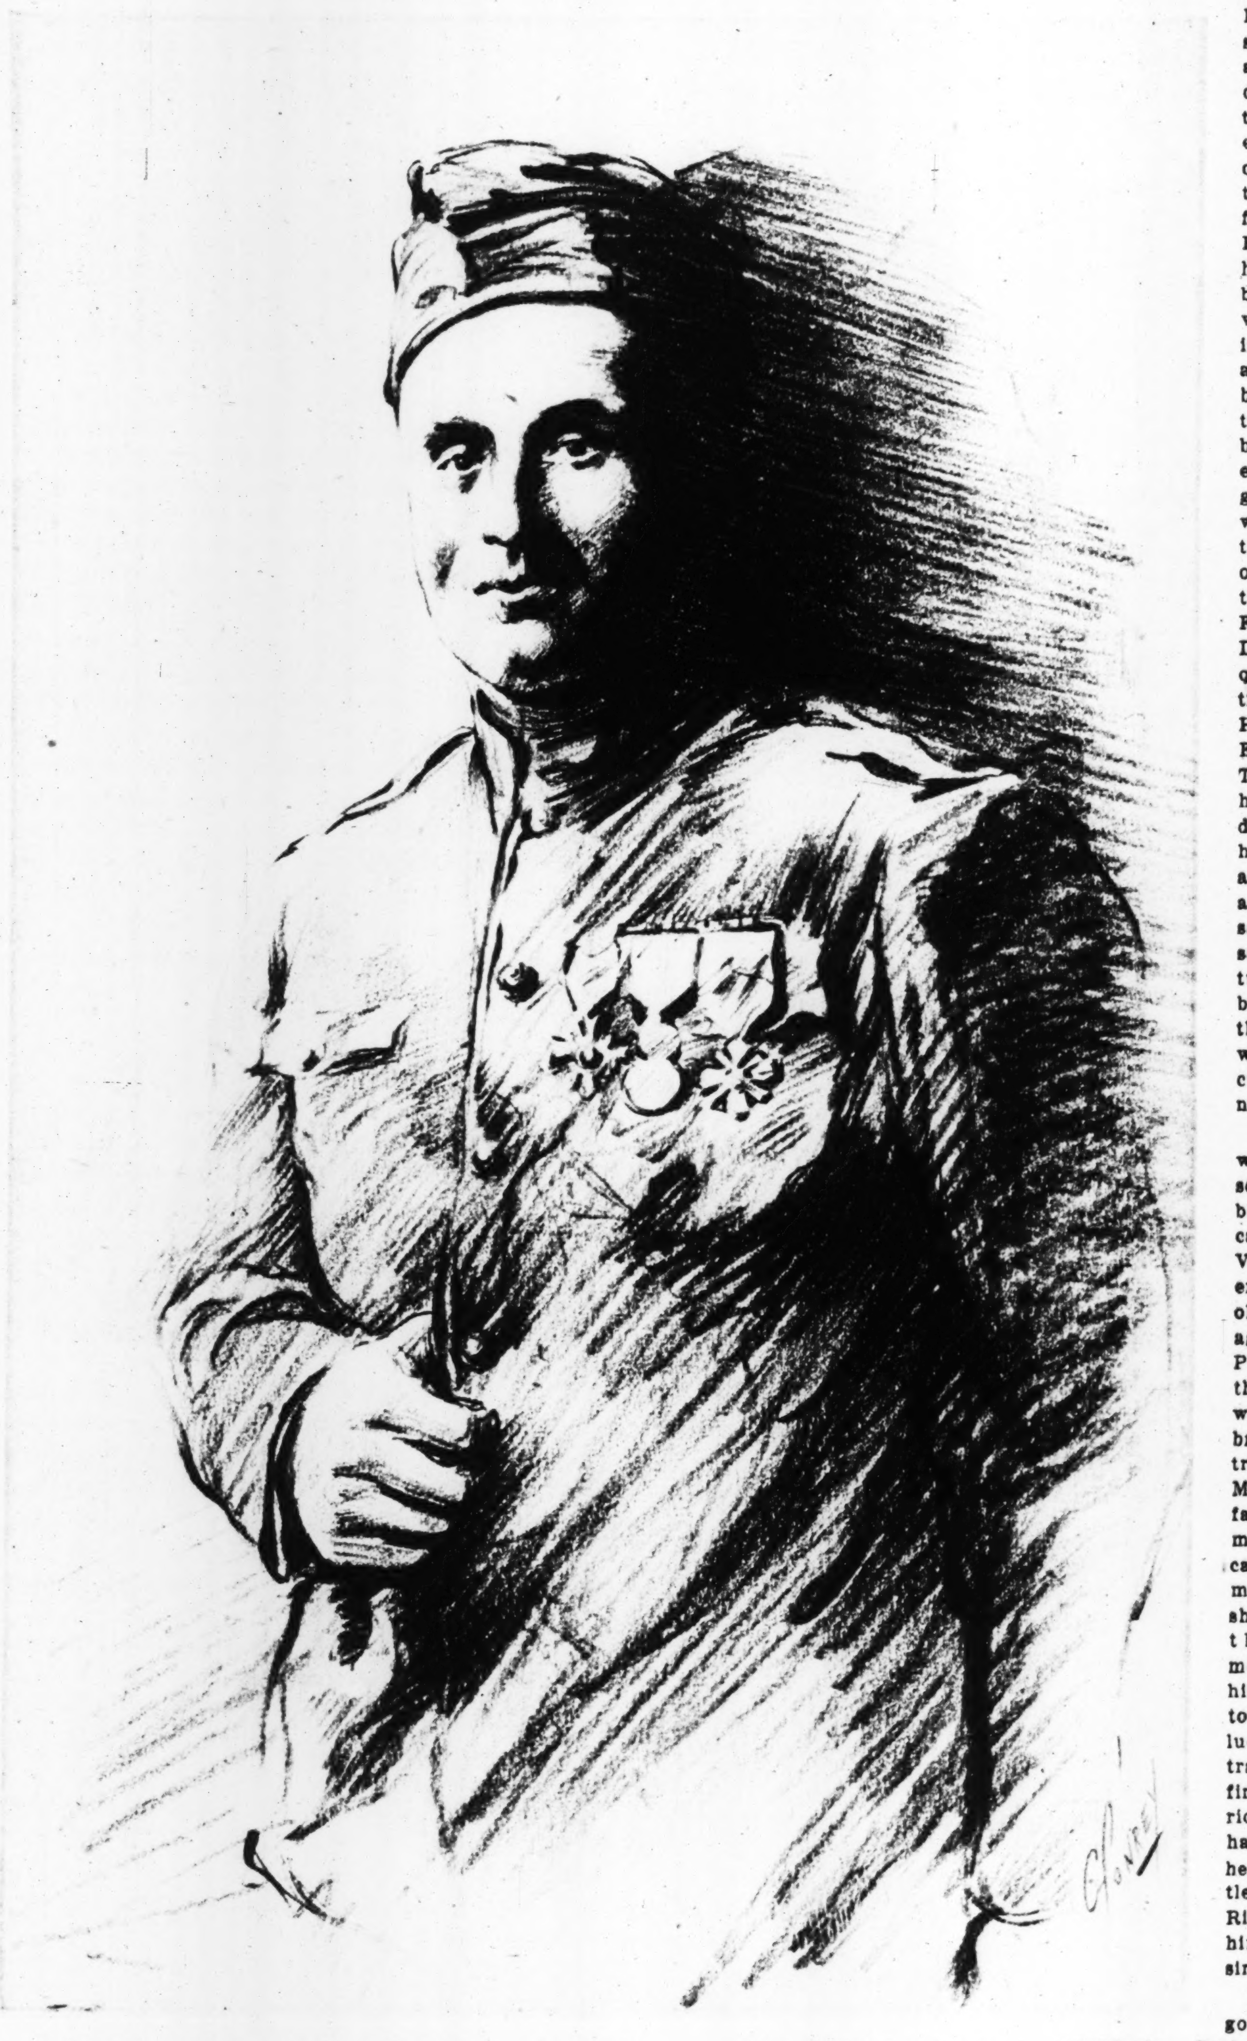
"Past him to the rear raced his own infantry, but Sam was not disturbed. One by one his own gunners joined the race for safety, but still Sam stayed on, swinging his own machine gun from side to side, pouring a hail of bullets into the enemy. He was quiet, calm, and Jack Zimmerman, one of the last to remain at his side, was authority for the statement that his voice was as soft and gentle as always when he said:

" 'Go, Jack, while there's time. I can hold them a little longer.'

"Here and there a Mexican stopped in his flight; soon these men were carrying to the rear machine guns, were hurrying other pieces of precious rebel artillery to the rear, under cover of the deadly, vicious fire from the Fighting Jew's single, lethal gun. Twice bullets nipped the flesh of this soldier of fortune, but the flow of blood did not even give a ripple of unsteadiness to the leaden hail from his hand.

"ALL this time, the Federals kept up an unceasing fire against the American; but finally night put an end to the uneven struggle, and the Fighting Jew packed up his machine gun, caught a riderless horse in a gully, and with a wounded comrade rode twenty miles to safety."

During that revolution there were other adventures for Dreben and almost miraculous escapes—one from a firing squad. After the Parral fight, the rebel forces retired to Jiminez to reorganize. When the reorganization was complete, Sam found himself a Colonel in command of a regiment of cavalry made up of Rurales and cowboys. Probably he did all that any Colonel could have done with such an outfit, but in the series of battles which followed around Torreon and Durango the tide went against the rebels and they retired to Hacienda de la Refugio. There he and his two friends, Tracy Richardson and Jack Zimmerman, were thrown into prison. Richardson and Zimmerman also were American soldiers of fortune fighting with the rebel forces of General Campa.



Sam Dreben.

IT may have been that Campa wanted to saddle on the Americans the blame for his recent defeats, Captain Archer observes, or it may have been simply an expression of his hate for all Americans, but at any rate his excuse was that Dreben had insulted a Mexican woman. The narrative continues:

"All night the three Americans sat in a dirty little cell, under guard. At dawn they were marched into the courtyard and told that they were to be shot. Side by side they were lined up against the stone wall. The firing squad drew up. An Indian officer, reputed to have killed many prisoners with his own hand, leered at them through the rising light of dawn. Sam Dreben stood there quietly, fingering a bit of string between his pudgy fingers.

" 'Listen, General, even if you think I have insulted a woman,' he said, softly, 'that's no reason why Richardson and Zimmerman should die. What have they done?'

"Campa snarled and cursed all Americans. Sam spread his hands. But something in his manner, some fearless, indefinable thing saved his life. Several Mexican officers stepped forward. They threatened to arrest General Campa and take him before the supreme rebel leaders, Salazar and Orozco, if he persisted in the execution. They were led by Major Zapata, a good and capable soldier. The enraged Campa appeared to be about to order his ready troops to fire upon the mutineers. Dreben stood quietly, gravely twisting his fingers. Zapata, with eyes of fire, stared Campa down. Abruptly, Campa ordered the killing off, but as the firing squad shuffled away, he shouted that the Americans must leave his command.

" 'Honest?' queried Dreben. 'Well, I was quitting anyway. You are a coward. I hope never to fight in the same army with you again.'

THAT night Dreben and five other officers rode out of camp and set off to Bermejillo in search of General Orozco, another rebel leader. They blundered into a Federal camp from which they barely managed to escape with their lives, learned Orozco had been beaten and was 600 miles away and that the country between them and the safety of the United States border swarmed with Federal troops. It was only Dreben's familiarity with that rugged country, it seems, which enabled them finally to detour around the hostile camps and reach El Paso.

"For a time the business of war seemed in the doldrums," Captain Archer's story continues. "Dreben lingered about El Paso, with scores of soldiers of fortune, and spies for half a dozen factions in the seething southern republic. Then, one day, there came to him an emissary from the infamous Pancho Villa, who had formerly been a bandit chief, but was now a General in the Government armies. Would Dreben undertake for the General? Dreben would—whether he knew or guessed that Villa was even then getting ready for his own drive toward the dictatorship. For some months Dreben worked quietly at his new trade of gun-runner. He lounged about El Paso, and even Tracy Richardson, his old-time friend, did not know that he was enjoying anything more than a vacation. Yet they say he made and saved a small fortune. Samuel Dreben began to think that after all he was quite probably cut out for a business career.

"But again the war teapot to the south began to bubble and boil. Huerta came into power. Villa led a considerable part of the old Federal army against the new President. He began the half guerilla warfare that was to bring United States troops once more to Mexican soil. Many factions were in the market for American guns and ammunition. The shrewd Dreben in this short few months had gotten himself in a position to take toll of this lucrative, secret trade; he had his fingers on potential riches. Still the haunting, if unheard, sounds of battle from over the Rio Grande were for him the voice of a siren.

"Suddenly, Dreben decided; he chucked the business of selling guns to go over and handle one for Villa. The United States, fearing trouble, started mobilization of troops on the Mexican border; and across the line to these American soldiers, most of whom knew Dreben either personally or by reputation, came stories of valor and prowess, exceptional even for the Fighting Jew. At Bachima Pass, to mention just one tale, Samuel Dreben, again astride his famous weapon, the machine gun, sat alone in a mountain pass and held back the Huerta forces, after they had routed and thrown into full flight the troops of Villa. Behind the shelter of this single well-placed valorously handled death dealer, the Villistas were able to reform and to snatch victory from dire defeat.

"WHETHER these feats were the reason or not, the fact is that when Villa at last overthrew Huerta, Dreben came back to business in El Paso as the former's American agent. Again the money stream began to flow around him. Green Monster copper was selling at 75 cents a share and Dreben, with uncanny prescience, took the money he had amassed selling arms and bought thousands of shares. The stock soared like a rocket and when it reached $8 a share, he sold out. His profit was estimated to be somewhere in the neighborhood of half a million dollars. Half a million! No more war for Samuel Dreben.

"He summoned all his friends—soldiers of fortune, filibusters, American army men, and a few Mexican Generals—to a banquet at the Sheldon Hotel in El Paso. Haltingly, but with shining eyes, the diffident little man, his round face red as a schoolboy's, confessed that he was through with the wars forever. He was, he said, going to marry and settle down.

"And he did. He invested his money wisely and carried on the routine of wealth nursing as cleverly as ever he sent bullets into a hostile, advancing host. There were even those who said he became smug and conventional in extreme—one of Mr. Lewis' Babbitts. . . . His friends said, 'Oh, you'll hear the call again some day, and you'll go. Wait till the soldiers march by your house.' And the once Fighting Jew only laughed and put an affectionate arm about his young wife.

"BUT the irresponsible Pancho Villa, still warring about Mexico, one night carried his raids across the border to Columbus, N. M., murdering more than twenty men, women and children. The border and the Nation flamed, and sober men talked of a war of reprisal. Sam Dreben's old fighting instinct stirred in his heart, and when General Pershing led the punitive expedition into Mexico, who was in the fore of the greatest manhunt but the Fighting Jew? There had been the old struggle, and in the end war had won.

"Samuel Dreben knew every foot of the State of Chihuahua, through which the fleeing Villistas sought to escape the Americans. Few doubt that General Pershing's high praise of Dreben in later days was based in no small measure on the aid he gave the General in Mexico. When the Villistas were caught and soundly whipped at Colonia Dublan and Colonia Jaurez, Dreben played a master soldier's part.

"This justice done, then Dreben returned again to his counting house. This time, he was really through. He was even, on occasion, apologetic. Yes, he knew he had gone back on his old resolve, he had left his home and his wealth—but then that Villa, the scoundrel, had killed women and children. That was the only thing that really made him fare forth to war again; but it was for the last time. Why, it was time; he was nearly forty! Time and time again, Samuel Dreben repeated this curious little ritual to his border friends. His insistence was even a little comic—like the repetition of laugh-getting tag words in a vaudeville act.

"And then America entered the World War.

"Once more, there was no hesitation on the part of the Fighting Jew. Resolutely he put his affairs in such order as he could, and went down and enlisted as a private in the First Texas Infantry, then the National Guard of the Lone Star State. They talked of having him apply for a commission, but the prospect did not appear to interest the gentle, quiet little man who had been a soldier since before most of the A. E. F. were born. . . .

"FOR days a German machine gun nest near St. Etienne had been menacing the American line in France. It was so cleverly and advantageously placed that artillery fire had failed again and again to blot it out. Sergeant Sam Dreben had watched all this; already he had earned the respect of 'his boys.' Already, he had been decorated by the Governments of half the Allies. On parade, his breast looked like a chain in a medal collector's exhibition. One day he stepped up before his company. He called for volunteers to go over and wipe out that German menace. He did it as quietly as an ordinary man orders a dinner, and as simply did thirty men step out, ready to follow him to what seemed almost certain death.

"Out across No Man's Land went the Fighting Jew. Perhaps, when a man has warred for many years, bullets learn to respect him and leave him alone. At any rate, Sam Dreben that day scotched the machine gun nest. Single-handed, so the record goes, he slew twenty-three of the forty Germans who were killed before that job was done; and so cleverly did he plan the attack that not one of his own men was so much as scratched. For this miracle, General Pershing himself pinned on Sam's breast the Distinguished Service Cross.

"But if bullets spared Sam Dreben, malign fate did not. He went to see a doctor for some apparently minor ailment in Hollywood, a couple of years ago. He collapsed, and was rushed to a bed. Next day he died. And throughout the world, thousands of brave and gallant fighting men mourned the passing of a very splendid gentleman, who never struck a friend or foe in anger, who never 'crossed' a single human to gain advantage, and who all his life looked on death with a smile."

Perils of Reducing Fads

Taking Off More Than One or Two Pounds a Week Is a Menace to Health, Says American Medical Association.

IT is one thing to reduce moderately, says the American Medical Association, and quite another thing to change from an over-weight woman into a slender, boyish flapper in the course of a few days or weeks. The one may be attended by no harmful results. The other is more than likely to result in broken health or even death.

Alarmed by the ravages of the craze for taking off weight and aroused by the celerity with which "get-thin-quick" fakers have exploited that craze, the association has thus declared war on the self-styled "dietetic experts" and set about to warn the would-be butterflies of their danger. Fixing a stony glare upon the quacks, it comes out with the solemn declaration that any reducing method which guarantees to take off more than a pound or two a week is hazardous and that its exponents should be regarded with grave suspicion.

Denouncing the faddists and their panaceas for obesity which are foisted upon the public by every known advertising medium from newspapers to billboards, the medical society, through its official organ, the Journal, points out that the country has been flooded with "health" foods which are not healthful, with "reducing foods" which do not reduce, and with reducing exercises which, instead of reducing, actually induce additional weight. Three-fourths of these panaceas, asserts the Journal after an exhaustive survey, are bunk and worse. "Let them alone," it advises. "There is no reducing method which can produce a quick and radical change in the female figure without impairing the health and thus defeating the purpose the subject seeks to accomplish—beauty."

Members of the association, which is the largest medical society in America, make no official estimate of the number of women and girls marring their beauty and endangering themselves by resorting to get-thin doctors, but unofficial estimates place the number at well into the millions. The conspicuous cases of Anna Fitziu and Estelle Taylor are cited as representative of thousands of others.

Miss Fitziu, who was graduated from musical comedy to grand opera and who in recent years has been a member of the Chicago Civic Opera Company, felt that her work and attractiveness were being impaired by her increasing tendency to stoutness. She took up the reducing fad. At the outset she was a vigorous woman in fine health. She applied herself night and day to the business of getting thin rapidly and in the course of three months she took off about thirty pounds. Then she collapsed and spent the next three months in a Chicago hospital.

Her health was broken and her beauty impaired far more than it had ever been impaired by superfluous flesh. Instead of "Get thin quickly," her new slogan was "Never again." When she was dismissed from the hospital she took up her regular mode of eating, but her digestion had been so disarranged by her reducing practices that there was a second collapse and she was again in the hospital. She is now struggling back to normal, a slow and painful process, thoroughly disillusioned on reducing.

ESTELLE TAYLOR, the motion picture actress wife of Jack Dempsey, has been under treatment several months for what is called "nervous prostration." Her condition was so serious that Dempsey asked for a postponement of his championship fight with Gene Tunney. From Los Angeles comes this explanation of her "nervous prostration."

"One of the causes of her illness," says the statement, "is dieting for several years to retain the slim figure and slight weight demanded of movie actresses under contract."

Indeed, the reducing fad has become so serious and the exploitation of the public by "dieticians" so flagrant that even the Government has felt it necessary to issue a warning. Here is an excerpt from a statement from the Department of Agriculture:

"In view of the wide spread of literature and advice of so-called 'diet experts' it seems advisable to warn people against the dietary recommendations of those without real scientific standing in the community. Some of the advocates of freak diets are sincere, but are, themselves, deluded. Others are fakers who seek monetary gain by advising peculiar systems of diet. Neither class can offer trustworthy advice. In most of the recommendations of these self-established experts there is hardly a shadow of reason, though they may seem plausible.

"If the deductions of many food faddists, accepted as facts, were really operative, it would be difficult to explain how the human race had survived. The race would have expired soon after man had progressed enough in intelligence to exercise choice in diet and cook his food. The contrary holds true. Civilization advanced from the time man began to cook and prepare his food."

The American Medical Association, taking up the fight on the fakers, does not come out flatly and say that it is impossible to reduce safely. It can be done safely if it is done slowly and cautiously. The point the association especially endeavors to drive home is that there is no panacea for getting thin which anybody and everybody may safely follow. Different types respond in different ways to the same remedies, and there is no standard type in which the physique of women naturally reveals itself. Take, for instance, two women of exactly the same height, say, 5 feet 4 inches. Their bone structure may be so different as to involve a difference of 20 or 25 pounds in normal weight. Obviously, it is pointed out, the woman of the heavier type cannot expect to cut down her weight to conform to the standard of the one with the lighter bone structure. And there are women of naturally fleshy type who cannot expect to pass from that into a slender type without danger.

The commonest cause for wanting to reduce, authorities believe, is the universal feminine desire to be beautiful. In their unthinking search for beauty, however, members of the association are led to believe, many women forget that slenderness is not the only characteristic of beauty and that in obtaining the much desired boyish form they bring about other changes which militate still more against good looks.

Under no circumstances, one member of the recent Adult Weight Conference called by the association points out, should a woman attempt to reduce without a thorough medical examination and periodic visits to a reputable physician. It may indeed be a temporary blow to her vanity, but if her constitution is in no condition to stand the strain of controlling her weight, it is far more prudent, this member believes, for her to keep her health along with her excess weight than it is for her to lose both health and weight at one stroke and to bring about such a state of affairs that she may never have children.

Doctor Thomas D. Wood, official physician and professor of physical education at Columbia University, recently described the method by means of which a woman patient lost 40 pounds under his supervision. Dr. Wood was a member of the Adult Weight Conference and his methods have met no serious objection at the hands of those colleagues associated with him in the nation-wide organization. While he prescribed walking and a few light exercises for the patient under his charge, his prescription involved none of the heavy exercise of rolling which is characteristic of the more spectacular reducing methods. Nor any of the strenuous gymnasium exercises to which stout women submitted with the vision of a sylph-like form ever before their eyes.

The patient, according to Dr. Wood, weighed 188 and wished to bring her weight down considerably. She had previously attempted methods of her own but to no lasting avail. She was told to weigh herself once a week and not more often. She was told that she should not lose more than one or two pounds a week at the most. She was told she would have to abstain from sweets, which she did, except during the Christmas holidays. She was told to bring the doctor an accurate estimate of the food she ate at each meal so that he could better comprehend the amount of nourishment she was taking. All of these things she did. As a result she lost 40 pounds, not in one or two weeks, but in seven months. And she stopped where most women would have thought of starting.

AUTHORITIES of the association are not certain whether the change in women's dress is responsible for the craze to reduce or whether the craze is responsible for the present boyish trend in fashions. Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal, claims that fashions had advanced greatly from a hygienic point of view, having eliminated the corset and other such impediments to healthful living, before women began to insist upon the straight lines of the male.

Men and women, the association finds, do not stop to think whether it is wise or safe to take off flesh. In their desire for the boyish form and the barber pole figure, women especially have failed to heed the consequences. Women have pounded and rolled, dieted and drugged themselves and submitted themselves to countless other tortures all for the sake of beauty. If death, not beauty, comes as the result of their unguided efforts or the suggestions of quacks, the legitimate practitioners wish to be absolved of the responsibility.

Dr. Fishbein sums up the situation in the Journal as follows:

"We are a people singularly cursed with faddists," he writes. "We have educational cults, healing cults and religious cults, and Heaven knows how many queer promotional systems. We have dietary faddists who believe that the eating of more white bread, more wheat, more fruit or raisins, is necessary to healthful living.

"THE time has come for calling a halt to the growing processions of slogans that tend to promote a panacea for health and well being. We are admonished at every turn to eat more bread, drink more milk, buy more raisins, eat more apples. We are instructed to confine ourselves to whole wheat, to try some bran, or add one or another of a dozen different items to our daily regimen.

"Before modern science developed our present knowledge of calories and vitamins, of exercise and massage, consideration of the body weight was a simple matter. A woman in those days was either fat or slim, and that was all there was to it. The one successful career that was open to her was a permanent marriage.

"Then came the exploiting of nostrums of varying efficiency for obesity. Phonograph records and the radio spouted systematic tunes to which women rolled or somersaulted on the floor. Retired pugilists became the consultants of ladies of fashion. They embarked on careers of rope jumping and weight lifting.

"There seems to have come upon the women of America a veritable craze for reduction which has passed the bounds of normality and driven women and young girls to a type of self mutilation impossible to explain on any other basis than that of faddism of the mob. How is one to understand the regurgitation of food after eating, a system commonly used by the girls in our large cities?

"Of all the fads, none seems more difficult of explanation than the craze for slenderizing. It seems an attempt of women to adapt themselves to the ready-made garments offered in the shops. It is no new thing to psychologists to see either men or women adapting their bodies to unreasonable fads. There is compression of the feet by Chinese women, pressing the heads by the Flat Head Indians, mutilation of the nostrils and ears by the savages of Africa and over development of the breast by the Hottentots."

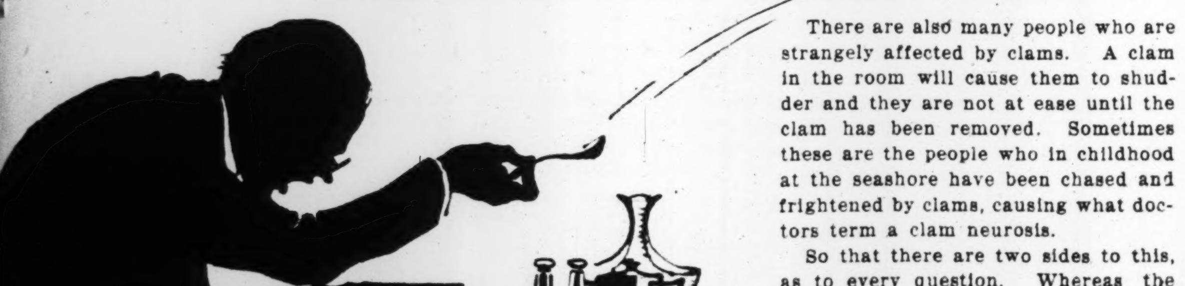
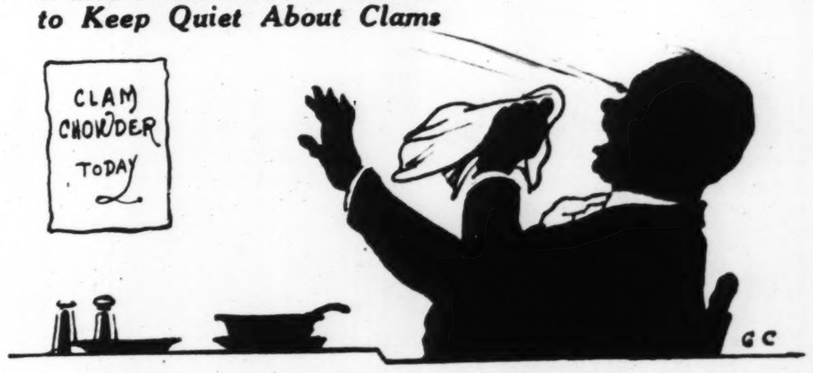
SULLIVAN ON SOUP

Warns Presidential Candidate to Keep Quiet About Clams





A MAN went into a restaurant in New York and ordered clam chowder. He claims he fished around in the chowder for quite a while without success. He says there was chowder, but no clams. He called the proprietor, told him of the absence of the clams and refused to pay for the chowder. The proprietor resented this and bit the customer on the nose. The case was taken to court. The magistrate, a man who had decided many a tough case in his day, was baffled. He couldn't say whether a chowder is a chowder if it contains no clams.

There the situation rests unless, as this was written, the plaintiff has taken the case to the United States Supreme Court.

He represents one side of the chowder problem. He is the protagonist of the pro-clam element, by no means a negligible portion of the population. No candidate for the Presidency can afford to offend the pro-clam faction, for the ranks of both the major parties are well-sprinkled with its adherents.

On the other hand, there is the anti-clam crowd; the group that would be just as well satisfied if clams were left out of chowder. These comprise mainly people who have suffered broken teeth when, on eating clam chowder, they suddenly got a piece of clam shell by mistake.

There are also many people who are strangely affected by clams. A clam in the room will cause them to shudder and they are not at ease until the clam has been removed. Sometimes these are the people who in childhood at the seashore have been chased and frightened by clams, causing what doctors term a clam neurosis.

So that there are two sides to this, as to every question. Whereas the plaintiff in the suit referred to was affected by the absence of clams in his chowder, there are plenty of people who would be just as much affected by the presence of clams. The chowder being served, these people bend very low over the bowl and spend half an hour or an hour searching around in it for stray bits of clam, which, when unearthed, they lift hastily from the chowder and fling from them with a vast deal of abhorrence. These bits of flung clam travel at an amazing rate of speed and when a diner at an opposite end of the room is struck by one of them, he is often at a loss to understand what has hit him, unless he is in the know.

Some restaurants employ special minions whose duty it is to carefully watch eaters of clam chowder and catch deftly in a sort of butterfly net all the pieces of clam the anti-clamites may fling. These beaters acquire a great dexterity in catching bits of clam and are considered a real asset to a restaurant since they often attract crowds of people who are as much interested in watching them catch bits of clams as they are in eating.

These beaters are allowed to keep all the pieces of flung clam and, after deducting a pound or so for their own use, if they happen to be fond of clam chowder, they sell the rest to the clam people, who try to piece the various bits together until a whole clam is constructed.

It is still a problem, however, and no matter how eagerly an anti-clam person may strive to rid his chowder of the obnoxious shellfish, he is never quite sure that it is entirely free of them. The solution of course would be to make the chowder without the clam, but as any ardent chowder fan will tell you, half the game is in the uncertainty, the gamble; and that if he knew the chowder had never seen a clam, even the most fanatical anti-clamite would somehow find eating chowder a dull game.

Clam chowder is an uncertain victual at best, like vegetable soup, the various stews, chicken salad and the proverbial hash. If honest restaurateurs would file a schedule with each dish of chowder, stating truthfully the nature and number of the various ingredients contained in it, a great deal of confusion and worry might be avoided.

The safest thing is to order a clear soup; one whose bottom you can see at all times.

Yes, the best soup is undoubtedly a clear soup, with possibly one oyster of unquestioned integrity floating about in it. Be sure of your oyster. Some oysters have a smooth, disarming way of injecting themselves into a clear soup, and the result is only too often confusion. The eater of the soup, seeking to impale the oyster upon spoon or fork, finds the creature scampering about the plate with a mischievousness that amounts to malice. An oyster who is not willing to play the game should not seek to enter soup. The diner fails to impale the oyster. He loses his temper, and abandons the soup, whereupon the oyster leaves the soup to seek fresh diners whom he may torment. This is all wrong and there should be a law against it. FRANK SULLIVAN.

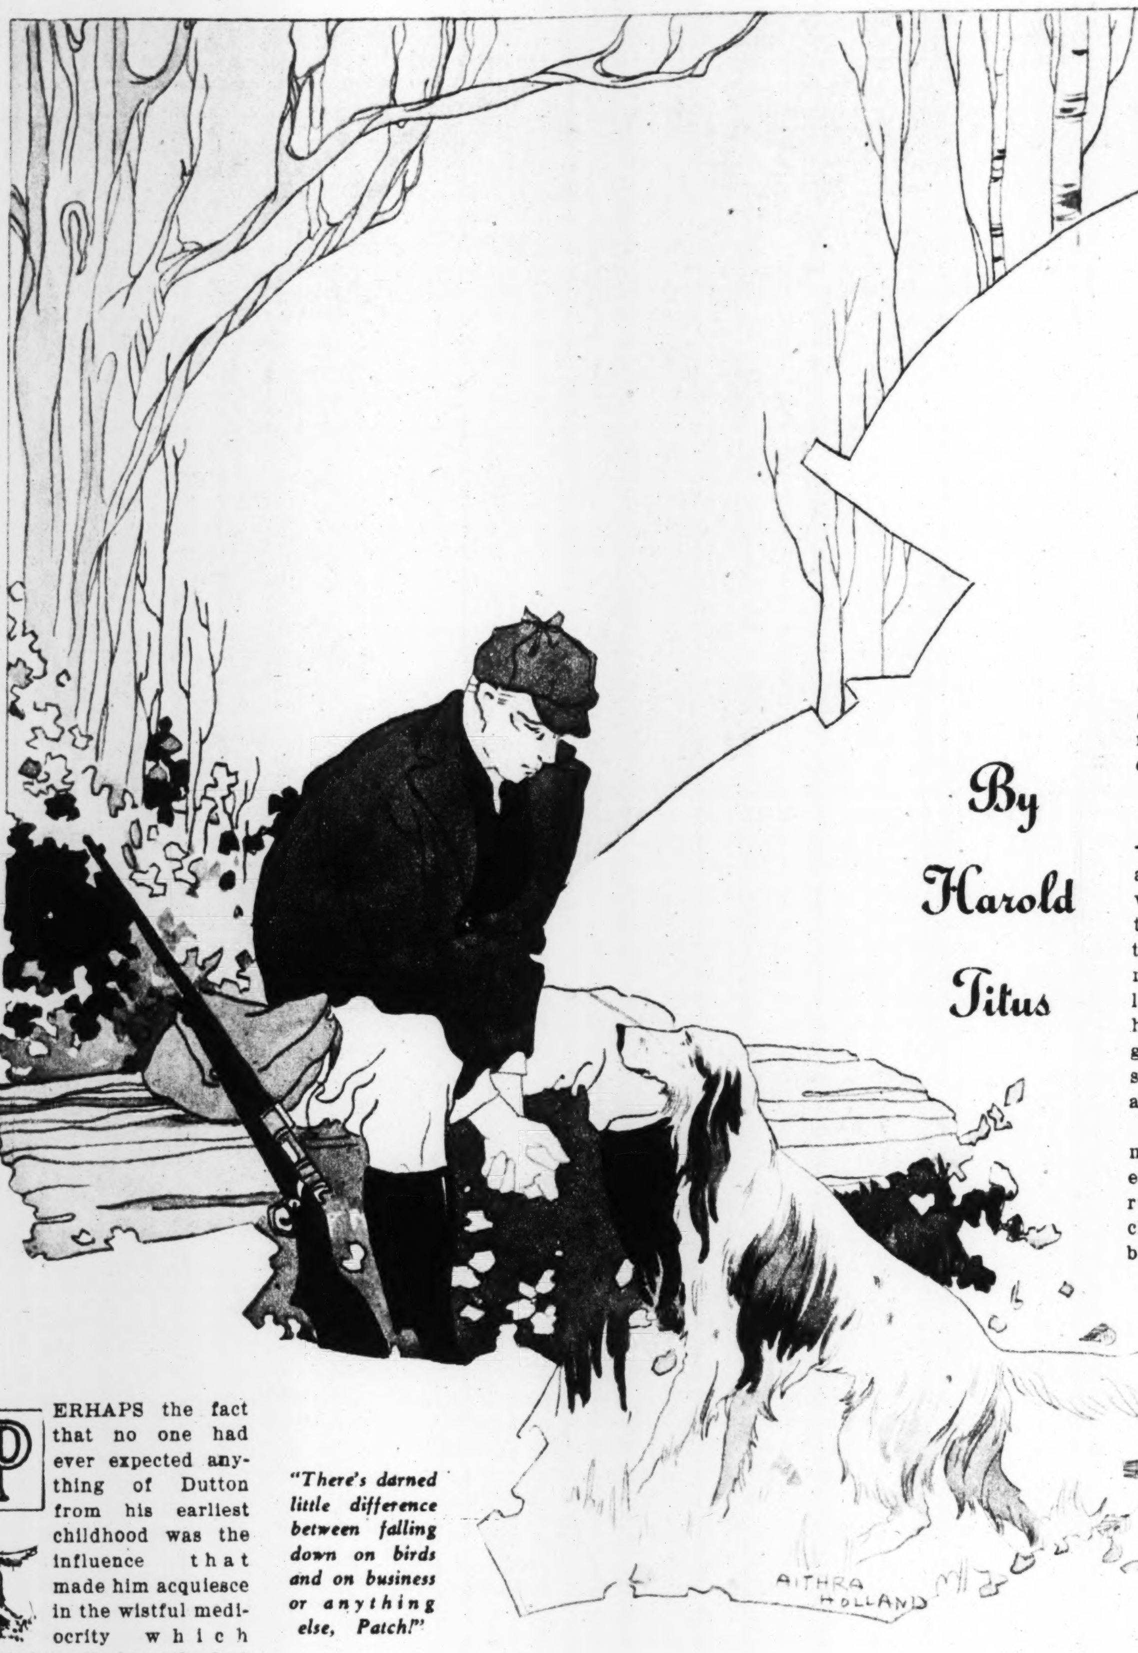
THE IRON JAW

By Harold Titus



"There's darned little difference between falling down on birds and on business or anything else, Patch!"

PERHAPS the fact that no one had ever expected anything of Dutton from his earliest childhood was the influence that made him acquiesce in the wistful mediocrity which seemed to be his lot. Perhaps the fact that he never had summoned the courage necessary to face life and himself squarely and decisively was the characteristic which made people expect nothing of him.

The exact reason, however, is of secondary consequence. Dutton was a failure. He had slipped past or around the hard things of life, had evaded and procrastinated and taken the easiest way, and now, at thirty-five, he seemed to have settled into the habit of failing without protest.

He had had many chances to try his wings. He was charming, in his quiet way, and people liked to have him about and liked to do things for him; and he was so well-intentioned and so chagrined when his shortcomings became apparent that no one could ever be other than sympathetic.

At the university, he slipped along, avoiding the big struggles and accepting the negligible triumphs which come to those of faint heart. After his degree was acquired, his uncle, to do the right thing by the boy, took him into the factory office where Dutton's father had labored and died for the partnership.

WHEN the girl turned him down, Dutton hid the hurt and put away the small, reproaching voice which whispered that one moment of positiveness, one word of high resolve, one gesture of assurance, would have laid his life in another pattern. He lived alone with the old family housekeeper, joined a club, and at first went there frequently; but as he grew older and saw how far behind he was being left by other men, he became self-conscious, and began keeping more to himself.

When he did show up at the club the other regulars always made it a point to drag him into whatever was going on, but he felt that this was done only because men were naturally great-hearted. He had many friends and no companions, and these tenuous associations became more blurred as he entered his thirties and approached middle age a decade before his time.

When the uncle lay dying and called him for a grim farewell, Dutton said that he would do his best to keep the firm at its high standing, but that he was aware of his limitations. The old man gave him a sorrowing look which plainly indicated his fear that things might go to pot under Dutton's indecisive direction.

Things did go pretty much to pot, as it turned out; and now, on this November afternoon, Dutton sat listening to the Youngest Creditor. "Don't think anybody blames you, Dutton," he was saying, and the rest nodded assent. "You've done your best." Dutton winced as much at the generosity in this as at the weakness the words implied. "But it seems to be up to you either to buy the Wycliff people or to sell. You can't compete with them longer, as we all agree. The price they want for their plant seems fair, but they don't think enough of this property to let you out with anything to show for your pains.

"There's a good future in leather belting. The business was left to you, Dutton, and you're the one to decide. If you buy, it's going to take a mighty tough program of refinancing, and it'll be some job to convince the Old Fort National that you're deserving of the necessary line. If you sell you'll be rid of a big fight, but . . . that's about all." He shrugged significantly.

"You have until the first of December to give the Wycliff crowd an answer. Somebody with vim and pep, somebody who is fresh and who has—well, an iron jaw, could put this thing through.

"The thing for you to do, Dutton, is to get away for a few days where you can think this over. Perhaps a rest will give you the steam to go on with the job. You used to go North grouse shooting, didn't you?"

Dutton, rather bewildered by this tolerance, said that he had been going to Tidd's for years, but he hadn't planned on it this fall, because——

"Forget that!" broke in the Largest Creditor. "Lord knows you've done your best to protect us. You dig out and freshen up, now. Then come back and give us your answer."

"That's the ticket!" exclaimed the Oldest Creditor. "Go off and forget things. At the worst we won't lose much, while you stand to lose about all you have, unless this consolidation can be put through."

THEY all shook hands with him sympathetically, just as others had always accepted his failures. They were anticipating failure again. They all knew what his answer would be, and they were ready to accept it.

Dutton sat down when they had gone, and a lump rose in his throat. They were all such darned good fellows! Losing money for men of that sort! Why couldn't he make a go of things, anyhow?

He ruminated on the goodness of people in general; but the words of the Youngest Creditor were like yeast, fermenting rapidly: "Somebody with vim and pep . . . somebody who has an iron jaw." He repeated the words, and shook his head dolefully.

Then he arose and walked to the window. Across the upper half was a black-backed gold sign which made a dark mirror for his face. He inspected his reflection; his slightly bald head, his round blue eyes, and the gentle chin which seemed ready to acquiesce to any fate—a prosaic, kindly old face . . . Old? He was only thirty-five, and should just be hitting his stride now; but he had used everything at his command and was going backward.

For the first time he saw himself as the chief actor in a tragedy of failure, with an audience made up of friends and associates all sympathising with him. No one ever had had any confidence in him, and he had no confidence in himself, either; and now the lack of it was so significant, the chance of ever summoning it so remote that he wanted to crawl off where there were fewer people to show that they felt sorry for him. It wasn't right, in one way; but these men had urged it. . . .

GO off and think it over? What was there to think over? He knew what he would do; he would take the easiest way because, by doing the other, he might turn the small losses of these fine fellows into big losses.

An hour later he closed his desk and went into the outer office.

"Billings," he said, to the chief clerk, "I'm going to Tidd's tomorrow. There's nothing I can do to help here, and I might as well. Good-by."

Every man who walks and breathes must have at least one passion; and every human being must have something on which to lavish his affection.

Dutton's passion—or as near a passion as so mild a man could have—was grouse-hunting, and the object of his affection was his old setter, Patch; and he came by both because a friend was sorry for him.

One night at the club, several years before, Dutton stood watching a bridge game wistfully, when a man named McHenry came prowling through the rooms. He was worried, but at sight of Dutton his face showed a sudden inspiration.

"Dut, old fellow, don't you ever shoot?" he asked.

"Not much," said Dutton, embarrassed by this unwonted attention. "Don't go in for sport."

"Lord, man, and you're getting bald! You haven't started to live. Now, listen."

One of McHenry's party could not start at the week-end for a shooting trip, and Dutton must take his place. He could guarantee a good time, and if Old Dut had never pulled a trigger on a ruffed grouse he had missed all the real thrills of living.

That was the start. Dutton went, and the trip marked a great change in his life. In the first place, it gave him two weeks in the close company of other men, gave him a sense of again belonging to someone, some group, which he had not felt in years.

Secondly, it introduced him to Tidd's. The Tidds were personages, and their establishment was more than a resort for hunters and fishermen; it was an institution, an influence. Mr. Tidd was so sweet, so gentle, so glad to have people come there to his place on the rushing Manistee; his eyes would sparkle so highly when his summer patrons came in with heavy creels of trout or his autumn guests with coats bulging birds, and his tender mouth would show such genuine concern when the luck was bad!

AND, thirdly, there were the grouse. For one who had never known the tensing of the throat as the dog settles to a point, whose heart has not leaped to the thunder of wings as the bird takes flight, the statement means nothing; he has missed a part of his living, as McHenry assured Dutton he had. But for him who knows the grouse, there surely will be an understanding of Dutton's first adventure afield.

Of course, he did not shoot. Beginners never shoot. He jumped whenever a bird rocketed out with his rumble of defiance. Inarticulate exclamations of wonder and admiration broke from him as he watched the luck of his companions, never realizing that he himself carried a gun and was there to kill! The grouse does that to men, and to keener men than Dutton had ever learned to be.

But there was something of the sporting aristocrat in Old Dut beneath his futility, and those days set a virus in his blood. His delight was so simple, his wonder at the cunning of the birds so naive that he was taken again the second and the third year with McHenry and his friends. It gave him something to talk about when he was with men, gave him something to think about as he sat before the fire in his house, alone with his failures and, later, with Patch.

He took to reading sporting magazines. He informed himself on guns, on ammunition, on outdoor clothing, and he read all that ornithology could give him about ruffed grouse. Ah, there was a bird! he told himself. So wary, so quick, so resourceful. No other bird could cheat men and dogs as he; no other life that wore feathers could clear out with such speed when danger threatened. No other wing could whir at such curves and angles, no other eye could select tree or stump or bush which would line up with the gun and give him the saving instant of protection. And their bodies were so clean and fine, with the rich browns and black and gray of feathers, the clear white of flesh; sweet-smelling, always.

McHenry went away, called East by an offer he could not well refuse.

"I want you to take the dog, Dut," he said gravely. "He's a clinker, and I know you'll treat him as a gentleman should be treated. Money wouldn't buy him from me; but I do want you to favor me by taking him."

Dutton protested, of course. Patch was a wonder, a hundred per cent bird dog. He had nose and disposition and experience, and was as near human as a quadruped can be. He was a prize to own, and Dutton felt unworthy of such a gift, but his protests were swept aside.

There began a new era in the quiet house. A soft, warm bed was made in the furnace room, but Patch slept in an upholstered chair in the library. The housekeeper mumbled because white hairs were everywhere, but she, too, was sorry for Dutton, and when she saw what a wonderful companion the dog made for him she ceased her complaints.

Never before had Dutton known such a luxury. He had something to give Patch which the affectionate setter needed, and the dog repaid him with a love and devotion that were unflagging.

DUTTON gave up his club, and every evening they were in town, fair or stormy, the two walked the back streets, dog at heel after his first moments of high-lifed racing along sidewalks. After the stroll they would sit together and talk for a time, Dutton conversing with words and the dog carrying his end by wavings of his finely feathered tail and with looks from his eloquent brown eyes. And when they had finished this nightly visit, Dutton read and Patch stretched at his feet, lifting his head up now and then for a look at his master, and then flinging himself down with a contented sigh and a happy flop of his tail.

Dutton and Patch became well known at Tidd's. The dog was petted and admired, and Dutton was consulted by the first-year men because he knew every foot of the country for miles around. Besides that, though, the two had another distinction, a unique characteristic—the reputation for unbroken failure. For all Patch's wisdom and dependability, for all Dutton's devotion to the sport, they had never been known to bring in a bird. It is nothing unusual for a man to go through his first year, or even his second, without feathering a grouse; many a hunter has done that and lived to develop into a splendid shot. But Dutton had been there three times with McHenry, and as many since he became master of Patch. He went out early, he stayed late, he had the best in equipment and a good knowledge of birds and cover; but blessed if he could get on 'em, and bring 'em down!

It was uncanny, this faculty of Old Dut's for missing. "You'd think that dumb luck would give him a bird occasionally," the others used to say to one another.

"It's all in getting going," one hunter said truthfully as the group sat gossiping. "You'll miss for a long time. Then, all of a sudden, you'll get the hang of it, and your confidence will come up and you'll get your share. That's the whole thing in this game; confidence. Tell yourself that you're going to get 'em and you will. It's no game for indecision."

Patch, despite Dutton's care, grew old. He thickened in body, and became a bit stiff. He was past ten when his master came home that afternoon of the meeting with his creditors and sat down heavily and put his hands over his face a moment; then he dropped them to the chair arms listlessly.

"Well, Patch," he said, "we'll pull for Tidd's in the morning." He leaned forward and took the dog's head between his palms. Patch scrubbed the rug with his tail and licked his lips while Dutton looked deep into the dog's eyes. "No iron jaw," he muttered. "No starch, Patch. . . Somehow, I don't deliver, and everybody's so darned kind . . . so darned kind!"

EVERYONE was so kind to Dutton at Tidd's that time it made him feel like weeping—that and his sense of final failure. Tidd welcomed him as he might have greeted a beloved brother. The old gang stood around while he unpacked, and the new ones shook hands and said that they had heard of him; said it respectfully, too, and not as though they had heard that here was a man who had hunted for six seasons without pulling a feather!

Day after day Dutton and Patch tramped together; night after night the man sat in the dining-room, dog under the table at his feet, and listened to the others talk. When they told of their misses, they laughed. They could laugh at failure, because they had known successes. Dutton couldn't.

Usually he could sleep well at Tidd's, but this year it was different. He would stay out the season, until the twentieth of November. On the first of December he must give his answer to the Wycliff people, and the answer he would give would be that of a weakling. No one would blame him, not even the men who were going to lose . . . going to lose . . . lose, lose. When he did drop to sleep it was to dream of other men's losses brought about because he could not face life unafraid, as a man should.

Patch was a little stiffer each morning, and he did not work with his old speed. He was more cautious in his approach to birds, too, and made more false points than he had ever made before. Dutton, understanding him, knew that the faithful old setter wanted to stand every bird his nose located, because the time was soon coming when he would for the last time drink in that delectable odor!

A week went down; two; the third was half gone. Three more days of the season remained; two weeks before he must give his answer. The old office would be dismantled; the old factory would be renovated or perhaps abandoned; the thing his family had built would become a memory.

LONDON.

SINCE the passage of England's new divorce laws which forbid publication in the newspapers of all but purely formal details, all of London has waited to see how they would work when a really big "society" divorce went through the courts. Reformers had clamored loudly that the nobility and the smart world of Mayfair would smuggle their marital disagreements through the courts so secretly that the rest of London would not even know that a divorce had been granted.

The other day London had a chance to find out. Major the Honorable Lionel Hallam Tennyson, son and heir of the second Baron Tennyson and grandson of the first baron, the eminently distinguished and highly respectable Victorian poet, Lord Alfred Tennyson, divorced his wife.

The newspapers printed just the bare facts. Even the most sensational sheets carried scarcely more than 20 lines. They told it as follows:

MAJOR TENNYSON accused his wife of misconduct with J. M. Beck, an American. Formal evidence of the marriage was given. Neither Beck nor Mrs. Tennyson appeared to defend the suit. Their attorneys stated briefly that Mrs. Tennyson had confessed that she was passionately fond of Beck and that she was going to join him in America.

Walter Smith, janitor at a block of flats in Berkeley Square, testified that Mrs. Tennyson had frequently visited Beck's flat, visits late at night and of considerable duration. Tennyson's attorneys asked for costs against the defendant and co-respondent on the grounds that both were people of means. This was granted and Major Tennyson was given custody of the two sons of the marriage, Harold Christopher and Mark Aubrey, aged respectively eight and seven years.

And this was all they printed. No more than if Major Tennyson had been a carter, his wife a servant and the Mr. Beck another carter. In point of fact all three principals are known very widely, and all come from well known families.

The Mr. Beck to whom so veiled a reference was made is James M. Beck Jr., son of the former United States Solicitor General. Mrs. Tennyson was formerly the Honorable Clarissa Tennant, daughter of the first Lord Glenconner, and sister of the present peer, and a niece of Margot, Countess of Oxford and Asquith.

James M. Beck Jr.

Hon. Lionel Tennyson and his wife, now divorced, who is Margot Asquith's niece.

A late snapshot of Mrs. Tennyson.

Major Tennyson is a national hero. He captained England's cricket team against Australia, which means that he is Babe Ruth, Bobby Jones, Gene Tunney and the captain of the Meadow Brook polo team all rolled into one so far as the public is concerned.

IN the present case Major Tennyson was so obviously the aggrieved party and therefore entitled to public sympathy that the newspapers would have soft-pedaled the case any way, some maintain. But this viewpoint is certainly debatable. He is a sportsman of the type most admired in England and under no circumstances must mud be thrown at him, it is argued. Those who contend that this was not a fair test of the law also point to the fact that the suit was not defended by either Mrs. Tennyson or Mr. Beck, a fact which would have made the details meager even before the passage of the new law.

Mrs. Tennyson has survived one previous divorce. Her first husband, Captain William A. V. Bethell of the Life Guards, whom she married in 1915, divorced her in 1918. It is much more common here for "society" husbands to sue for divorce than it is in America. The "unwritten law" that the husband should never under any circumstances be the petitioning party doesn't seem to be effective.

The first divorce did little harm to Margot Asquith's niece from the standpoint of her social prestige and on her marriage to Lionel Tennyson shortly afterwards her position was thoroughly re-established. She is now, it is believed, in America, as is Beck.

So severe was the law against divorce publicity made that so far there have been no violations of it reported. It provides a fine of $2500 and four months' imprisonment for the editor, publisher, proprietor or master printer of any offending paper.

Reformers who opposed the law are already beginning to say, "I told you so." The recent report for the last sitting of London Judges showed a list of 731 divorces, 628 of which were undefended and 103 defended. A year ago, before the censorship law was passed, there were 709 divorce cases of which 578 were undefended.

was whipped to life by it and Dutton heard himself talking:

"Go on, boy. Hie on!"

His voice was uncertain, as a man's legs, on recovery from long illness, will be uncertain. He started to walk on but the dog, rising, only limped at heel.

"Hie on!" The words came with a new sharpness, for Dutton's breath was quickened by that strange pound of his heart. "Hear me, Patch? Go on, boy!" He waved his hand with an imperious gesture, a commanding, positive motion, the like of which he had never made before, and the dog looked at him curiously. "I said, 'Hie on!'"

The tip of Patch's tail waggled and he raised his head. Dutton, blinded to detail for the moment by the rampant emotions in his breast, did not realize what was happening. He saw only disobedience in the face of his new resolution. He snapped his command again, and started forward.

Then he checked himself. The black, moist nose was working. The nostrils quirked and expanded and twitched. The tail was waggling. Patch's ears came up and he started slowly forward. He went tentatively, then with tensing assurance; the motion of his tail dwindled to a vibration of its tip; he stopped and froze.

They were at the head of a thick swamp. Down in the hollow, clover grew among the stumps. Patch had caught the body scent of a feeding bird; his animosity for his master had disappeared before this call to instinct. He was pointing . . . still pointing after being betrayed, after being imposed upon for years!

A great sense of responsibility settled over Dutton, and unconsciously he braced his shoulders, and lifted his gun half way to position, releasing the safety catch. He went on past his stanchly pointing dog boldly, quickly, with strong, sure steps, ready for the——

In a mad thunder of wings the bird roared out of the brush. He whirled toward the open, cutting a sharp circle, rushing away from Dutton and swinging back for the near covert. It was a short, sharp, twisting flight. It was seconds only from sanctuary. It was a hard shot, a shot which had the upward, the outward, and the lateral angle. A man could misjudge in at least six different ways; that is, a man could who would let himself misjudge.

DUTTON'S cheek went against the cool stock with a slam. Both eyes open, feet stanchly spread, hand squeezing the grip, he stood. The bird flashed over the sight. The bit of polished metal swung with the blur of wings. It did not waver, it did not falter. It opened a space, it kept on swinging . . . under Heaven he would!

The powder crashed. Patch dropped. For an instant there was silence, and then, from his streaking, competent, living flight, the grouse made a wilting pitch and struck with a bounce and a swish and a flutter in the dry bracken.

Dutton's voice, trembling a bit, but restrained and deliberate, followed:

"Fetch, Patch. Dead bird!"

Minutes later they sat there, the man on a charred log, the dog on his haunches before him. Patch's tail scrubbed among the dead leaves, making a pleasant rustle. His ears were drooped backward, not meekly, but with becoming modesty as he sat in patient waiting with the plump, warm body in his mouth.

The sharp, hot thrill in Dutton's heart did not expire. It was still in his flesh, still in his singing heart. He saw in Patch's eyes a light that he had never beheld before—of satisfaction in a job done, of reward for patience and persistence, and the dog stirred, whimpering lowly with joy as he gently rolled his tongue on the feathers in his mouth!

When Dutton spoke it was quite casually. "Give," he said. The dog's jaws opened, the bird rolled into the man's palm. He stared at it a moment with a faint, whimsical smile and then slipped it into his game pocket. He stroked Patch's head, and then took it between his hands.

"Darn it, Patch," he said with a hard, jerky little laugh of surprise. "It's easy when you make up your mind you've got to do something! . . . But, gosh, for years everybody I know's expected me to fall down. And when I've come down to their expectations, they've all been so darned kind and sorry for me. And they didn't know, and I didn't know, what I needed. But you did, old-timer. You gave it to me, you bet!

"There's darned little difference between falling down on birds and on business or anything else, Patch."

He drew a deep breath and flexed one arm. "And blamed little difference between makin' up your mind to drop a bird, and do something else that's hard."

He looked closely into the setter's eyes and leaned suddenly lower, startled by something he saw there. His image was very small on the retina, but it was exact, of course, and the angle of the sunlight revealed it clearly. By jing, he had! Why, darn it, the Youngest Creditor even would have called a chin set like that—sure as the dickens, he'd have said it was just that, an iron jaw!

IT was the first of December. The creditors were gathered in Dutton's office, waiting for him. The door opened and Dutton, still wind-tanned from his hunting trip, came briskly into the room.

"Gentlemen!"

His bow was abrupt, assured. His inclusive gesture was almost confident, it seemed. The look in his eyes was not mild, not meek.

"Afraid I might keep you waiting," he said, as he dropped his leather portfolio to the table about which they sat. "Didn't want to do that; but there's a lot to look after at the other plant."

"Other plant?" asked the Largest Creditor. "The tannery, you mean?"

"Oh, no, the Wycliff plant. I've been so darned busy with their inventory that——"

The Youngest Creditor interrupted him with a noise like a hiccough:

"You mean, you've been——?"

Dutton nodded sharply.

"You left this thing with me, gentlemen; I was not to give you my answer until today. I got back on the job the twenty-second, and I saw no use in delaying, so I closed with the Wycliff people. The papers were signed the twenty-seventh, subject only to their inventory."

The Oldest Creditor leaned slowly nearer the table in a sort of thick silence.

"Mr. Dutton," he began, "let us get this straight: You've bought Wycliff? You've arranged the refinancing program that we agreed was essential?"

"I have."

The Youngest Creditor jerked his chair sharply forward.

"Dutton! You mean you swung the Old Fort National over behind you? You sold yourself and this consolidation to them?"

Dutton nodded, and his mouth jerked.

"How, in the name of the incredible, did you put that across?"

AND then Dutton commenced to tell them. He spoke modestly, simply, and with brevity, as though the thing he had accomplished were a detail, an achievement which any man might chalk up on the credit side of his life's books any day in his business experience. They listened silently, but they watched his face intently, for in his eyes was a faraway look, a composure, a peace that they thought they could understand. And he concluded with this:

"A hard job? Maybe it was. But I wanted to do it very much, gentlemen." He paused, and then added quietly, "I have found that when one is made to want to do a thing badly enough, things seldom are too hard to do."

His gaze went back to them, and he nodded and straightened. Years seemed to have slipped from him; he was again a man in his middle thirties with experiences behind him and the best of his life beyond. He was breathing a trifle rapidly, but there was a fine, steady light in his eye and a set to his chin that made the Youngest Creditor wilt back in his chair with a grin and the Oldest Creditor swing about to look through a window as if, perhaps, he was remembering his own young manhood and those big moments when he believed so firmly in himself that he feared nothing, no man, no battle, no circumstance.

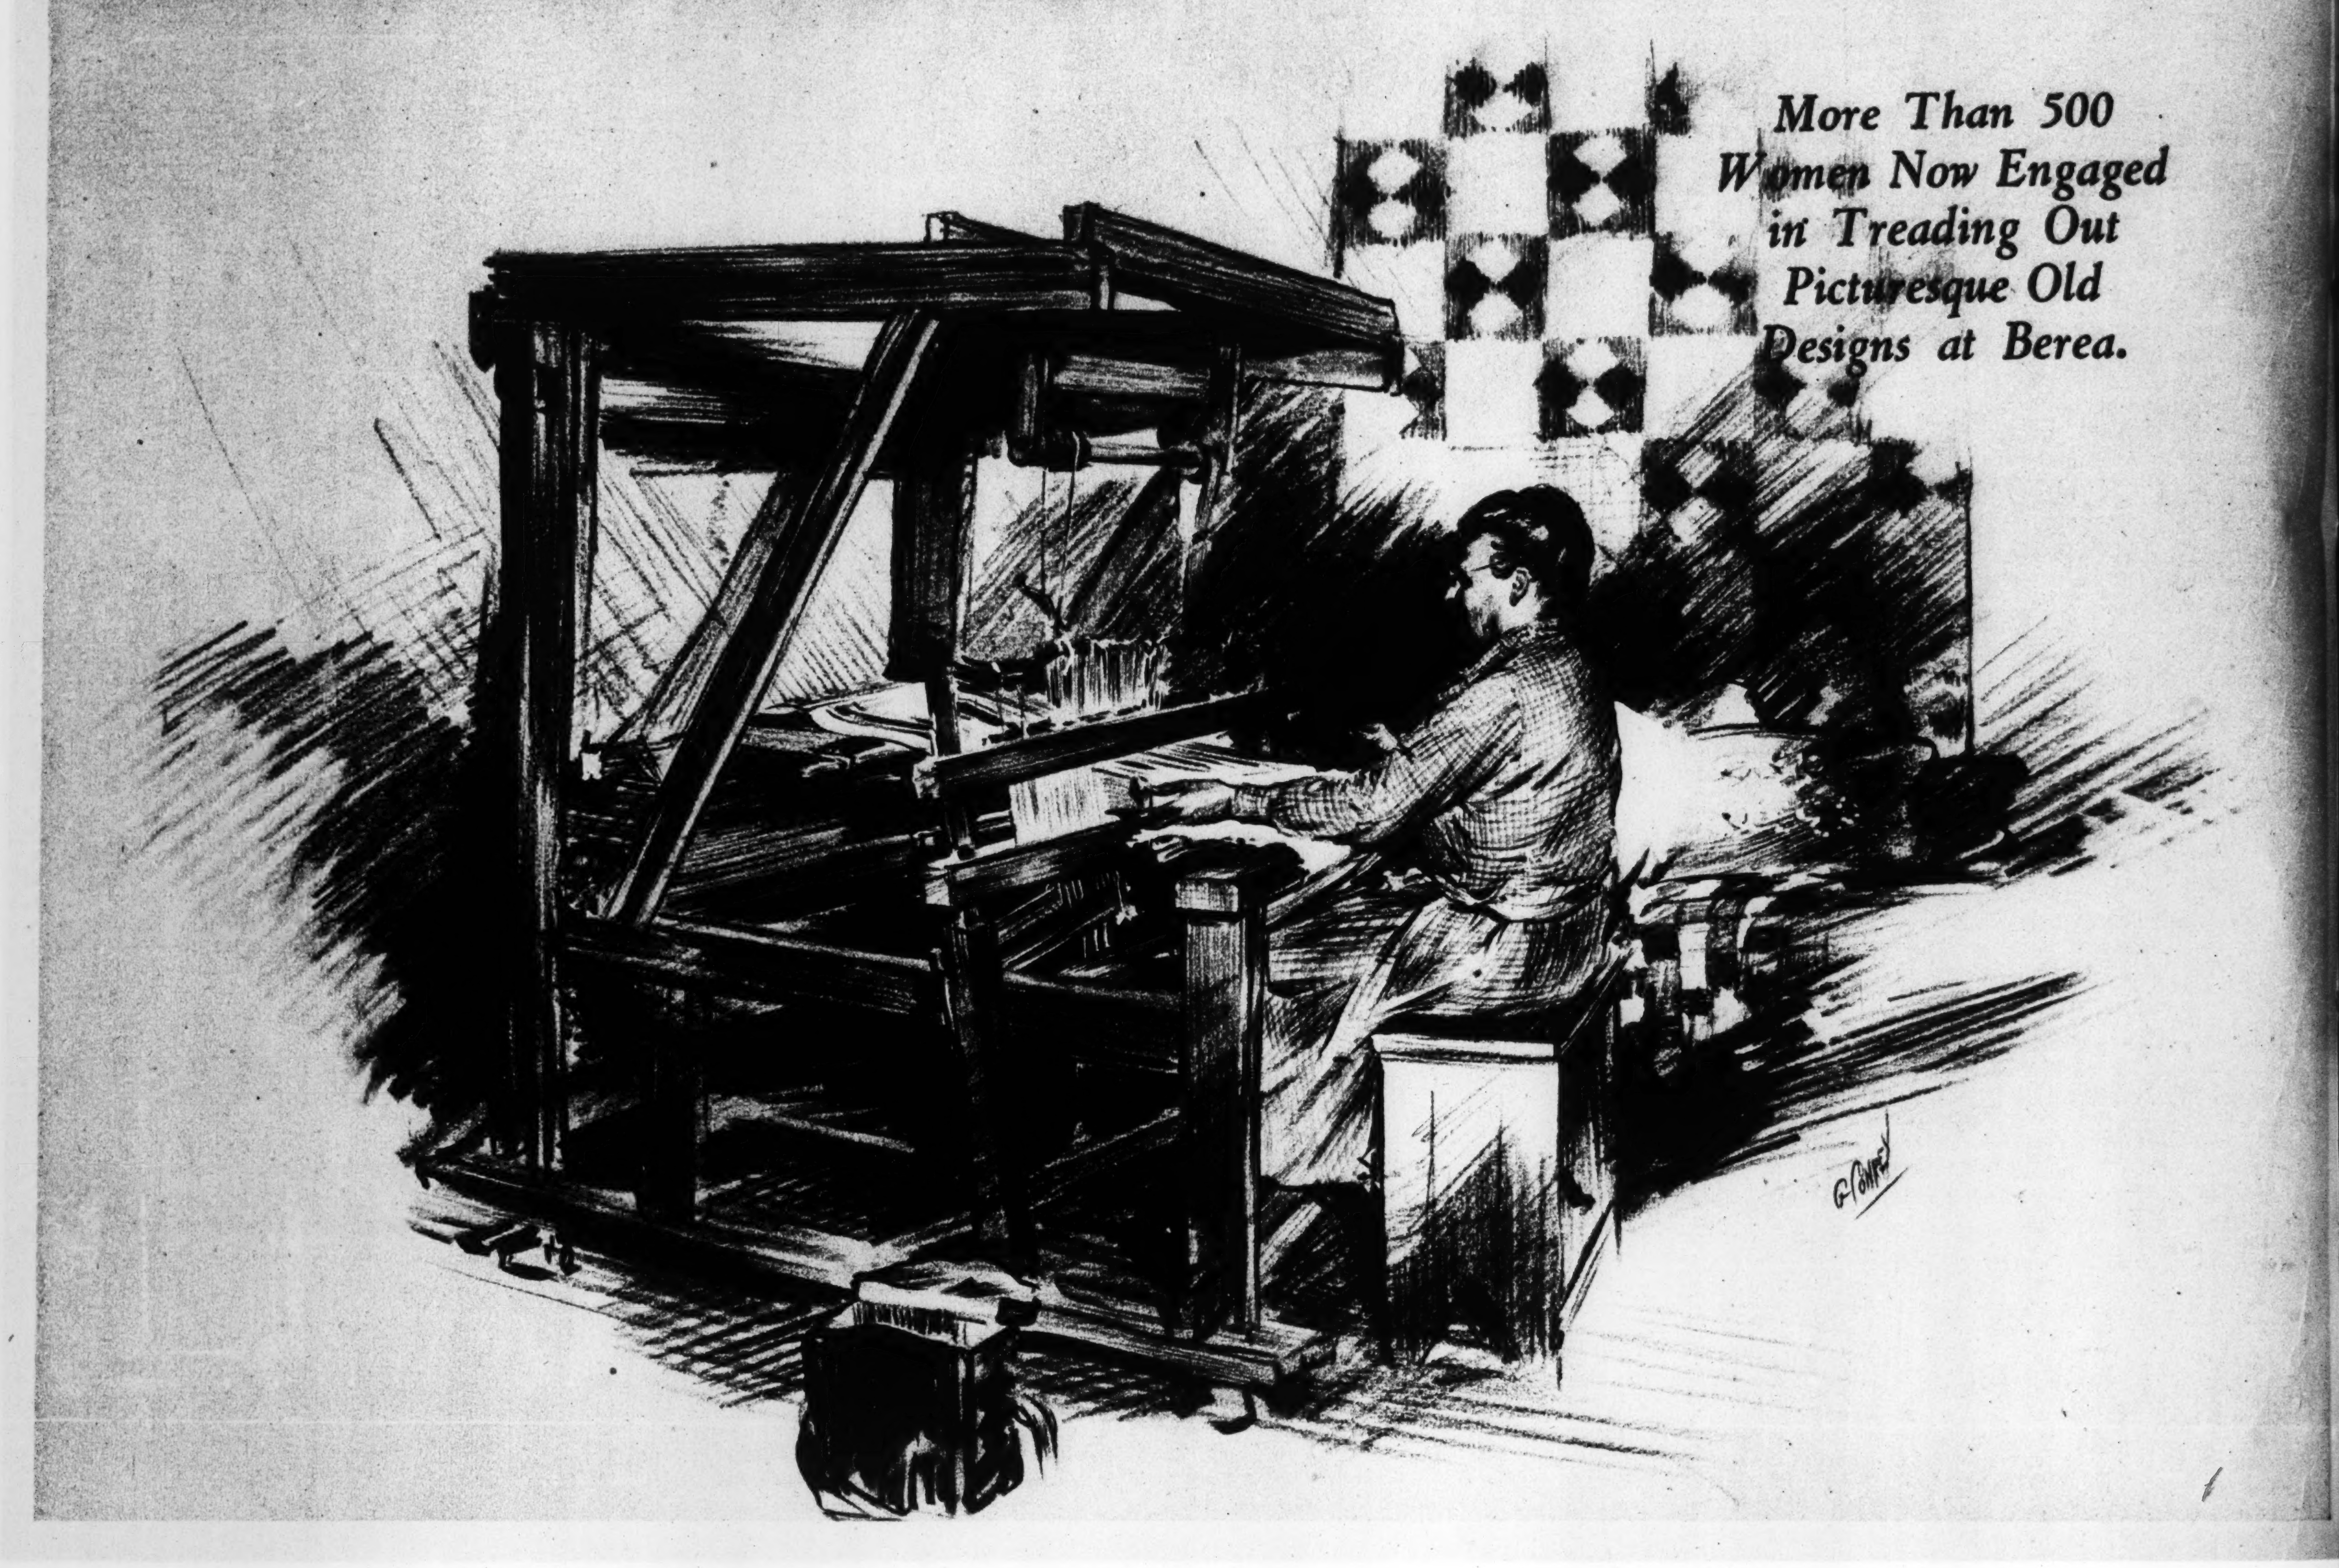
Hand-Loom Weaving Revived in Kentucky

More Than 500 Women Now Engaged in Treading Out Picturesque Old Designs at Berea.



Mrs. Mollie Lewis at her loom.

The drawings on this page were made from photographs.

BEREA, Kentucky.

TO THE clacking song of hundreds of looms the mountain women of Kentucky are reviving an ancient handicraft. From the backs of the sheep they are taking the wool and they are converting it into finely fashioned fabrics, delicately colored and designed with dyes of their own making.

So rapidly has this handicraft revival spread that it is estimated that there are now more than 500 women treading out old patterns, long forgotten weaves, and traditional designs passed down from generation to generation. They work in their own homes for the most part, tramping over the hills when their work is finished to dispose of it here.

And so rapidly has the word of their fine weaves spread that the mountain women are unable to keep up with a constant flow of orders coming from all parts of the United States—from individuals, department stores, clubs, societies and interior decorators, who find the blankets, scarfs, shawls, rugs and linen furnishings woven by the Kentucky women ideal in recreated early American settings.

Berea College, where mountain parentage, little or no money and an earnest desire for knowledge are virtually the only requisites for entrance, is largely responsible for the rapid spread of the revival. By means of their looms many of Berea's co-eds earn all their school funds.

HAND weaving never entirely disappeared from the mountains. A few of the older women—"Aunt Mollie" Lewis, Mrs. Mary A. Anderson and others—have never deserted their looms. They have scorned the store cloth that their grown-up daughters brought home, scorned it and continued to tread out their ancient weaves.

These older women are now leaders in the movement to revive a handicraft product, superior as is any work skilfully and faithfully done by hand to the machine-made imitation. They are now "Doctors of Weaving" in Berea College. Their minute knowledge of the craft is being spread far and wide among the mountain women, young and old.

"I have been steadily employed at weaving for 35 years," Mrs. Anderson says. "I do my own dyeing, create my own designs and make any kind of cloth or color desired. I had little chance to get any schooling in my girlhood days because I was put to work at 12 years of age, making suits of clothes for my eight brothers—a new one each year. And I made nearly all the bed clothes and household goods, such as sheets, blankets, towels, curtains and anything we wanted that could be made with cloth, even knit woolen galluses for the men folks.

"WE RAISED our own sheep and I handled the wool clip from the time it came from the sheep's back until it was turned into whatever use it was wanted for. By experimenting and practice I learned to get all sorts of dye colors from the tree and root bark of walnut trees, from the juice of the walnut itself, from the green leaves, from madder root found in the hills, from butternut bark, hickory bark, apple tree bark, dry broom sedge, black oak, peach tree leaves and a half a dozen other plants and vegetables. There is no end to the variety of color blends to be gotten out of vegetable growth.

"Berea College started to make weaving a part of its school work some years ago, and they asked me to help in the teaching for a while, which I did, but I have been making my living at this work for 35 years, though I've been at it on and off all my life."

Hanging on the walls of Mrs. Anderson's home in Berea are innumerable blue and red ribbons, first and second prize awards for hand-made fabrics which she has won during the last 15 years or so at the arts exhibit at the Blue Grass Fair, held each year in Lexington. There is a conspicuous absence of ribbons for the years 1925 and 1926.

"They kinda shut down on me a few years ago," Mrs. Anderson says in explanation of this. "I reckon they don't want me to exhibit quite so often."

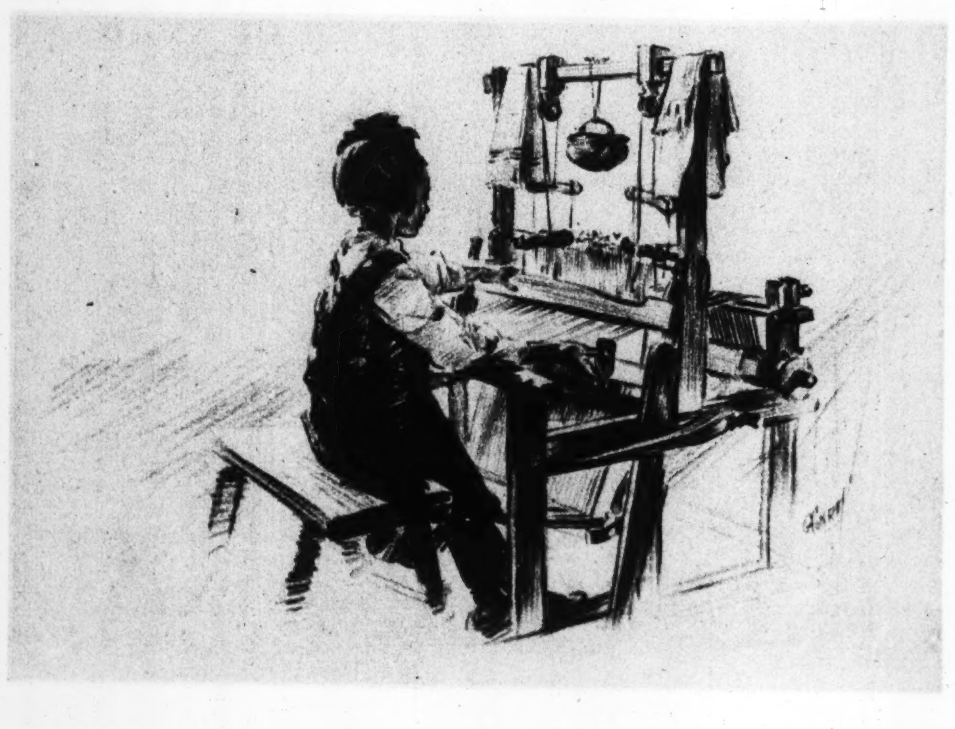
The managers of the Blue Grass Fair Association want to give some of the women who are just beginning to acquire skill at weaving a chance in the competition. So long has Mrs. Anderson practised her art that the quality of her fabrics approaches perfection. She exhibited some of her work recently at the International Women's Handicraft Arts Exhibition in Boston, where it won high praise. No one disputes her title of dean of the weavers.

The story of "Aunt Mollie" Lewis is similar. "Aunt Mollie," who lives at the foot of a mountain near Berea, works on a loom which is a hundred years old and she refuses to change to a more modern one. It is more bulky than the modern looms.

"AUNT MOLLIE" and 34 other women work for Mrs. F. E. Matheny under a system that is very much like that of the medieval craft guild. Many work in their own homes while others operate looms in Mrs. Matheny's home. She markets their product for them, buys the looms and permits the women to purchase them from her on an installment basis. But she gives them free rein in matters of design and color.

ON HER ancient hand-loom "Aunt Mollie" has produced some of the finest and most delicate of fabrics, according to Mrs. Matheny. Despite its apparent crudity, the most subtle patterns can be worked out on this old machine. "Aunt Mollie's" deft fingers ply back and forth ceaselessly. She sings as she works, a song older than her loom. Much older, for it was brought over by those first men who came out of England to the hill country.

"It was my idea," Mrs. Matheny says in explanation of her share in the new industry, "to find work for these women that they could do in their homes. The fine arts of spinning, dyeing and weaving were already known and understood by many of the older women, and the younger ones were easily taught the rudiments. We have some wonderful work here, work that cannot be surpassed or equaled by the best factories in the United States.



This little girl has already made enough to pay for a year's schooling at Berea College.

"We use almost exclusively vegetable dyes and the dyeing takes practice and experience. It is a fine art in itself. For that reason we do practically all the dyeing here at the central plant. We found that the time that skeins of wool, combination silk, cotton and linen are allowed to stay in the dye solution affects the coloring. So do light, heat and the temperature of the air itself have an effect. For the beginners we make the patterns and designs, but we leave the majority of original creations, which are in constant demand, to the skill and judgment of the older women.

"BESIDES seven primary colors and a dozen secondary shades, we usually get nine blends of blue, eight of red, seven of green and any number of delicate tints from madder root, walnut, hickory, apple, peach and other trees, plants and vegetables. No two things we do are ever exactly alike. We try to have a different design in the weave of each piece as well as a difference in the combinations of color and figures."

Among the things produced by the weavers of Berea and the mountains roundabout are coverlets in 50 patterns—old Colonial designs, counterpanes of cotton, mercerized and linen cloth, tablecloths of linen, luncheon sets, window curtains, rugs of cotton and wool, dress goods and suitings of woolen, linen and linsey cloth, shawls and scarfs of wool, towels, dresser covers and table covers, cushions and handbags.

"While we have demands for more than we can produce," Mrs. Matheny continued, "we are holding back because we want to keep up the standard of quality we originally set out to maintain. We cannot make these works of art—and they really are just that—in sufficient quantity to furnish to department stores, wholesale dealers and the like, and have frequently refused to make such contracts.

"The majority of designs used are patterned after individual family creations that have been followed in respective families for more than a hundred years. We have the Kirby blanket, the Tennessee sunflower coverlet, the Big Hill squares, the Whittaker panel cur and the like, many of them uniq Once in a while we make a spider w top bed coverlet of delicate and in cate weave, of wonderful beauty, w its softly tinted colors, such as w woven in the South before the Ci War for wealthy aristocrats upon gr occasions. But most of the articles a useful rather than purely ornament

"The development of hand-loo weaving in the homes of this neighbo hood has been wonderful within th last five or six years and will increa as the public gets better acquain with the superiority of hand-ma fabrics in both beauty and servi Several of the weavers have sa enough to purchase the homes which they and their families ha lived—often homes which they h lived in for generations.

"WE CANNOT keep up w the demands upon us, more and more women get into hand weaving in other parts the State and they are doing There are expert weavers in ev mountain county in Kentucky and through the Southern states who readily teach the younger generat the intricacies of the craft."

The joyous sparkle of a rare old wine

HAPPILY and quickly go the evening hours when your entertaining drink is "Canada Dry."

To every glass and to every occasion it brings something of the joyous sparkle of a rare old wine . . . and a certain proud distinction, too, that you will find in no other ginger ale.

Served alone, or with other beverages, it is a delightful treat at dinner, for your weekly bridge game, for the birthday party or the dance.

Here is Ida Bailey Allen's favorite recipe for punch—a most worthy addition to your cook book:

Continental Punch

Combine one quart of grape juice and a pint of orange juice with half-cup of sugar and a third-cup of lemon juice. Just before serving, add two quarts of crushed ice and four bottles of "Canada Dry." Mix. Garnish with eight sprigs of fresh mint. This recipe makes 36 to 40 glasses.

FOR BOYS AND GIRLS, BY

ENDICOTT-JOHNSON

Snappy blucher pattern Oxfords for boys. Genuine welt construction. Tan; also in black.

Tan grain Oxfords with contrasting blond grain trimming. A smart-looking welt blucher for growing girls.

TWENTY-FIVE million precious pairs of feet heading schoolward. And most of them guided by youthful minds that care more and more about appearance in the shoes they wear. Parents certainly have their work cut out for them! Endicott-Johnson designers can help you.

So captivating are the patterns and colorful autumn shades in Endicott-Johnson shoes. So pleasing are the novel perforations, stitchings and trims. So comfortable are the soft, strong leathers—specially tanned for hard service. So carefully are the lasts designed—to assure the proper shaping of growing feet. . . . And so reasonable are the prices, that you may wonder, perhaps, how so much wear-value and appearance-value can be combined in shoes like these.

It is principally because we tan our own leather—make practically everything ourselves that goes into the fifteen million pairs of boys' and girls' shoes we manufacture yearly. This naturally brings the cost down. Your pocketbook is the gainer.

Leading stores in most every community have these long-wearing, stylish, honestly made shoes. If you can't locate them nearby, write direct to Endicott-Johnson, Endicott, N. Y.; New York City; or St. Louis, Mo.—Largest manufacturers of boys' and girls' shoes in the world.

Come When Dull Film is Removed from Teeth
The new way dentists advise—special film-removing dentifrice for brightening teeth and combating tooth and gum disorders

Send for 10-Day Free Tube

"F your teeth seem 'off color' and lustreless — 'Look For Film,'" is the modern dentist's slogan. "If you find yourself unusually susceptible to tooth and gum troubles—'Watch Constantly for Film and Remove It At Least Twice Daily.'"

Film is a viscous, slippery coating that you can feel by running your tongue across your teeth. Film too stubborn for ordinary brushing to remove successfully.

This film absorbs stains from food and smoking. And thus discolors and dulls teeth. It clings to teeth and stays. It forms a natural breeding place for the bacteria of decay, gum troubles and pyorrhea. One can't have sparkling teeth, one can't have properly protected teeth and gums unless film is removed at least TWICE daily

Thus thousands are adopting the Special Film-Removing Dentifrice called Pepsodent. A tooth paste, based on highest scientific findings, that is different from all others.

Pepsodent first overcomes the failure of old-time dentifrices in adequately removing film. Then it acts to firm and harden the gums; providing for this purpose the most recent discoveries of science in gum protection. Then it acts to neutralize the acids of decay. And thus meets, in all ways, the exactments of dental thought.

Mail Coupon

Pepsodent gives teeth high polish and lustre as dingy film coats go. It cleanses teeth, and no old-time brushing ever did. It offers the utmost in protection against decay and gum troubles. Send the coupon for 10-day tube.

FAMOUS FEET

MARY MULHERN'S Famous Feet

Always the safest and gentlest way to end a corn, Blue-jay for 1927 offers new refinements. A creamy-white pad instead of a blue one. A more flexible disc for the awkwardly placed corn. And a sprightly new package! . . . One plaster usually ends the corn. But even the rugged "old-timer" seldom needs more than two . . The new Blue-jay costs no more . . . At all drug stores. For calluses and bunions use Blue-jay Bunion and Callus Plasters.

"According to the magazine ads, one may have a personal blemish and still not know it." So writes Mary Mulhern, lovely Follies beauty and famous dancer . . . "But this isn't true of corns. When you get a corn, your foot promptly notifies you. And when you get the 'telegram,' put in a call for Blue-jay."
